World's tennis champion from 1885 to 1889, Tom Pettit, one of the earliest court stars, is now in charge of the Newport, R. I. casino courts. He is 73, but still plays a good game.

THE BIG SIX

The sensational climb of Rupert (Tommy) Thompson, Albany outfielder, featured the week-end's activities in the International big six. Founding out nine hits in thirteen times up in three games, Thompson boosted his average to .372 and today is right behind Ike Boone, Toronto, in the fight for first place. The batting leaders:

Spying on Sports

LAST PLACE is Death Valley by the major leagues this year.

Bill Killefer's St. Louis Browns fell into the dreaded eighth position early in the race, made a feeble struggle to climb out, fell back and then virtually sank from view.

Down swept the ax and Allan Sothoron is temporary manager of the Browns. Killefer, out of a job, is most mentioned as the probable successor of Marty McManus, Boston Red Sox pilot.

The Red Sox, despite important additions of talent to the staff, have been the only serious contenders the Browns have had for the doubtful honor of riding the caboose of the American league.

That McManus is in his last year as Red Sox pilot is virtually a certainty. Last place—Death Valley!

IN THE NATIONAL league where a better pennant battle is taking place the most doleful sight is the manner in which the Brooklyn Dodgers have failed to get out of their slump.

The current road trip has found their most disastrous of the season. When they reached Cincinnati last stop before going home, the Dodgers had dropped nine out of 13 road games—that's .250 ball.

As this is written the Dodgers have slipped within a few points of the last place Reds who are making a desperate effort to trade places with them.

Meanwhile there are increasing rumors that Max Carey, Brooklyn pilot, is about through as their boss. Brooklyn, before the season began was regarded as having a pennant chance. Today they are fighting to stay out of last place and Carey is expected by many to lose his job.

Last place—Death Valley!

x x x

BROOKLYN'S failure to win more games than the team has is almost as surprising as the remarkable pennant bid of the New York Giants.

Carey made many changes, many of which at first appeared for the better, after succeeding Uncle Wilbert Robinson as pilot. Last year the Dodgers hit well and fine maintained a respectable place in the league despite mound weakness.

This year batting has fallen off to a whisper. The brand of pitching is no better. And there have been too many times when the fielding was little short of terrible.

Max Carey was to give the Dodgers a more serious minded club, a change from the jolly, carefree group which made Brooklyn games so lively under Robinson. This is exactly what Carey did—but Brooklyn isn't playing anywhere close to the brand of baseball Flatbush fans viewed when Uncle Wilbert was the boss.

And fans want, first of all, victories—plenty of them. That's why they are yelling for Carey's scalp.

BETWEEN INNINGS

HEARD IN THE PRESS BOX.

THAT THE Brooklyn Dodgers made a big bid for their former star Fallen Leaves, Babe Herman, in Chicago recently, but that President Bill Veeck of the Cubs said "No".

x x x

That, after that, Max Carey went to Pittsburgh and tried to get either Adam Comorosky or Forrest Jensen and again was turned down.

x x x

That Mel Harder of Cleveland deserves much applause for taking his regular turn on the mound despite a broken thumb on his glove hand.

x x x

That the St. Louis Cardinals also should get a hand for their candor before the season opened when they advertised: "We believe we can arrange a double-headers for every Sunday during the coming season."

x x x

That Joe McCarthy sold George Pipgras to the Boston Red Sox because he just couldn't scalp the Cleveland Indians.

x x x

That "hits" and "errors" should be flashed on the scoreboards at all major league parks.

x x x

That, as events now have proved, Bill Terry made a smart move when he turned down Brooklyn's offer for Dazzy Vance for Sam Leslie.

x x x

That the Cleveland Indians made eleventh-hour overtures for Goose Goslin, Sam West and Earl Combs before the deadline on player deals.

x x x

That the Chicago White Sox wanted Willis Hudlin of Cleveland but couldn't spare the outfielder Billy Evans demanded.

x x x

That Lefty Gomez may rate as one of the luckiest pitchers in the majors this year. Everything has been knocked out of the box repeatedly but the Yankee sluggers always rally to give him a victory or save him from defeat.

"Either you get out of my room or I'll scream so that it can be heard through seven soundproof walls," Jerry said. "You are utterly repulsive to me, and besides I want to go to sleep."

"Outside of that I suppose you would like to have me around," Joe said.

"I told you that I would give you your answer Monday at noon. I won't give you any sort of answer on any score until that time.

bargain is a bargain."

"You and Peter will answer all three of my demands at breakfast in the morning," Joe said. "That is the one chance you have to leave this place alive."

"Leave my room," Jerry said.

"I'll go," Joe said, "but first I want a kiss."

"Don't touch me," Jerry said with eyes detestable."

Joe drew back, glaring.

"There is still one possibility that even I have not exploited," Joe said coldly, and there was no hastening humor in his voice now. "Peter Baird lies sleeping quietly not fifty feet from here. I could if I wished,—"

"You wouldn't," Jerry cried. "You wouldn't harm a sleeping man! A man sleeping under your own roof."

"A man who could come between me and the girl I wanted? Yes, I could do anything to that man.

"But you don't understand," Jerry said earnestly. "He has in love with me at all or I with him.... We're just friends if you know the meaning of that word."

"Oh, you're just friends. Then it won't matter so much if we.... I just let him go on sleeping for the rest of eternity."

"Joe Middleton! Sometimes I feel that if I could only get my hands around your throat I could shake you to death the way a terrier shakes a rat.... I'll hat you till the day I die."

"Good," Joe said. "The more violently you hate me, the easier it will be for me to give Peter Baird exactly what he deserves.... Come to think of it, this is the luck I should have been taking all the way along. I'll even make that a formal threat. Either you move into my house on the north shore or else...."

"Or else what...?" Jerry asked.

Jerry Slapped Joe Middleton with all the strength in her..... arm.

She found that she was trembling in the cold, dimly moonlit room.

"Or else Peter Baird will go on sleeping until judgment day....."

"How can you be so cruel," Jerry cried. "You can do deceitful, and so underhanded and unjust and wicked?

"Joe, I want to tell you more things. There have been moments when I have thought I could learn to love you. Yes, there were moments during that trip on the yacht, and again that night after you had shown me the house and we were to dance at that roadhouse. But you were so different on those nights!

"You wouldn't even be helping your own cause if you were to harm Peter. You would be making me your bitter enemy for ever and ever. If you want to keep even a little part of that friendship....."

"And I do want to keep it," Joe said in an almost broken voice.

"Then if you want to keep part of that friendship," Jerry said, "tell me that touching Peter Baird while he sleeps there is beneath even you."

"Jerry, I wouldn't touch him," Joe said, and Jerry realized that Joe was telling the truth. "It's just—Jerry, there are things that I would not do. Never will I strike for the throat of your children, Jerry. And do not worry about you, Peter. I have no fear that while he was asleep and defenseless, and under my roof—"

The first light of dawn was coming in at the windows and the first bird cries arose faintly from the woods. And Joe Middleton, pirate, man, adventurer, captain of industry and the Tiger of the underworld sat on the edge of the girl's bed, crying.

"I could not harm you either, Jerry. Go to sleep now, and left."

He got up quickly and left the room.

CHAPTER 17

At breakfast the next morning Joe was his old, impeccably smooth self again.

"Did you sleep well?" he asked.

"Never better," Peter said. "It's great what these long conversations will do toward making a man go to sleep."

"I've been for a little gallop along the bridle path," Joe said: "in fact I have been up since dawn. And now are you ready to give me your answer?

"Your answer to what?" Jerry asked, remembering her talk with Joe during the night.

"What was the proposition I made you both last evening."

"Oh, that," Peter said.

Jerry looked at Joe in open-mouthed amazement. Was he dreaming or had she misunderstood him? Hadn't he promised her that they were safe while they were under his roof? But who could ever predict the caprices of Joe Middleton? He was like this poem by Edna Millay, which she came to Jerry's mind:

And if I loved you Wednesday,
Well, what is that to you?
I do not love you Thursday...
So much is true.

And why you come complaining
Is more than I can see.
I loved you Wednesday—yes—but what
Is that to me?

Yes, Joe Middleton was as fickle and as undependable as the "I" running through Edna Millay's numerous thin volumes. Just before dawn he was sitting on the edge of her bed crying. Now, looking a trifle old and tired, and cynical, he was decrying he had ever weakened from his first cruel purpose.

"You haven't forgotten, have you?" Joe asked, biting his eyebrows while his coffee cup hesitated halfway to his thin lips, poised in slender, nervless fingers. "You haven't forgotten the terms, I presume?

"We haven't forgotten anything," Peter said.

"Of course there can be but one answer," Joe said. "I know you are both willing to forget my past, and Peter will leave Chicago quietly and that you, Jerry, will move into the home I have built for you tomorrow —because if, you don't agree...."

He pointed out of the window of the pleasant dining room into the flagstone courtyard where, at a dozen swarthy-faced men were sitting against a sunny wall with their left fists pulled well down over their eyes.

"You're the world's most infamous liar," Jerry stormed. "It doesn't matter what you promised, ten minutes later you have broken that promise. What did you tell me last night after you had broken into my room? What did you say about the fact that while we were under your roof....?

"So you broke into Jerry's room!" Peter said rising from the table and thrusting down his napkin. "This has ceased to be funny. I'll break you like a....

He took three quick steps and planted a stinging blow on the side of Joe's jaw. Joe stepped back, smiling evily. He pressed a button and the eye of gunmen appeared into action. Men appeared from everywhere.

"Damn you and your rat army," Peter said. "You haven't the guts to fight this out man to man.

"So you think I haven't," Joe sneered. "I'll make you a sporting proposition. I'll leave every one of these men here in the courtyard and fight you with pistols, rapiers, fists or any other weapons you may choose in that clearing down by the lake front."

"And I'll take you up on that proposition so quick it will take your breath away," Peter said. "The weapons I choose are fists.

"You, my dear, are a dozen years younger than I am. You said, 'Put I think Jerry will tell you that I am still in pretty good condition.'

"We'll done enough talking, Peter said. "Tell your gentlemen to wait in the courtyard and come on.... Jerry, you'll be safer here and don't seconds in this fight."

"And everything is over short of murder," Jerry said.

"That's the spirit, Jerry," Joe Middleton said, and as they hurried across the velvet lawn toward the clearing Jerry saw the yacht in the roadhouse. "We aren't planning a scrapping contest, Jerry."

"I hate fights," Jerry said, panting as she tried to keep up with Peter. "I think they are brutal and degrading and bestial. But you are so brutal, Joe, and bestial, and there is only one way to teach you your lesson."

The ring was a circle of smooth turf perhaps fifty feet in diameter and surrounded our three sides and part of the fourth by a dense growth of trees. The fourth side was partly lake front where heavy willows grew down to the water's edge of stone boathouse and pier at which the yacht Jerry-o-Rose lay.

There seemed no danger of interruption here as the two, stripped to the waist, squared away for the fight.

Jerry found herself to be trembling uncontrollably with excitement and anticipation. She prayed that Peter would be victorious as Hercules and would turn out to be a combination of Sharkey, Dempsey and a couple of Jujitsu experts.

They were a husky pair, however, and Jerry, although she was with Peter to the last breath, could not be certain as they waded into the first engagement which would win. Peter was the younger and the more ruggedly proportioned, but he was a trifle lighter. Joe, who had just been through a battle with the jungle which should have killed a weaker man and had taken his toll from him.

Joe, though older, and looking a bit dissipated, was still an agile giant with huge muscles that rippled as he feinted, side-stepped and lunged. He was brown but not so brown as Peter, who was the brown image of a young Greek god.

Joe stepped in with the sharp snappy uppercuts Jerry had seen him use effectively on Tony Antenti. Peter crouched like a tackler on the Notre Dame line, sized waiting to leap.

He dug his toes into the sod and plunged forward like a steam locomotive in a hurry. Both members struck Joe squarely in the solar plexus with his head, and caught the older man in a bear hug that was like a vise.

Joe went over backward, but managed to secure a straight hold of the burly Strangler Lewis made famous. He tightened this torture hold upon Peter's neck and they rolled over and over, a tangled, struggling mass of flesh and muscle.

They were on their feet again, and in contact, Peter had landed a terrific blow to Joe's jaw, but Joe backward over his shoulder.

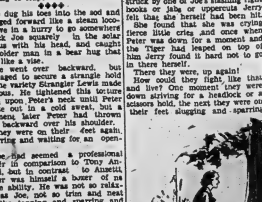
Jerry watching for an opening.

Joe had seemed a professional boxer in comparison to Tony Antenti, and in contrast to Amarillo Peter was himself a boxer of no mean ability. He was not so reliant as Joe, not so iron and neat in the tapping and sparring and feinting, but he was tremendously powerful and one of his blows left red ruin along the side of Joe's face.

The fight was in Peter's grasp, almost, landing him at times in close fight on this huge prize ring. And Peter was the younger and the more ruggedly proportioned, but he was a trifle lighter. Perhaps he had just been through a battle with the jungle which should have killed a weaker man and had taken his toll from him.

Sometimes Jerry shout her eyes the fight was so ferocious. But then her courage would come back and her hatred for oJe would return and she would remember that he had threatened her children.

Jerry herself would have fought for the children. She felt, in fact, that she was fighting.



Her eyes gleamed with the light of battle, and her hair and dress were in disarray.

Every time Joe was hit she exulted and every time Peter was struck by one of Joe's slashing right hooks or jabs or uppercuts Jerry felt that she herself had been hit.

She found that she was crying vicious little cries, and once when Peter was down for a moment and the Tiger had leaped on top of him Jerry found it hard not to go in there herself.

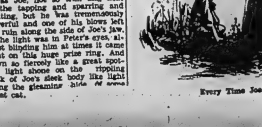
There they were, up again!

How could they fight, like this and live? One moment they were down striving for a headlock or a scissors hold, the next they were on their feet slugging and sparring.

Every Time Joe Was Hit She Exulted

Tarzan jumped to his feet just as the band of apes "Kill the Tarmangani" shrieked Tuyat. "He comes swung into the clearing. Tuyat, the kind, led them, to make dead our shes and balus." "It is Tarzan of growling menacingly, "Tarmangani!" he cried, leap- the Apes," growled M'wahi, "our friend. When I was struck the ground savagely with his clenched fists. a little bali, he saved me from Numa," Several bulls again and again, ed himself at the ape-man's side. Tarzan knew them Tarzan knew he was working himself into a pitch well. Sooner or later, one of them would excite him of rage, hoping it would arouse the savage spirit of enough to start a pitch of frenzy that he would suddenly his fellows. leap upon him.

The Tiger could scarcely cut the tough brown hide of Peter's face, but Joe's skin was more tender. He was looking ghastly.



And then, suddenly, Jerry was very sick of it all. She wanted the fight to stop and she wanted to get away. She was not a little panther any more, just a frightened girl. She found that she was crying.

She looked away at the flaming autumn weeds and the blue lake and the clear sky and wondered why men ever got such brutes and why in a beautiful spot like this a man and a girl should have to fight an insatiable beast like a Joe to have their very lives.

A ruby-throated hummingbird, which should have gone south weeks before, alighted not fifteen feet away from where Jerry was sitting and preened its feathers with its long bill made for extracting the honey from the deepest flowers.

Then it would be a free for all fight from which not all would emerge alive. Tarzan of the Apes did not hesitate a trifle long for, looking for insects. Soon the others lost interest and either foraged for food or sunbathed in the grass. Tuyat himself at length forgot his anger, and so Tarzan ragged again with the calming their fears and briefly relating the story of his boyhood among the apes of Kerchak. His tone was one of quiet authority and the anthropoids knew that Sheik Ibn Jad crept slowly toward the leopard city of Nimmr.

Already, before he was finished, one bull was overturning a rotting log, looking for insects. Soon the

WILEY POST CUTS 21 HRS OFF FLIGHT

Lands in New York Amidst Joyous Welcome of Thousands

NO BREAKS

Only About Four Hours of Real Flying Weather in Trip

New York, July 24—Wiley Post held a new globe-encircling record in still fatigued hands today after shooting across North America in a whirlwind finish to his world flight and whinging down out of the dark-ness here Saturday night into the midst of a thunderous reception.

The stocky Oklahoman smiling but on the verge of exhaustion, landed his purple-trimmed mono-plane at Floyd Bennett Field at 10. 59.30 p.m. (E.S.T.) after a gruelling 2,300-mile hop from Edmonton, Alta.

His route he passed over Toronto, where his plane was observed by many citizens.

His total elapsed time for the 15,400-mile flight was 186 hours, or 1-3 minutes.

He shattered by more than twenty-one hours the time he and Harold Gatty established two sum-mers ago, and promptly announced he could do it again—even more quickly.

"Given a break in the weather," Post told friends, while he was resting at a hotel, "I could take the Winnie Mae, with the same equip-ment, and break my new record by making the trip in four days and a half."

Nearly 50,000 cheering men and women pressed around the plane the instant it taxied down the field, but the tired pilot saw only one.

"Hello Ma," he said to his wife in a soft voice. "I'm pretty tired."

That was all Post had to say while he sat in his ship for several minutes before he was whisked into an automobile for a dash across Brooklyn to his New York hotel. He did pause for a moment to get a new speech for his left eye.

He and Mrs. Post were separated in the car by other passengers, but the airman reached over and pat-ted her shoulder. She pressed his hands.

Dozes Twenty Times.

"I went to sleep at least twenty times between Edmonton and New York," Post said to a group of intimate friends who sat with him in his suite while he relaxed.

"But every time I would doze off and drop the stick, I would wake up with a start. I do not know what makes me do this, but I think whenever the stick is dropped, he comes to."

Asked about the operation of his

GATTY FOLLOWS OLD PAL'S FLIGHT

HAROLD GATTY

Replaced by a robot, Harold Gatty, co-pilot on the record-breaking round-the-world flight of the Winnie Mae in 1931, eagerly follows the course of Wiley Post who is seeking a new world record in the same plane. Gatty is shown at his home in Washington, D.C., where he is employed as an air official. He declares the "breaks" are necessary on such a flight.

pilot, Post said,

"The automatic pilot functioned much better on the last-lap of the trip. I had only three decent hours' flying up to the time I reached Edmonton. One of these was between Fredericton and Moncton, and the other two were after I left there.

"The weather between Edmon-ton and New York was very good until I passed Toronto. Then all I ran into a few thunderstorms and mild ones. I passed over New York State."

Post arrived surprisingly during the ride to the hotel. A doctor who examined his eyes announced his con-dition generally good, with a nor-mal heart-beat.

"Don't smell it yet," commented Post laconically, when some one suggested he get some sleep at once.

While a light supper was being prepared, Post took a shower. On the way into the city he had con-sumed food and coffee brought to the field by his wife.

Gatty, the companion of his first world flight, was in the car with him.

Appears Two Hours Early.

Post's arrival and departure from Floyd Bennett Field were so sud-den that thousands were home without having seen him.

His appearance was almost two hours before he had been expected. Hundreds were caught in a jam in the Administration Building where they could see only the flashing of photographers' flares through the windows. Other hundreds were marooned in towers parked auto-mobiles, where they could hear the resounding cheers, but nothing more.

Major J. Nelson Kelly, Airport Superintendent, conferred with a police description that it was the biggest crowd ever to greet an air hero at its municipal field.

The photographers squeezed through the throng to encircle the plane before Post emerged. He was hoisted to his seat, a police chief knocked around the collar of his blouse.

General Italo Balbo, leader of the 24 airplanes that preceded Post to New York by three days started for the field to greet the world flier, but was caught in a traffic jam and arrived too late. He met Post at his hotel.

The 34-year-old Oklahoman was also hurried from the field within a half hour of his landing, but the crowd refused to believe he had gone and continued milling around, hoping for at least a quick glimpse of him.

On the last hop from Edmonton Post circled southward so that after he passed over Winnipeg and New High Bluff he was on the ground scarcely saw him.

He learned the beacon route us-ually followed by fliers, and cut down toward New York City from Toronto on a direct line. His wide wind speed of nearly 180 miles an hour brought him to the end of his 15,400-mile trip away ahead of schedule.

After a long rest Post will receive formal civic reception Wednesday his second. But every one who saw the finish to his flight predicted he would be even greater.

Mollisons Crash Within 60 Miles of Goal; Thrown Clear but Not Injured

Run Short of Fuel at Bridgeport Conn. After Spanning Atlantic

PLANE NOSES OVER

Both Very Tied And Unable to See Lights of Airport

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 24.—After conquering the North Atlan-tic and flying within sixty miles of their goal, the British air aces, Amy and Jim Mollison, crashed their black cabin biplane at the airfield near here Sunday night, but escaped with slight injuries.

Seeking Safe Landing

The couple, who had set out from Pendina, Wales, Saturday, in an effort to fly non-stop to New York, circled the airport five times in an apparent effort to find a safe land-ing place. The airport is in the vil-lage of Stratford, near here.

Captain Mollison told a doctor at the Bridgeport hospital that he had run short of fuel while coming down the coast.

He said he saw the lights of the Bridgeport Airport and decided to land there. He said he circled the field five times before he put the plane down.

Hospital authorities said the Mol-lisons would spend the night at the hospital.

The airport was lighted on the chance the Mollisons might arrive, but Fred Moller, airport manager, was not in the Administration Building when their ship appeared.

On each of the five circuits of the field the aviators attempted to come down on the regular runways of the airport, but were unable to do so.

Moller was signalling frantically all the while.

On their sixth attempt to land they came down in a meadow, strik-ing some distance from the field. Their biplane nosed over in soft marsh land, and both the fliers were thrown clear of the machine.

Working with flashlights, lamps, searchers discovered them about 400 feet from the boundary of the air-field.

Find the Injured

The searchers quickly found him, suffering from cuts and gashes.

His wife was lying about fifteen feet away, also suffering cuts, but neither of their injuries were se-rious.

The searchers reached into the smashed plane and cut away enough fabric to fashion stretches for both of the fliers. Using these they rushed the Britons to convey-ance, which took the Bridgeport Hos-pital.

Hasty examination by physicians there showed neither had been seri-ously injured. Mollison was found to have a lacerated skull with super-ficial lacerations on his leg. His 24-year-old wife, the former Amy John-son, suffered a bruised chest and a lacerated right knee.

"I was so tired I didn't know where I was," declared Mollison later in hos-pital attendants.

"He couldn't see. He couldn't see," moaned his wife.

"They will be able to leave hospit-al tomorrow."

Welcome Awaited

A huge welcome had been await-ing them at Floyd Bennett Field, which lies 60 miles to the south-west of Bridgeport. Arrival at the conclusion of the 2,000-mile flight from Italo Balbo had paid a visit to the Bridgeport Airport yesterday in the event of the progress of the couple.

Too airport here, on the shores of Long Island Sound, was the last one of any size on the route which the Mollisons were literally in sight of New York when they crashed. Except for on clear nights, the lights of the city's skyscrapers can be seen from the air here.

City after city from Nova Scotia, to Connecticut, which the Mollisons called the Seafarer, on the south-westward journey, during the after-noon and early evening. It passed over Moncton, N.B., at 3.25 p.m. E.S.T., and was first seen in the United States at Bar Harbor, Maine.

Later it was reported flying low over Cape Elizabeth, Portland, and subsequently at Revere, Mass., Providence, R.I., Block Island, New London, and New Haven, Conn. Fisher's Island is in Long Island Sound, but off the Con-necticut coast.

The plane was seen over New Haven only a half-hour before it crashed here. Its occupants already have in their possession a number of envoy photographs of the walls of the Bradley Home. These are of .32 calibre.

At Saturday's inquest Michae-el clearly questioned by the cor-oner and by the jurymen with re-gard to firearms, which he himself had purchased. He testified that he had had a .32 rifle, but that it had been stolen a few days ago. His statement followed that he had seen the rifle about three or four days ago.

Mrs. Bradley's evidence being cited by the husband, he replied "She is mistaken. It must have been the same."

Michael Bradley's movements on the morning of the murder were the subject of interrogation by the jury. Both his wife and Muriel Marcildon, a 14-year-old girl, who was staying at their home, testified that on the night prior to the kill-ing he had slept downstairs". Bradley's evidence was that he had slept "upstairs".

His relations with his family were examined. Michael had given consi-erable money into Joseph Bradley's hands, and, up until last November, he and his wife had stayed with Joseph. Disagreements had grown, however, between the pair had moved out into a home of their own.

On the morning of the murder he had been informed of the tragedy by Hardane Vallancourt, but had not gone near the scene, having been advised, he said, to stay away. On that day he had contemplated driving to Pembroke to purchase some medicine, he testified, and such ills for the past two years.

Most of Saturday's evidence, be-side of that given by Michael Bradley, was of a routine character. Adjourn Inquest Neighbors told of witnessing the pursuit of Johanna Bradley by the armed man, who, it is presumed, murdered her. They spoke of hear-ing rifle shots, admitted their own inability to shoot investigating, be-lieving as they did that the shoot-ing was the work of the mentally defective Tom Bradley.

Father Denis Harrington of Cha-pleau testified to having entered the house with Joseph Cantin and to having found the bodies of the mur-dered family.

The inquest was adjourned until next Friday.

NE ids CHAPLEAU, Ont., July 24—(CP) —With the funeral last evening of the five victims of the homicidal mania who on Friday shot to death the household of Joseph Bradley at Demers Centre, and the transference to Montreal of Jo-seph's younger son, Michael, held as a material witness in connec-tion with the slaying, the tragedy advanced one more step when it was the principal witness at the coroner's inquest here today.

Today the detectives in charge of the case have planned to con-duct an exhaustive search of the surrounding district for the .32 calibre rifle from which the fatal shots were fired. This is a link or connecting piece in the chain of evi-dence which they already have in their possession and which they expect shortly to hang on the walls of the Bradley Home. These are of .32 calibre.

BLAZE THREATENS VILLAGE OF CANNIFTON

Fire Breaking Out in Vacant House for Time Threatens Canniftonn

House Owned by C. A. Callery And Former Post Office Burns

FIERCE BLAZE

Fire Originated in Back Shed of Vacant Building

Breaking out in a vacant house, fire threatened the entire village of Canniffon last night when two frame buildings were completely destroyed and others threatened. The fire is believed to have been started with persons searching for some hard cider, that was supposed to have been hidden in a house previously occupied by John Goodman, and owned by C. A. Callery of Canniffon.

Goodman is at present serving a term in the county jail at Belleville for a breach of the liquor law, and there is a suggestion that a quantity of cider may have been in the house when the fire broke out.

There is current a rumor that strangers have been entering the house through the rear door for some days and it is thought that one of these men in searching for the cider may have dropped a lighted match or cigarette stub.

The fire started in the back shed of the Callery owned building and later spread to the old Canniffon Post Office, now the Welsh store occupied by Miss Mary Callery as a general store. Before control of the flames, that the Belleville fire department was called to the conflagration to stem the spreading of flames. For hours the fierce flames threatened all buildings in the nearby vicinity only to be eventually quenched by the untiring efforts of Fire Chief Lynch, whose effort saved the entire north end of Canniffon village.

The fire was discovered by three campers from London, Ont., who, when retiring, happened to observe flames issuing from the rear of the vacant house owned by C. A. Callery. The campers, Messrs. Harold O'Dell, Fred Beacon and John Kehn immediately gave the alarm

NUDE BATHERS ARE REPORTED

Score of Undad Young Men And Women on Shore of Lake

Orillia, Ont., July 25—(CP)—Attired under bathing, carried on by unidentified young men and women on the banks of Lake Couchiching at intervals, was reported today to have been in full swing earth last night.

The bathers, frolicking on the shores in their "birthday suits" have long scandalized summer residents around the lake, but efforts to discourage their gatherings have failed.

Worst of the latest escapade of the nude bathers was brought here by the police who, driving down a little-used road to the lake observed about a score of young men and women, all undad, frolicking on the beach.

The police claimed, although their girl companions, insisted on bathering from the scene, they remained long enough to make sure "their eyes had not deceived them."

"We saw them, all right, but the women we were with didn't want to stay very long and we were not close enough to recognize any of them," one of the youths said.

At the last meeting of the Orillia township council, it was learned, a petition signed by a large number of cottagers on and about Bass Lake, and requesting passage of by-law to prevent "nude bathing" and language and disorderly conduct," had been placed before council.

A by-law intended to restrict bathing is now under consideration.

Beyond confirming giebelief in the existence of an organized "nudist cult" members of township council and residents of Bass Lake district are loathe to discuss the matter.

European Wine Producers Seek Entrance to United States Tables

Washington, July 25 (AP)—British French and other interests are already trying to get concessions from them for their wines, whiskies, and beers in case the 18th amendment is repealed.

Representatives of these interests have sounded out American officials in London and Washington on the possibilities of tariff grades on alcoholic beverages.

The line up of Tennessee, Arkansas, and Alabama for prohibition repeal, many diplomats say, has persuaded them that the American market will be opened to liquor imports by the end of 1934. Naturally they want information about the tariff policy this government will adopt in connection with foreign beverages—and concessions, if they can get them.

Portugal, Great Britain, France, Spain, Germany and Italy were the countries from which the United States extensively imported beverages before prohibition.

The imports of alcoholic drinks into the United States in 1913 totalled over 17,000,000 gallons with a value of $30,743,139.

TAKEN TO MONTREAL

Girl Now States She Saw Bradley Leave House Early Friday

Chateau Que., July 26 (CP) With the transference to Montreal by Detective J. P. Dalpe of the girl who found yesterday in a cow-shed near the home of Michael Bradley, and the interrogation of Bradley continuing in the Eastern metropolis, the focus of general interest in the murder of the five members of the Bradley family moved away from Demers centre today. On Sunday night, the victims of the pitchfork slaying—the aged Joseph Bradley, his wife, his son and daughter, Peter and Johanna, and his brother, John—were interred, before the funerals of Alimentie Leland retained only the memories of the horrifying tragedy.

Yesterday's discovery of the rifle followed closely a conversation between Detective Dalpe and 14-year-old Muriel Macmillan, the girl who slayed at the home of Michael Bradley, in Demers centre. Following the

Can a Nation Do Without Religion? Dr. Semple Says 'No'

Bridge Street United Church Minister Deals With Modern Problem

Because of the extreme heat, Sunday evening the union service of Bridge Street and Tabernacle United congregations was held in the fine cool basement of the latter church.

Prof. Hunt presided at the piano and accompanied Miss Colclough in a very effective solo.

Rev. Dr. Semple dealt upon the theme "Can a Country Get Along Without Religion" and based his views upon the situation in Russia where the established church has been dispensed with, "A great deal depends," said Rev. Dr. Semple, "upon what is meant by religion". He has gathered his information about Russia from extensive reading and conversation with experts who have studied the experiment there over a long period, notably Prof. Ward of Union Theological Seminary, New York. "When we have a tottering world condition then we have a trembling Heaven," opined Dr. Semple, "The map of Europe has changed much lately. Thrones, kings and dynasties are collapsing upon our earth, yet God is in His Heaven. Mussolini in Italy has out-Caesared old Caesar; Stalin in Russia has out-czared the czars; Czar and Hitler in Germany has out-Kaisered the Kaiser of World War fame. Things momentous in our world are transpiring. Caesar would have envied Balbo's accomplishment of piloting expertly the recent Italian Armada of 24 seaplanes. God cannot be left out of events and human involvement. The leaven of His Kingdom is still working in human hearts despite the devices attempt to overthrow the church such as it was there.

The Bolshevik Government in Russia has done more for the welfare of the masses during the past ten years, though not intended spiritually, but unconsciously, than the Greek Orthodox Church has performed in its monopoly for a century, contended Dr. Semple out of his knowledge and observations. "If we had an atheist government in our country", queried Dr. Semple "could we conceive of our great Protestant and Catholic Churches being crumbled before the onslaught of dispersion?" Personally he was not concerned that there be simply one big church only in so far as the Kingdom of God was established on earth. To retain its hold any church must be vitally allied with important realities such as the pre-eminently the medium of witnessing God's revelation to man through history and experience, an intellectual passion for truth, the witnessing of a loving resurrected Saviour, personal evangelism and the social application of the teachings of Jesus. God is still revealing Himself to mankind. Russia hitherto lacked the importance of true knowledge, hence there overboard sham and hypocrisy. One of the first acts of the new regime was to start several million children to schools such as they be.

Dr. Semple paid a great tribute to one of the early Methodist leaders in Ontario, Rev. Egerton Ryerson for the trail he blazed toward one of the most ideal educational systems.

A changed world so necessary will come through individual regeneration. In Russia today there is a great youth movement and action against alcoholism and narcotics. They are not as materialistic as many on this continent, but pay the weal of a how world before selfish display and serving.

The service was brought to a close with the singing of Henry Van Dyke's hymn of "The Carpenter" and the benediction pronounced by Rev. H. D. Hartleon.

Occupants of Car Are Cut By Flying Glass

Seriously injured, when the car in which they were riding crashed into a telegraph pole opposite the Ontario School for the Deaf, Wesley Dupuis, Bowman and Carpenter-rick, Napanee, were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital shortly before noon today both suffering from lacerations and cuts to the head and face. Patrick, the driver of the car escaped with minor cuts and bruises. Dupuis bleeding profusely from Duquette's right thumb was lacerated so much so that the entire digit-tation was though necessary. "NO DIVORCE PLANS" SAYS MARY PICKFORD

Reported She Was to Establish Residence in Nevada

Reno, Nevada, July 25 (AP) — Reports Mary Pickford planned to establish a divorce residence in Nevada were without direct confirmation today, although J. W. Dignan, member of the law firm which represented her in a suit for freedom from Owen Moore in 1920, said she had been here recently.

Mr. Hollywood, Miss Pickford, whose separation from Douglas Fairbanks was announced several weeks ago, said she had no divorce plans.

"I have not been in Nevada and I give you my word of honour there is nothing to this report that I have made divorce plans," she said.

Interest in Reno in the possible divorce suit the Toronto born film actress conferred with attorneys here two weeks ago and completed plans for a divorce residence.

DEMAND FOR GRAIN EXCEEDS SUPPLY

Some Fields Not Worth the Price of Cutting

For the first time in local history, farmers of the district are buying grain instead of selling. Demand also exceeds the supply.

According to government Prince Edward County farmer today it is the first time in the history farmer have been unable to reap more than was sowed. This year Lucky a farmer in Prince Edward County has been able to get even as much grain from the bare crops as the planted in the spring. In Hastings County, however, while grain crops are expected to be thin, the seedlings in the fields are thriving. In Prince Edward County. Farther north in Hastings County even an average yield is expected. Although farmers principally in Prince Edward County, are buying grain, it is not with the idea of later profit. The grain is needed badly for feed, and for seed next spring, when they honestly believe seed prices will be "out of sight".

More Perfect Insect Pests, Says Expert

Crops Coddle

From Many Quarters of World Come Parasites For Insect War

TERMITE NOT HERE

In the ceaseless, relentless battle of man against his insect enemies goes on.

Three hundred carefully insulated and sealed boxes, each containing thousands of tiny winged parasite insect helpers to assist workers at the Dominion Entomological Bureau on Dundas Street were received this week from the British Isles.

Last week another shipment of fragile appearing boxes was received at the local laboratory from far away Czecho-Slovakia. The world is being searched by Canada for tiny bugs to eat other larger bugs whose munching jaws in forest and field annually cause this country millions of dollars economic loss.

They don't look heroic, these little parasite helpers sent here to this country to help Canadians in their fight against native and imported insect pests. Huddled in their tiny glass and wooden cases, supported on soft, cotton, and kept in a constant condition by the refreshing air of the special little refrigerating room, they appear almost lifeless. But they have been of untold value to this country in many years of efficient foe.

Some of them look like tiny, almost invisible moths. Others look like all the world like midgets of wildfire. All the common house fly. A few species have the appearance of mosquitoes. Most are large winged and small bodied; others are big-bodied and small-winged. Some cases contain a breed, which looks like flying ants—and still other cases are so small they resemble nothing more than the finest of dust specks. Their names, however, are often as formidable as the insects themselves are small.

Have Definite Purpose

The shipments received from the British Isles and Czecho-Slovakia within the past week have a definite purpose in life. Both species of parasites received will attack only destructive forest insects. From the Isles was received a mothy looking little fly which will, when liberated in the standing timber of British Columbia, attack the destructive pine shoot class of insect pests, which feed upon the tender shoots of the pine tree, resulting in a very malformed growth of trees, useless for lumber. From Czecho-Slovakia comes the little parasite, which will attack only the spruce saw-fly, another insect causing much annoyance to forest interests.

It is the desire of these parasites to segregate that brings the downfall of the destructive insects, and assists Canadians in the fight with their hereditary foe. Searching out the destructive pests, the parasite carefully bores a tiny hole in the body of the larger grub and proceeds to lay its egg. Hatched by the warmth of the body of the host the tiny parasites come to life and calmly proceed to devour the pest while alive. The process is repeated by these young parasites who are now born matured.

Whether it is the corn borer, the saw-fly, the destructive moths or timber beetles, the process is the same. Only with the help of the parasite could the farmer, the timber land owner or the gardener survive.

Control Corn Borer

This year the workers at the local laboratory are concentrating their efforts on the control of the corn borer in the western sections of Ontario. At present hundreds of thousands of corn borer parasites, that have been bred and matured at the local laboratory during the past winter are being carefully packed and shipped to the west corn fields in the counties west of Toronto. Added to the numbers bred at the local laboratory will be shipments of the parasites from parasites, which are now arriving at regular intervals from the United States.

Excellent progress in the corn fields in this section of the province, and in Prince Edward County is believed to have been made since the liberation of the parasites by the laboratory in this area last summer. Since their liberation last year the parasites have propagated enormously in numbers and now acclimatized to the weather and conditions of the province, the insect believes will continue to increase, and multiply. From a study made by local entomologists it is believed that over fifty percent of corn borers in this area have parasites in them. So by temporary halt in the work of liberating the parasites in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties is being made by Mr. Baird and his staff of helpers at the local laboratory in order to give them time to study conditions firsthand.

In this age-old battle of man against insect, Mr. Baird sees no let-up, in the near future. On the contrary, man must still be wary lest new species on for a more concentrated attack as they succeed year.

Insects on Increase

Destructive insects throughout this and other countries are decidedly on the increase.

"They show the greatest gain of any," explained Mr. Baird in his office on Dundas Street to a reporter of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer today.

"We are coddling them too much and keeping the pest years. Man has gone ahead, and with greater efficiency in the control of the insect pests, but the insects have gone ahead also, and with greater efficiency in the control of man.

"Man has gone ahead with greater efficiency in the control of the insect pests, but the insects have gone ahead also, and with greater efficiency in the control of man.

INNER AND OUTER STRUGGLE

People of today have in the aviators those who gives the best demonstration of courage in the outward sphere. There is Wiley Post who broke his own record and there are the Mollisons triumphing over the ancient Atlantic. No finer exhibitions can be found anywhere than those given by these three doughty fliers. Then there is the conquest of the spaces by the Italian air armada, which moves with clockwork effect.

Of course the feats of these fliers cannot be compared with the inner battle which many have to wage within their own selves, the lifelong war which they must fight and which they do fight without praise. The latter the world finds it most difficult to value because it is not so much seen. For the great air heroes there are thousands upon thousands of other heroes whose praises are never sung.

EFFORT NOT ALL LOST

As the conference in London is almost concluded it begins to look as if the work is not all lost. Nations have come to an understanding here sufficient it is to reach conclusions which will mean the yielding of many cherished ideals of politics and of government as well as so many possibilities of benefitting. The lack of accord will probably only make the nations more determined than ever to find a way to betterment.

There are some signs of improvement and that improvement will ultimately come is realized even by the pessimist.

It is decided that the steering committee of the economic conference must sit in permanent session. This will undoubtedly mean something.

WILL NOT BE LED ASTRAY

With the C.C.F. closing its convention at Regina, most people of this country will wonder what this federation does not see that it is possible to make progress with the two old-time parties.

What the C.C.F. is planning to accomplish, what it is trying to accomplish these things and how it is going to accomplish these is more than the vast majority of Canadians can find out. Both political parties which are recognized in the political life have been tried and generally found to take the way which guarantees the progress likely to be made.

When one reads the huge number of resolutions which the C.C.F. felt obligated to adopt in order to make itself felt one can give itself credit for this, it must be realized how radical is the new organization. A wholesale change is the undoubted aim of the federation. This characteristic in itself would mean the defeat of this body.

No system is perfect, and the federation claims to be taking the step which will number in a new era of reconstruction.

But to scrap an entire system without having something immediately to take its place would be folly and this would mean the greatest possible how to carry out the complete change which is advocated.

Experimentation is dangerous and so far the C.C.F. proposals have in them nothing more than hints of experiment. Such a system foisted upon a community or nation would probably mean chaos.

The system which has the individual initiative to play his part commensurate with the requirements of the social life is the part the people of Canada want. They cannot afford to take outlandish risks in following the C.C.F.

Some men are so built as to require to be led and that to those who are most blessed are those with individual initiative to play their part well. Elimination of individualism would be putting the people we have for at least the unknown or unsatisfactory.

Canadians prefer to work out their destinies slowly about force with a fair understanding of factors which have proven effective, while the C.C.F. offers a crowd of resolutions in place of economic and social system as we know it. There is a vast difference between mere possible pieces of a system coldly put together without life and without prospect that it will ever become vital, and the time-honored systems of the past which have proven their right to exist.

HIGHER PRICES

There is no occasion for alarm because prices in general are advancing and are reasonably certain to rise further. Commercial recovery was inevitable, and it was equally inevitable that when it began prices would increase somewhat rapidly because of the exceedingly low level to which they had fallen. Human need was bound to assert its stimulating influence on the economic situation. Until it, along with other forces, did so there was unnatural sufferings. There cannot be true prosperity while prices are unreasonably low.

END OF THE BEACH

The end of the beach, and the moon so slim
It seemed it was only a twilight whim,
A thing wrought of magic, all elfin bright
And clear as the gleam of the channel light.

The end of the day, and we stood so still While the moon and the sea-wind worked their will,
And a spell on our happy hearts was laid
That made us certain and unafraid.

The end of the beach, and with hand in hand
We counted the elements that shone in the sand,
The end of our waiting, at last we knew
That only through love can all dreams come true!

MORRISBURG, SLEEPY LITTLE VILLAGE on the banks of the canal where timid boats escape the rush and roar of the rapids and the danger of sharp jutting rocks, has attained fame age being the jumping-off place for the famous climb for tired feet, arthritis, and kindred ailments—where the pilgrim patients leave the Great Grand Trunk Railway (as was) and walk the trail of the Irish cows that Morrisburg has surpuped up and materially advanced its tempo since the invasion of tourists doing the Lost Soul Step, what have you, and appreciating the value of publicity is not overlooking any bets to keep on the Front Page. Here's the latest from Morrisburg: Police have a Dr. Kelly dreadfully busy dreaming up a fresh and blaming it on the water of the St. Lawrence in which they bathe frequently, once a week at least. Now if the good doctor says the St. Lawrence water is O.K. and wouldn't give anyone even goose flesh, but that there is a Wild Radish growing on the wild radish cows that graze along the river bank and at the sides of the streets, and from this the Morrisburg folks get the rash complained of. Exterminate the wild radish and the rash will disappear, he says the doctor. This wild radish epidemic should be referred to Hon. George Perry Graham, who once edited the Morrisburg Herald, and kept that burg laughing so long that it hadn't time to go to sleep in those days—and so George finally had to leave so as the folks could catch up on their rest and sleep. When Hon. George P. was Minister of Railways and Canals he was an authority on RUSH, hence he must know something about RASH, which is a good deal the same in many ways, even in the spelling except for one letter — and with the aid of the Senate he might be able to chase the Wild Radish from Morrisburg —that is rush the rash from the composite face of the citizenry.

MOTORISTS passing through Belleville have cause to complain of the corkscrew trail which very often they have to take on highway and lands them down by the government wharf. Swinging down the highway from Trenton then a sharp turn at the top of Murney Hill at the Devil's Elbow, then another sharp turn at the foot of Murney Hill, Front and Bridge streets. Then just as they are getting up speed again the Dundas turn looms up, but, insufficiently marked as it is, hundreds of motorists coming right along, across the sign should be caught and then touch to the Dundas street turn so that motorists will know that the highway turns there. This much we should do for the visitor within the gates.

DOWN NEW ENGLAND WAY where the Pilgrim Fathers landed on Plymouth Rock and named a rooster after it, where the Puritans gave an example of straight living to the world that was then and is to come,—so straight that they bent over backwards, burned witches at the stake, and turned Boston harbor into a giant tea pot—and things that they have a habit of preserving old customs, habits, furniture, etc., for posterity. Model houses, equipped as they were one hundred years ago, model villages, and even a model farm go to a time and place when it was a crime to wear a moustache, a crime to whistle on Sunday, when it was necessary to obtain a license for a bath tub in connection with a home, and body baths more than once a week were frowned upon. Old Time New England with its Blue Laws, and Sad Sunday was a hard place to live in but it certainly left an interesting chapter in the world's history. Perhaps this might be a new sunday school exhibit showing, perhaps, a replica of a home in the Canadian bush one hundred years ago, and the various things the pioneers had to put up with in those days, and the hardships they had to endure. As a publicity stunt this would be worth while, and as a historical memorial and shining example to the present generation of their many blessings it would be more than worth while.

KLEPTOMANIA OF TRUE TYPE IS VERY RARE

Kleptomaniacs Are Often Found Among Well-to-do

By Lewis E. Bloch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

The term kleptomania is often employed for stealing that is petty, for stealing that is excessive, for stealing by young persons, for an uncontrollable impulse to steal and, lastly, for stealing that appears to be unprovoked. In other words, kleptomania is a loose word that covers the proverbial "multitude of sins."

True kleptomania is however, scientifically considered—which is the only way the term should be applied—it signifies an individual, young or old, male or female, whose impulse to steal cannot be controlled, and for whom the act of stealing, furthermore, is the prime motivating factor, rather than what is stolen.

One often finds kleptomaniacs among the well-to-do, among those who do not need to steal because they are richly endowed with all sorts of worldly goods. And in true kleptomaniacs, of course, nerve makes use of what he steals. He may accumulate it, throw it away or give it away. Often he keeps on stealing for a period of article time after time. Women have been known to shoplift sewing and dozens of handkerchiefs, be hand bags, or stockings—many more than they could possibly use in a lifetime.

A ordinary thief, one with a normal mind, steals for a reason. He thinks before he acts. He exercises considerable judgment, both before and after the act of stealing. He use to which he intends to put his ill-gotten gain conditions and prompts the stealing—if itself.

But not so with the kleptomaniac. Therefore one is forced to the conclusion that what he considers is not normal. In fact, the kleptomaniac is suffering from what psychiatrists call a compulsion. He or she may not want to steal. In fact, he usually they are. But do what they will, they are incapable of controlling the compulsive impulse.

In a few lines back I spoke of an ordinary thief as possessing a normal mind. As a matter of fact, many unquestionably are abnormal—at least so far as mental tests and other psychological researches are able to discover—there are also hundreds and thousands who are distinctly abnormal.

Abnormalities of minds differ, however, from the obsessive compulsive ideas so characteristic of kleptomania.

For among the criminal population may be found those who are insane, feeble-minded, psychopathic and the like. Thieves in a vaudeville part and parcel of their mental derangement. Rarely one comes across a demented individual to distinguish between what is right and what is wrong. Nor is such a defective brain, which is actually deficient in brain cells that go to make up the reasoning ability, be expected to be a safe and sane guide to guide to its possessor. Likewise, no one would expect such individuals to be vidual born with a lack of proper emotional response—to behave like average members of society.

Although kleptomania is more prevalent among women than men, there are fewer ordinary female thieves than men. Usually the female offender who is not a kleptomaniac is working for or under the influence and direction of a male companion with whom she is in love. In fact, the explanation which all rascals seem to have for committing crime is that they did it for love.

But usually it is such a long-drawn-out and tedious procedure, with the emphasis on the abnormal emotional make-up of the individual, that it cannot be satisfactorily adjusted, that comparatively few kleptomaniacs are nabbed—the opportunity for cure which they deserve.

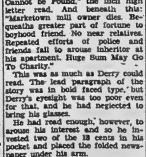
TOURISTS WEARING A BROADER SMILE NOW

Times Infinitely Better Areas the Border Than Last Year



Tourists from the United States making this city their stop for short periods on their way through are carrying broader smiles these days, according to many a time-keeper yesterday when questioned. Smiles have replaced the frowns of yester-year, according to Mr. Sidney Bowerman, manager of the tourist camp.

Conditions south of the border this year are a little better. In most of the larger cities there is returning to work. Money is being made more plentiful. This change for the better is reflected in their little talks with the caretaker during their stay here.

During the past two weeks a blackening of the numbers stopping at the camp has been noted. The July daily average has received is five or six cars; however, the monthly average is reported as better than that for the same period last year. Tourists carry little of the money United States money. So far this year Mr. Nelson has received only one United States bill. It was a one dollar bill.

REAL REALISM

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

Derry Gregory paused at the corner of Court and Marshall Sts. and waited for the green flash of the traffic light. And as he waited his casual glance fell on the headlines of a newspaper, lying on a pile of cheap wares in a negro's stand.

"Heir to Half Millions- Dollars Cannot be Found," the item high lighted. Mr. Gregory's eyes flashed. Marktown mill owner dies. Remainder of estate part of fortune beyond friend. No near relatives. Advertisements have been sent to friends fail to arouse inheritor at his apartment. Huge Sum May Go To Church.

This was as much as Derry could read. The lead paragraph of the story was in bold faced type, but Derry's eyesight was too poor even for that, and he had neglected to bring his glasses.

He had read enough, however, to arouse his interest and so he hurried on to the G.T.R. station to buy a paper and placed the folded newspaper under his arm.

The traffic light flashed green and Derry moved across the square with a sea of hurrying humanity. He continued on his way down Court Street until abreast of a restaurant, the window of which displayed a sign reading: Full Course Meal, 15 Cents.

Derry entered. His attitude was that of a person who has suddenly sat down on one of the high stools which fronted the counter, and was behind the counter.

There wasn't any style about the food that was placed before Derry, or any "fixings." It was just food, plain and nourishing, and Derry ate with a relish.

He wished, lingering over his coffee, that he'd brought his glasses along. The story about the missing heir to half a million dollars intrigued him. In fact his interest was aroused to such an extent that as he ready a partly formed plan had erected on Pinnacle Street near the canning factory. It is expected that it will be completed by the first of September.

Mr. A. J. McDonald, barrister, of Madoc was in the city today.

Miss Louisa Thompson, Dundas Street, is home from Guelph for a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Davy of Durand, Mich., are visiting Mrs. Davy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Sargent, Frank Street.

Mrs. J. D. Monaghan and daughter, Miss Lena, and Miss Minnie Fleming are spending some time at the Thousand Island Park.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Miller, Grinnell, Iowa, an old-time Belleville couple, having resided here thirty three years ago, are visiting relatives and friends in the city.

Publishers always squawking about injecting realism into yarns, eh! Well, maybe I can give 'em some real realism!!

Perhaps what a bit hard as the result of his exertion, Derry reached the front door of his home and put a key in the lock on his apartment door. "That's to hold himself, "that's it exactly! I'm not Derry Parmley's room and tell him he's heir to half a million dollars. No sir! He takes it! Put his reaction into words! He'll at first deny it and then he'll go to art's sake. And the publishers want realism.

Derry turned at sound of a step behind him. It was Parmley holding a newspaper. En route to greeting at him wildly.

"Derry! For the love o' Pete where you been? Been waiting for you all afternoon! Have you seen the latest edition?"

"Hello, Paynter. What's happening?" Derry said. "God, it hurts in my pocket. Didn't have my glasses."

Paynter seemed greatly excited. "Cripes! Then you don't know! Derry, for God's sake, sit down! Hear me! Rich! You're inherited half a million dollars! It says so, here! You haven't been answering your bell, and they've been up with your novel. Well, they think you're missing! Man, what a break!"

Derry sank half rooted to the spot. He clutched at the door. He felt weak. His head seemed bulged; his jaw sagged. He gulped, gagged, choked, then stood and couldn't.

Paynter, watching him closely, had begun to scribble on a piece of paper, which protruded from behind the newspaper. His pencil moved furiously. Derry watched him dazedly, seemed unable to grasp what the other had said.

At last Paynter looked up and grinned. "Thanks, Derry. It was a dirty trick. It almost was. I just had to have realism—overwhelming surprise—in this sketch. Art, you know."

Spying on Sports

BY William Ritt
Central Press Canadian

THAT THRILLING match taking place between Gene Sarazen and Tommy Armour all over the sport pages of this continent looms as the biggest golf battle of the year. Both boys are getting better wallops than they produced in the regulation meets in regulation tourneys this year.

As this is written the two fighting pros are on the fifth chapter, installment or toe of their battle and it's all even. Around selective play is more accurate than Gene's, but Sarazen's short game, in the form of scathing retorts, has evened matters.

Whether or not the boys really mean it, they are both getting lots of publicity. And publicity to a professional tournament player is bread and meat, with plenty of gravy.

Boiled down, Armour's contention is that Sarazen and other pros who plan to skip the national P. G. A. meet in Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 8-13, have no right to do so. Sarazen retorts that, not knowing the date of the Milwaukee battle, he selected for an exhibition tour which he must fulfill, P.G.A. meet or no P.G.A. meet.

It seems they are both right. So what?

x x x

TE CONTROVERSIAL can bring little other result than to again reveal the fact that the P. G. A. is generally regarded, even by many pros, as of little consequence when compared with the national open.

The P. G. A. meet is the pros own "world series" without amateur interference, yet it means a great deal more in publicity, public regard and, future earning power to the pro if he wins the national open than if he captures the P. G. A. crown.

Somehow, the P. G. A. tournament never has attained the status of national open. During Bobby Jones' tournament career that was understandable. In Bob's day it was Jones, the Emperor of Amateurs, against the pick of the pros. Jones won so many of those battles that when the P. G. A. clash rolled around it seemed only an anticlimax.

Now, however, Jones has gone and the amateur have also chance of carrying off the national.

When Jones withdrew from tournament play the pros figured to have the national open title pretty much to themselves and they did—until this year when Gene Sarazen returned the old cup to amateur hands.

Instead of publicity gubbing over matters the pros might do a better job of it by discovering some means of increasing the prestige of the P.G.A. in the public regard so that there might be two outstanding pros—the national open and the P. G. A. winners—each year.

On second thought, maybe that's just what Armour and Sarazen are trying to do.

FISH IS KILLED

Guelph, Ont., July 25—(CP) — Thought to be victims of some poisonous contamination in the Grand River, literally hundreds of fish have been reported floating on the surface of the water. Anglers who visited the river over the week end say that the stream is white with the bodies of dead fish. The matter has been reported to the game warden and authorities will investigate.

To the ground go many of the new evening wraps, designed for Autumn wear. Satin will be the favored material for these wraps made with a full-length fitted silhouette is of lustrous black satin with deep cape in white fox and double borders of the fox at the cuffs of the sleeves.

Wooden beads are those who won't go for the new hats made of wool weaves. The wood is so treated that it is as flexible and supple as any material. A new model is done in white linen with brim of the wood in light weave and a crown band of wood in a darker hue.

Have some slender wear over one of the new satin dinner gowns that are so luscious looking. A new and lovely model worn by a current theatrical success is of tea rose satin in a very lustrous weave. It has a draped neckline and fullness at the skirt front. The bodice has a deep slash in back and there are bow-knot ties with brilliant ornaments at the neckline and waist, both in back.

Under cover are hands and arms these days as more and more women turn to flummery gloves. With sleeveless dresses one girl wears long gloves of white kid, the upper arm marked by close shirring to the elbow.

An addition to the family of wood accessories is the glove with wooden cuff. The glove itself has the hand of knitted linen while the wooden cuff has a tassled cuff of jinn wood done in three grains and is ever so attractive.

The Beauty Box

Rail against your complexion as you must acknowledge that it has a marvelous way of coming through with a bit of attention. The right kind, of course, the kind it is looking for, the kind that renews its spirits.

Well my it has been a tough, busy day and you're run ragged. Nerves stealing like beacon, curling and clothes, muscles tired, face drawn, circulation slack, head too full of problems, heart not full enough of joy. A low physical condition that is reflected on the countenance. And there is just ahead, that very evening, a dinner party to which you have looked forward but which at the moment looks like dead set work.

Very well. A bad situation, but not serious.

Turn on the taps, fill the bath tub, wrap up the smarty coiffure, and then, with your body in the fragrant water, relax. Relax completely. Let your head, your bones, relax muscle tension. Close your eyes and relax. Then apply to any other skin spray, friction with a coarse towel, and you'll emerge a new person.

Sit down in a comfortable chair and spread a massage cream over face and neck. Tap lightly with flattened fingers. Run the heel from collar bone to chin. Work on your temples where the throbbing nerve hurt is.

Continue the tapping, slapping and smoothing until the cream has just about disappeared. Wring out a towel in very cold water, wrap it over your celestial visage with only the impertinent nose uncovered. Too bad not to invite it to the beauty feast, but you have to keep on breathing.

Lie down with hands held tight over the cold compress. In five minutes more the flesh should be steaming hot, which condition shows that blood streams have answered the summons to come right along and get the complexion ship-shape.

Up again. Wipe off the remaining cream with a dry towel. Never remove an ointment with soap and water. The skin surface will be in prime condition to accept makeup.

Fluff on your powder, work in rouge, use your powder again.

Indulge in a film—no more—of eye shadow. Those popular brown tints do really spur along the merry evening. If you can't bring yourself to use them, then blend brown, purple or bronze, use your rouge pad. Place rouge high on the temples. It brings out eye glints, imparts an appearance of animation and freshness.

Viewing the newly created face that beams you from the mirror, the tribulations of the day and the rush hour seem to be banished from your memory. You are reconditioned, physically, mentally, plasterally. Try it sometime. It's elegant.

LADY ASTOR'S DAUGHTER TO WED

This is a striking portraitt of Phyllis Astor, only daughter of Viscount and Viscountess Astor, whose engagement to Lord Willoughby de Eresby, elder son of the Earl and Countess of Lancaster, has been announced in London. Before her marriage, Lady Astor was the famous American-born member of the British parliament, was Nancy Langhorne of Virginia.

How Mary Lost Her Hunter When No Longer 'Contrary'

As long as Mary said "No" to Donald, he kept the telephone wires sizzling with his pleas for dates.

Would Mary go for a spin in his car?

Would she go to a show with him?

How about a shore dinner at the beach and a dance afterwards?

And as long as she persisted in her role of Mary, Mary, quite contrary", and accepted only one date to every four or five she turned down, Donald was faithful as old Dog Tray.

Mary danced, swam, rowed, biked with the whole bunch, she tells us, and was the reigning girl of the crowd. She was vivacious, as most of the world's charmers are. Love beeh and always will be. She had a way of meeting the ups and downs of life as if it were all in a day's work. She could do things, too—play the piano, when anyone wanted to dance; turn out a good, quickly, was smart with a needle, if any of the girls wanted to trick out an old dress. As in the case of the one in the table, with the perfect moonlight, finally consented to go with her door.

Then one lovely moonlight night—that old moon of ours has a great deal to answer for—Mary, for no longer contrary, rewarded Donald's weeks and months of devotion with a date. The moonbeams kisses before they said good-night, and Mary decided she had been in love with Donald all along but had not realized it. It's often that way with girls who have been chary with their kisses.

Mary's mistake was in not engaging Donald's type. He hungered to the torchered of hunters—men who look upon a girl as a sportsman looks upon a game. The chase, more than the quarry, really interests them. And so with her Tim, Kim Mary found to lose her hold over her lover. The more she yielded to his pleading, the less she was capable of holding him.

Not all men, praise be, are of this type; but there are enough to make the vie girl watch her step in dealing with them. With them there must be evidence of real attachment to call forth love in return. With the hunter, it's never wise to respond to his advances too ardently. If the girl does, she is likely to be just one more broken-winged thing picked up and put into the game bag.

As long as Mary fled before the hunter, she was the most desirable of her sex. But when she yielded, she changed from the fair, fleeting vision that would gave such zest to the chase, to something that hung like a millstone around an unwilling neck.

Long, unhappy days are before Mary. I'm afraid, because she is a proud spirit, and it's gall and wormwood to know that the crowd that she despised are all aware that she was taken up and dropped for someone else dropped, when she cared more than life itself.

Scant comfort to tell her that she'll better off, have a hunter in the chase than try to turn him into the poorer type of husband to be found. Time is the great healer of heartaches' and youth is hard to bear.

Mary writes me that she is going through the motions of being her old self; that she's wearing no visible crepe for the old crowd's entertainment. And for this she has my heartiest congratulations.

DON'T TRIFLE WITH COMMON CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brings Relief

Constipation gets its grip on a person almost unawares. It often starts with such things as headaches. Listlessness. Bad complexion. Unpleasant breath. If unchecked, it may seriously impair your health.

Fortunately, you can avoid this danger by eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides two vitamins needed to prevent common constipation; "bulk" and vitamin B. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of iron for the blood.

Biological tests demonstrate that the "bulk" in bran is similar to that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the intestinal wastes.

How much better than taking unpleasant patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Serious cases, with every meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Advice to the Lovelorn

The Neighbors Have Little to Talk About

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Four years ago my husband left me with three children, one a baby a week old. I have never had a word from him since. I've understood he went off and is living with another woman.

But meantime I've been harshly criticized by neighbors because I sometimes go motoring with an old friend. We aren't the least bit in love, but he is fond of children and often takes us all for a little outing. And believe me, Miss Fairfax, I'm glad to go. Doing everything for three children is a handful in addition to which I rent rooms and serve breakfast to four roomers.

I understand in the case of disappearance, that a husband or wife must wait seven years for freedom. Is this so?

Mildred F.

My congratulations on having done so well with your genuine problem; and I think the neighbors have little to talk about in your case. Why shouldn't you and the children enjoy an outing? Do they want you to wear crepe continually for a man who deserted you when you had a three-old baby?

In cases of disappearance, it's my impression that there must be considerable a person for many years before he is officially pronounced dead. Laws in the various states differ somewhat in regard to divorce for desertion, and you'd better inquire in the district of the court or at the Domestic Relations Court to get the exact facts.

Perhaps It's Sour Grapes with the Sheik

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young girl of eighteen and a freshman in one of our colleges. I am in love with a boy of twenty-one who claims to be in love with me.

Although we are alone he is an ideal lover, kind, affectionate, considerate, loving and gentlemanly. But—when we are in a crowd, he flunks me with being a flirt. He goes out with me and then and pretends to our friends that he is not with me at all. Then I am running after him. Our friends think that I am bold, forward, and altogether without pride. This boy has asked me to marry him, but I am not for anyone. I should like to get your opinion of him like this.

When we go to a dance, I would like for to dance with another boy, he is so jealous. Of course, he does not dance with any other girl. This is the reason I feel he is ashamed to have my friends know that he is in love.

Do you think I should marry a man like this, or can you explain such actions? He is a good looking man, but he has a wonderful power of fascination. Can he be a "The Sheik" type. Is he?

Disappointed Girl Friend.

What's the matter, my dear, that you put up with such treatment? Shall or no sheik, that young egoist should be taken firmly in hand by someone capable of applying the lesson to his self-esteem. This on the same principle as we slip the wings of a young rooster, to keep him from flying over the fence and imagining himself an eagle.

It is unbelievable the number of letters, like this that I get from nice girls. They permit themselves to be snubbed and disparaged by some creature who takes this "kick-you-down-stairs" method of proving his love. I hope you'll decide to do a little missionary on this young man before you consider marrying him.

VACATIONS and HEALTH

By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES
Medical Authority and Chief Medical Director
New York Life Insurance Company

CAMP LIFE

Camping in the woods or on the shore of some lake can be one of the most healthful ways to spend a summer holiday. This is particularly true of city office workers who should aim to get plenty of fresh air and sunshine, and a moderate amount of exercise. Only a two weeks vacation usually allotted to them.

When selecting a camp site, go to one that is free from mosquitoes flies and other insects which are not only unpleasant but also disease carriers and poisonous. Then chose a spot of ground high enough to be dry if it rains. Do not sleep on damp ground. An ample supply of woollen blankets should be provided, as well as warm clothing and sweaters if you are camping in a place where the evenings may be cool.

Matches, cigarettes and cigar stubs should not be thrown away carelessly when camping in the woods. Camp-fires should also be thoroughly extinguished whenever you leave the camp. Forest fires, causing injury and death have often been started by careless campers.

Pails and hatchets should be used with care, for it is all too easy to cut a hand or foot badly. Sterilize all cuts, particularly those from rusty nails or old iron to avoid lock-jaw or other infection.

Firearms

The National Safety Council reports that one-third of the deaths from firearms occur between the ages of 10 and 19, and another 30 per cent. between ages 30 and 39. The hazard exists chiefly among boys and young men. Firearms should be carried only according to the accepted rules. If you don't know the rules, learn them before taking up a gun and tramping through the fields and woods.

Make sure that nobody is in range when you contemplate using fire-arms, and under no circumstances point a gun at another person. That victim may never live to hear the all too common and weak excuse, "I didn't know it was loaded."

Snake Bites

Find out what poisonous snakes are prevalent in the district you intend to visit, and learn something about their appearance and habits. Rattlers, copperheads, moccasin-mouths or water-moccasions, and the coral or harlequin snakes are dangerous. Riding boots or leather leggings give considerable protection. If a snake bite does occur, don't lose your head.

Apply a tourniquet just above the bite, remembering to loosen it for moment every fifteen minutes. Sterilize the skin and cut a gash courageously just above the bite with a sharp knife. Suction by mouth will help draw off some the venom, which should not be swallowed or retained in the mouth. Get a physician as quickly as possible, and have anti-toxin for snake bite given if possible.

People going into localities where snakes are plentiful can obtain a supply of anti-toxin put up in small syringes ready for use. Alcohol is not an anti-toxin for snake venom. Do not depend on it.

This is the third of a series of 12 articles on Vacations and Health. The fourth on The Open Road, will answer the questions:

1. What should be done before starting on a long automobile trip? 2. Is the condition of the car more important than the physical condition of the driver? 3. In driving far, how often should the driver stop for rest?

Bullish Tone Persists in Toronto Mines With Trading Heavy in Silver Group And Nickel Advances of $4 to $4 Chalked up on Distillery Issues With Smelters Registering Big Gain but Recession After Rise back to Below Yesterday's Close—New York Closes Fairly Steady

NEW YORK CLOSE

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP) — The stock market encountered relatively light trading today which converted many gains of fractions to four points into moderate losses. Advances of two or more in Case, Chicago, Industrial Rayon and American Commercial Alcohol were reduced to around a point while net losses of major fractions to more than a point were shown in New York Central, United States Steel, Western Union, Commercial Solvents, National Distillers, United Aircraft and Sears Roebuck. American Telephone and Electric Power were barely steady. Transfers approximated 2,200,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, July 25—Stocks pressed forward today as a fast pace, apparently intent on crowding into the abbreviated session all their day's rallying vigor that ordinarily would be spread over the customary five hours.

Canadian Stocks and Bonds rallied about a narrow range. Fractional gains were recorded by shares of Dome Mines, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific, while those of International Nickel were unchanged. Dominion Government 4's advanced to 104, but other Canadian obligations held near their previous closing prices. The Canadian dollar eased 1-4 of a cent to 99 1-8 cents.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO, July 25:—(CP)—The Toronto Stock Market failed to maintain the buoyant tone and closing prices for the leaders were down fractions to full points from previous finals. Again a fair portion of net gains in the heavy industrial were retained.

Smelters was well up throughout the day and closed with a gain of two points, while International Nickel lost ground after an early burst of strength, closing off about 50 cents. C.P.R. Lost 1-4, Brazilian a point and Ford of Canada was up 1-4.

The Distillery Group slipped back from its common closing off a point at 33. Alcohol was unchanged at 32 1-2 and Distillery's Seagram unchanged at 22 1-2.

TORONTO MINES

TORONTO, July 25.—(CP)—After a demonstration of confidence manifested into the afternoon, listings on the Standard Mining Exchange today were somewhat more and selling came into the market. Prices eased in a higher one and point in each of the early gains. Volume was heavy in the silver and base metal issues.

Lake Shore, Gold Stocks closed down fractions from the day's final figures, although the whole group has gains around mid-day. Dome, Lake Shore and McIntyre slipped back 50 to $2.00 while Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves dropped 10 to 25 cents.

International Nickel featured the Base Metal Group with an early move up to $30 but with New York Market closed about mid-afternoon, Nickel dropped back and the close at 29 7-8 was off 7 cents for the day. Noranda also lost its early gain.

WHEAT CLOSES 5 CTS HIGHER

Bolstered by Constructive Buying in All Futures

Winnipeg, July 25—(CP)—Bolstered by constructive buying wheat prices moved good gains today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and wound up the session with advances of 3 1-2 to 5 cents. July delivery closed at $1 1-4, October at 23 3-4, December at 24 and May at 26 7-8.

The buoyant market marked the second day of recovering prices and reduced the heavy loss sustained in last week's calamitous trading. Buying for Chicago interests and appearance of a small quantity of speculative buying added to traders' cheerfulness.

Another bout of extreme hot weather in the western prairie country, accompanied by a definite lack of moisture, and firm overseas cables, strengthened the bulish sentiment.

Later advices on week end export business showed sales of 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was taken, but overnight business was reported negligible. Liverpool did not display as weak a trend as we expected would be the case here.

Coarse grains followed wheat along the upward trail.

Livestock

TORONTO, July 25.—(CP)—Early trade on the Toronto Live Stock Exchange was at a standstill today with no prices established on cattle and hogs. The cattle supplies have been much too heavy for the two weeks and shipment has been curtailed until the market accumulates. It closed.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Stock Yards: 1,000 cattle, 220 calves, 200 hogs, 430, sheep and lambs 720.

The only market was steady at $4.50 to $5.00 for good choice vealers with common selling down to $2.50.

Hogs were unsettled with no prices established up to 11 o'clock.

Lambs sold early at $2.00 for good ewes and wethers, $6.00 for bucks and $5.00 for spring lambs. Light sheep sold at; $2.50 per cwt.

Cattle and hogs were unquoted.

ARE THEY MR. AND MRS. CHAPLIN?

A persistent rumor has been circulating through Hollywood that Charles Chaplin, ace of comedians, and Paulette Goddard, brunette screen actress, are married. Recently they have been seen together constantly, frequently leaving Hollywood for days at a time aboard Chaplin's yacht. They are shown leaving a night club.

WILLIAM POWELL IN EXCITING ROMANCE AT THE BELLE

"Private Detective 62", a fast action melodrama with tasty love episodes, by Warner Bros., opens at the Belle Theatre today with William Powell in the stellar role.

The plot centers in a love racket in which a private detective deals with the methods of the racketeers, and one private detective agency to obtain or manufacture evidence for divorce purposes, at the instigation of jealous husbands and wives. Into the title role, as a high-class credited secret service operative carrying on various distasteful private business for want of a better job until he is ordered to frame a woman with whom he has fallen in love. Thereupon he quits his job and devotes the time and energy to saving the girl from an extremely delicate situation.

Margaret Lindsay, former stage favorite who made a sensational hit on the screen in "Counsellor-at-Law" the leading feminine role opposite Powell and is said to give a most striking performance. There is an unusually strong supporting cast which includes Arthur Byron, Ruth Donnelly, Gordon Westcott, Sheila Terry, Arthur Hohl, Natalie Moorehead and James Bell. All are well-known on both stage and screen.

The screen play by Rian James is based on an original story by Rauoul Walsh. "Private Detective 62" is said to be filled with exciting and thrilling episodes, in addition to the somewhat daring romantic sequences.

Michael Curtis, the director noted for his mystery dramas, has made the most of the plot to present a novel and unique picture with plenty of suspense.

Chatterton-Brent Story.

Ruth Chatterton is appearing on the same program in the most astounding characterization she has ever portrayed on the screen — in the title role of the First National picture "Lilly Turner".

The picture based on the stage success by Phillips Dunning and George Abbott, reveals the life behind the scenes of the players in the tawdry tent shows and the glamorous carnivals.

"Lilly Turner" is a vivid, realistic story with frivolity and pathos and real dramatic power. George Brent plays the leading masculine role opposite Miss Chatterton, the first time the two have appeared since their marriage last fall. Others in the cast include Frank McHugh, Ruth Donnelly and Guy Kibbee.

The directors was in the hands of William A. Wellman who directed Miss Chatterton in "Frisco Jenny".

"Dream Stuff" is the title of a funny Mack Sennett Star Comedy to be presented on the same program with the popular Canadian news.

JACK HULBERT'S NEW PICTURE WILL FOLLOW "GOOD COMPANIONS"

Tonight "The Good Companions" bid farewell to a tremendously large proportion of Belleville's appreciative audience. (Many waiting in line for over an hour to secure seats at the Belle Theatre box office).

Following "The Good Companions" (commencing Wednesday) Jack Hulbert in his new musical comedy "Love on Wheels" for three days, Friday to Sunday.

"Love on Wheels" is the most delightful musical comedy ever photographed production out of Gainsborough Gaumbton Studios.

Victor Saville, who directed "Love on Wheels", has made the finest film to his brilliant career, and Jack Hulbert who is to the fore every scene, displays in this story his way happily through a series of tuneful song numbers and humorous situations.

"Love on Wheels" is quite different from the usual run of comedies set to music—it is comic operetta and Louis Levy's fine musical commentary running all through is in perfect harmony with the whole style of this production. The song numbers are decidedly catchy and melodious. Hulbert, in fact the whole film is up to the British policy.

Selfridge's and the Green Line Omnibus Company, Ltd., combine, it is likely to be the settings for "Love on Wheels" and the result is that interest is held throughout by the authenticity of the story's locale.

Jack Hulbert is not a policeman in this film. He is a floor walker by name Fred Hopkins, in Gallop's colorful store, but his work is by no means colorful, for he is continually being sacked and re-engaged. The reason for the premises is that, as the General Manager (Edmund Gwenn) states, Gallop's customers are always right and somebody has got to be wrong it might as well be Hopkins! It is quite reasonable when you realize that Hopkins possesses the most effectively stupid face in Gallop's Store, and when a customer complains and Hopkins is brought forth as the culprit, his immediate denial is synathetically undisclosed by the said customer!

LINDBERGHS MAY RETURN BY STEAMER

Oodhaas, Greenland, July 25—(CP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who flew northward in their big monoplane to join an aerial mapping expedition, probably will not return to United States by air.

While the famous couple refuse to discuss pl.ns of the expedition, it is understood here that they are expect to work across the North Atlantic, marking a trail for mail and passenger service, and return by steamer from Europe.

Their plane would be packed on board the Norwegian steamer Jelling and somebody has got to be wrong it might as well be Hopkins! It is quite reasonable when you realize that Hopkins possesses the most effectively stupid face in Gallop's Store, and when a customer complains and Hopkins is brought

MAPLE LEAFS SUFFER 4TH LOSS IN ROW

SKEETERS WIN

Bisons Play Fifth Game in Which No Error Recorded

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Luckily for Newark Bears, their latest slump comes at a time when their two closest rivals for the International League lead, Rochester and Toronto, likewise slip in the throes of losing streaks.

The Bears dropped their third straight decision to the Baltimore Orioles yesterday, 7-5; but Rochester also suffered its third successive setback, bowing to Buffalo, Bisons 5-4, while Toronto was taking its fourth straight row, a 4-2 hooking from Montreal Royals. As a result Newark maintained its lead of a full Newark and a half over the Redwings while Toronto, in third place, was trails Rochester by 2 1-2 games.

Vince Barton's home run with the bases filled off Lefty Ogden gave Newark a 4-1 lead in the fourth but Baltimore tied it up in the sixth and won out in the seventh with a two-run outburst, featured by Manager Frank McGowan's homer.

Buffalo played its fifth successive errorless game and got effective pitching from Letty Yeatzed to beat the Bisons in a night game. Its fielding hurled well for Rochester but Jack Smith, Bisons' starter, scattered him for a double and single, drove in a run and scored two.

Buck Marrow held Montreal to three hits for seven innings but the Royals bopped on him for three hits while, with a base on balls and a long fly, scored all their runs in the eighth. The Leafs had bunched three hits, including Manny Mc-Gill's triple, for two runs in the first.

Bob Healy pitched Jersey City to an 8-5 victory over Albany in a night game which took almost four hour to complete, rain three times halted activities. Jersey City, clouting three Senator pitchers for 15 hits, led all the way. Joe Benes, new shooter scored homers, combined with Max Rosenfeld's batting getting four hits, has been batting getting four hits, two of them doubles. Max Rosenfeld hit a homer with one Stanford on base in the fifth.

SENATORS ON TOP BY HALF A GAME

Win Both Ends of a Twin Bill Against A's.

(By Herbert W. Baker, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Through the once impregnable pitching armor of Philadelphia Athletics' twin mound ages, Bob Grove and George Earnshaw, Washington Senators have blasted their way once more to the top of the American League standing.

Taking advantage of New York Yankees' idleness, the Senators battered the A's into defeat in both games of a double-header yesterday, 5-2 and 10-8 and moved into first place by a half game margin. The third place Athletics, at the same time, fell to a point 11 games behind the Yankees, thus emphasizing again the two clubs character of the pennant race.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Some time ago Ernie Gilberg of Napanee arranged to have the Belleville Nationals play on the "Parnilees Town" and play an exhibition game against the Kingston. The date was set for July 26th, or Wednesday afternoon. Yesterday the National's executive received official word from Napanee cancelling the engagement.

x x x

Tomorrow the Nationals make their final trip of the season east until next fall and meet the league leading team in Kingston. The Fenies have practically assured themselves of first position in the league and perhaps the backless Nationals will have a bit of luck and come down in front of the champions just once.

x x x

Manager Mills called the locals together for a practice that takes place this evening. Just who will toss 'em for the locals is not as yet known although "Chuck" Fournier will likely dish them up for the tournament. The locals may take Napanee a couple of pranksing jaunts to give 'em their initial taste of senior ball.

x x x

While the Nats are battling down east B. A. Fanning's local Victorias do into the league leading Picton baseball team on the local Fair Grounds, Following their defeat at the hands of the lowly Brighton team on Saturday last the Gerowmen had a few days' beats to the wall and have to win this tussle to secure themselves a potential first place in the league play-offs.

x x x

The Victorias had a lengthy practice last night following, which it was definitely announced that "Red" Wilkins, their ace right hander, would get the pitching assignment here for Bowden and Casey for relief purposes. In all probability Manager Gerow will use his ace hurler, Ron Church against the Vics, leaving "Letty" Phillips in reserve. The Picton congregation have lost but two games then for the season one to the Vics and the other to Walter Gerow's Cibbardites.

x x x

Manager Vanever openly boasts of his local infield in the league race. Cole, Mighton, Louvens and Rocks. The league leaders recently had the services of Jack Cole, a potential first baseman in the league play-offs.

NO CONTEST IS DECISION

South End and College Hill Clubs to Battle Again Thursday

When darkness set in and terminated the play-off game between the South End A. C. and the College Hill Cubs at Coleman Flats last evening no contest was declared and the game will be replayed on the same diamond this week with the college Hill lads having a no hit game only to weaken in the sixth when the Cubs scored their only counter.

Despite the fact that the S.E.A.C. batters nicked Frank Farraro, on the hilltop for the Cubs, for eight hits they failed to score until the first half of the sixth when on two hits and an error by short stop the "south enders" bagged two runs and looked to be potential winners. Smith literally had the Cub batters lashed in the palm of his whirled for and let them down with two hits. Wildness on his part, however, cost costly errors mitigated his chances of the S.E.A.C. Frank Farraro, hurling for the Cubs, was somewhat steadier on the hilltop but again his team mates kicked and bobbed the ball around for the runners in scoring position in three different innings.

Kiser with three singles, Barriage with a brace of three base hits and Palmer with a lusty double led the S.E.A.C. at bat. Simpson and Jack Murray rounded the only two runs registered by the Cubs. Rigby with a nice running catch and Lepeotte with three put-outs in left supplied the fielding sensations for the Cubs while Cornell, Barriage and Palmer olayed good defensive ball for the S.E.A.C.

SMUGGLES FAMILY IN

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 25 (CP) —United States immigration and border patrol officers were not quick enough to halt a small family of Greeks from smuggling into the country via the girder route here.

The family, a female racoon and two young racoons were seen on the arch girders of the railway bridge making steady progress towards the U. S.

Whale meat, which tastes very much like beef, is a standard meal in Japan.

TIGER

Boulevers were gathering nuts under the hickory trees, and shells she followed their scampering movements up the trees she saw a wedge of wild geese far above.

Then she turned back to the tight again. Peter was down. Joe's eyes were terribly open and his face swollen. Joe was slowly tightening his strangle hold upon his throat.

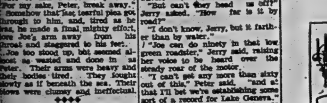
CHAPTER 23

And then as Jerry had once called to Joe in the battle on the yacht he now called to Peter.

She was not afraid for herself, only for him, and she pleaded with him to hear her and be strong and pull himself free. Joe was merciless she told him. He would not loose hate to kill Peter, Jerry cried. "For my sake, Peter, break away." Somehow like Joe, Peter still was fighting to his hand, and, lifted as he was, made a desperate effort to throw Joe's arm away from his throat and disengage his feet.

Joe too stood up, but seemed almost as wearied and dazed by the struggle. Their arms were heavy and their bodies tired. They fought slowly as if beneath the sea and their blows were clumsy and ineffectual.

But Peter seemed to be regaining his strength and Jerry urged him on.



His youth and clean life were coming to his aid. He had thrown in a harmful blood which seemed to gain in strength instead of weaken. Joe's head was being knocked from side to side. He was breathing heavily.

Peter drove in a crushing blow which brought him to his knees. She was up. Then down again for an easy fourteen.

And now Jerry was holding Peter in her arms and kissing the places he had been hurt. They weren't even looking at Joe and they were not thinking about him.

They were only aware of each other, and that the day was very clear and bright and that the world was good.

There seemed to be something that they wanted to say to each other. Something desperately important and very beautiful, but they could not quite determine what it was. And Jerry helped Peter down to the clear lake and bathed his face with her handkerchief, and

A Slug Crashed Through The Glass Of The Windshield.

Peter despite his hurts, was very gay.

"This was a splendid week-end after all," Peter laughed, and Jerry kissed his cut lips and told him not to try to talk for awhile.

"You're perfectly magnificent, Peter," she said, "you looked so young and clean, and he so cruel and villainously old and disfigured."

"It's a shame to have to beat up an old fellow like that," Peter said. "Let's take him in circle of water from the spring over there."

"Well, we could undertake that much I guess," Jerry said.

But when they had started back to Joe with the drink they realized that he was gone. And, although the house was not visible from the clearing, they realized he had undoubtedly gone for help.

Then they heard men running and they knew that no reason at all to be sorry for Joe Middleton, and this they must think of some way to control the moment or they would be cornered in the clearing or hunted out of the branch and hills like prairie chickens.

Then they rushed again the speedboat tied to the pier and Peter pulling Jerry along, got her to the boat and helped her in.

He leaned quickly over the control, pulling the starter button and gave the engine some gas. It refused to start.

Peter heard footsteps coming near, and they heard a cry as the first of the men stepped into the clearing and saw them in the speedboat. In another moment three shots splashed in the water beside the boat and one caromed off the metal prow and went singing out over the lake.

"Duck, Jerry, and leave his to me."

Peter slipped the rope from over a the pier which it was tied, jumping the boat away from the pier, and with the remaining bottle not more hundred feet away got the engine started. The last Wood roared like an airplane motor.

Peter turned the boat as sharply as he was able, and headed it out, shifted them again and giving the engine every bit of gas available, headed 'off toward the town at Lake Geneva at a fifty-mile clip.

Bullets splashed around them. Faintly over the roar of the engine they heard the rat-tat-tat of a machine gun. And once a slug crashed through the glass of the windshield.

But now they were beyond range and the big motor was purring beautifully. The water spread in a wide green fan behind them, sparkling in the sunshine like the tail of a peacock. The shore line seemed to be moving slowly backward. Big summer homes drifted by as if upon a colored film.

Now Williams bay was hidden behind Cedar Point, and the big observatory had disappeared from view. They had crossed the lake and were following the north shore, zooming along through the slight waves.

"But can't they head us off?" Jerry asked. "Isn't there a way for us to get to it is by road?"

"I don't know, Jerry, but it farther than by water.

"Joe can do plenty in that low green roadster," Jerry said, raising her voice to be heard over the steady roar of the motor.

"I can't get any more than sixty out of this," Peter said, "and at that I'll bet we're establishing some sort of a record for Lake Geneva."

"And when we reach the town?"

"I don't think they have more than a couple of trains a day," Peter said: "we'll have to hire a car if possible. And the faster that one is the better."

"Joe didn't think they will be waiting for us there when we arrive? Joe's not a fool, I mean."

"We'll have to take a chance on that," Peter said.

They sat very close together on the seat and Peter put his arm around Jerry, and they knew that whatever they would have to face together they would face it together. Jerry wasn't frightened now, but she scanned the southern shore watching if somewhere among those trees that cars loaded with armed men were racing toward the town to head them off.

And then Jerry thought to look in the pockets and compartments of the boat. Undoubtedly there were guns somewhere here. Joe was never very far away from one of his weapons.

As she had expected she found guns. Three of them, and plenty of ammunition. Two were big Colts and the third was a rather useless little .25 which had perhaps been used to shoot turtles.

"Good girl Jerry," Peter said approvingly as she showed him the two big Colts, but he laughed at the .25. "We can't do very much with that popgun, I'm afraid."

"Popgun or not, I'm taking it along," Jerry said.

How long it seemed to take them to cover that five miles! In reality it was scarcely more than as many minutes, but to Jerry's overwrought mind their terrific speed through the water was all too slow. But now they were pulling in to the big pier past lovely homes bordering the lake, and now they were leaping out and tying the boat to the wharf.

"Good kingdom for a fast car," said Jerry, where do you think we will find one?"

"Let's try that garage up the street Peter suggested, and then we will see if it has much to the curiosity of the populace.

"Have you a car we can rent in a hurry?" Jerry said as they came up breathless.

"Well, now, let me see," drawled the sexy-going garage man, fitting his pipe slowly and conscientiously. "What do you want it for?"

"Oh, good God," said Peter, "do we have to stop to go into that?"

"It ain't I mind letting you have the car," said the garage man, making himself more comfortable in his chair, "but I'd like to know if I'm ever going to get it back."

"You'll get it back," Peter snapped, "and now for Lord's sake let's get going."

"I'm not so sure you two look honest," drawled the man.

Then Jerry saw that Peter and Jerry realized for the first time what a peculiar sight they presented. Jerry was very ragged indeed and disarrayed as any girl might be after a sixty-mile-an-hour speedboat ride. But Peter, who had hastily put on his shirt after the battle but had forgotten his coat, was bloody and torn from head to heel in his fight.

"We can't stop to argue," Jerry said in her most winsome manner, and at the same time shot a fear-looking intelligent man like yourself will understand that we are in difficulty and will help us out."

"Trying to elope, sakes the garage man.

"Well, perhaps," said Jerry. "At least that's as good an explanation as any. And now how about the car?"

"You'll have to sign up and leave good-sized deposit," the man said.

Peter. I'll give you $100." Peter said, and now for Lord's sake let's get going."

"I'm not so sure you two look honest," drawled the man.

"Now, I didn't see them," said the garage man, and the sedan drove on.

"Try a few more," Peter and Jerry waited breathlessly and the garage man came back to their car.

"They're gone now," he said. "Better keep to the back roads for a while. I didn't like them fellers looks."

They drove out of the dark garage into the glare of the sun, turned off the main highway onto the back streets of the town, then cut through woods and pastured hills into the open country.

For the moment they had lost their pursuers and they were contented to drive slowly, looking about them and talking quietly.

They were filled with the quietude of the Wisconsin autumn, for there is nothing so beautiful as autumn there.

The corn in yellow shocks. The purple wild asters and golden rod, the flaming ivy leaves clinging to fences and telephone poles. Wild grapes, hanging beneath purple and gold leaves. Everywhere the scarlet of maples and the leather brown of the oak leaves, and the mullein stalks standing above their wide black leaves of healing.

They passed boys and girls shaking down hickory nuts and black walnuts and sometimes butternuts, and once on a hill among the red of the sumac they saw a boy and girl of perhaps 20 sitting very close together and looking out across a blue and hazy valley toward a distant town.

And they found it hard to believe that within the last hour they had feared for their lives, or that within the next few days they would have to fly for their lives, or that within the next few hours they would have to be carried by plane they had run the gamut of all human emotion—the joy of his arrival, the sorrow for Mary Ann, the peaceful evening with their children and their plan to call Joe Middleton's hand.

And then the mad chase under Wacker drive and the wild jump across the opening bridge, the conference of war with Harriett and the dangerous trip to the lake mill.

There at the mill and later at Joe Middleton's estate they had fated death together. They had known hatred for a common enemy and had struggled side by side to effect a common end.

And now there seemed to be something deeper than any of these approaching, although Peter still thought of Jerry as 'little Jerry', and she still held to her belief that he was only a gorgeous

They were struggling for something which just evaded them. A kind of vision which seemed to gather form and outline as they gazed along the country road.

After a while Peter stopped the car upon a high hill, where it seemed as if they could see forever over fields and woods lying like a multicolored carpet across the world.

And Peter said: "I've been wishing for something all afternoon, but I don't know what I've wished for."

"I've been seeing children playing in the big barnyards and smelling smoke coming from the big chimneys of little houses.

"Yes, Peter."

"I'm not a rough sort of fellow without much poetry in my make-up," Peter said, "I don't say things well. And I can't explain just what I mean. But this afternoon...."

"I seem to have a left you, Peter. I have been feeling it, too."

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

In another part of the jungle events were transpiring that were to entangle Tarzan in the meshes of and was about to turn back to Rallhead. Wilbur a great adventure. A black porter caught his foot Stimbol had come as Jimmy's guest and pride but in a hanging vine and stumbled, throwing his load had proved rather a poor sport. Now he was disto the ground. Of such trifles are destinies made! This gruntled by Blake's decision to return home. Suddenly the load, falling from the black porter's shoulders, crashed forward into Stimbol, hurling him to the ground.

Stimbol and the black porter scrambled to their feet. Before he could repeat the outrage, Blake and his wife, who by the negroes who had with him by the shoulder, wheeled him about and struck seized the laughing Jane Clayton, were upon the scene. The porter grinned. Stimbol was amid the accident. The porter grinned. Stimbol was silenced by a sledge hammer blow from Blake's fell, rolled over and reached for his automatic. Beclenched fist. Blake had often covered with fore he could draw it Blake had him covered with the face that felled him, and as he lay there Stimbol a .45. "Cut that!" said Blake, crisply. "Now get up ricked him savagely, yelling: "Take that, you and listen to me."

Mollisons Arrive in New York on Stretchers in a Borrowed Plane

Welcomed at Floyd Bennett Field by Large Crowd

BOTH INJURED

Both Put To Bed in Hotel Suite For Long Rest

New York, July 25—(AP)— The flying Mollisons, who set bravely out from Pendine, Wales in their own plane only to reach New York in a flying ambulance, settled down today for "a good long rest" and said little about their plans for the future.

Capt. Jim and the former Amy Johnson, stars of British aviation, arrived last night from Bridgeport where their plane Seafarer was wrecked Sunday night within sight of the lights of New York.

They came as passengers—in a rented cabin plane converted into a sky ambulance for the trip. They lay nearly back on white hospital pillows. A nurse and two physicians sat beside them. A four-piece escort of honor, led by Commander Frank Hawks accompanied them.

When the planes set down at Floyd Bennett field, a crowd estimated at two thousand gave way to a sympathetic silence as policemen lifted the two young fliers from an automobile.

Mrs. Mollison, clad in bright yellow, her British newly dressed, grimaced in pain. Her right hand and her legs were bandaged.

Capt. Mollison wore a bandage on his head, where 15 stitches had been taken. He appeared utterly tired. A woman in the crowd waved her hand and cried:

"Scotland, forever, Jimmie!"

Mollison lifted his head and waved weakly and waved back.

"All we want to do is go to bed for a long rest and Amy, hugging a bouquet that the city's officials greeted them with.

They were put to bed in a hotel suite. The official reception will await their recovery. Meanwhile, they have expressed how they cannot get a plane to continue their flight, which was to have taken them to Baghdad and then back to England.

TECHNICIANS OUT OF WORK

Hollywood Scene of Strike of Great Importance

Hollywood, July 25 (AP)—Motion picture studios endeavored to maintain the production of current entertainment for movie patrons today as 5,000 more technicians struck.

Union workers who made celluloid romance for Main street and the Metropolitan Rialto left their jobs their predicament was because the studios yesterday hired non-union men to replace the 5,000 second technicians who struck Saturday midnight.

Producers attributed the trouble solely to an argument between two unions as to which should have sway over the sound men.

The stage employees' organization announced studio musicians might strike at any time if their demands for a 40 hour week and increased wages were not granted.

The producers replied promptly by advertising for workers to take plant those on strike.

Eleven studios signed the advertisements. Production at two of these had stopped altogether.

300 ANSWERS IN AN HOUR

U. S. Industry Responding to Higher Wages And Shorter Hours

(By James Cope, Associated Press Staff Writer)

WASHINGTON, July 25—A flood of telegraphed pledges answered today President Roosevelt's appeal to the United States for immediate enlistment of all employers under the blanket agreement to raise wages and create new jobs.

Hardly had he finished last night the plain-worded, direct call for patriotic and unquestioning acceptance of the voluntary and individual employer-pledges to raise wages and shorten hours, before the answers began to come in. Within an hour 300 promises had come. A few more minutes and the number doubled and still there appeared no end to the flow.

The President and Hugh S. Johnson, the man who is running the industrial recovery unit, were jubilant yesterday as they watched. A White House Secretary said it "was the greatest spontaneous outburst that had greeted any of the President's utterances."

His aphorism was terse.

"We are not going through an other war," he said. "That is sure. . . . It is time for courageous action, and the Recovery Bill gives us the means to conquer unemployment. The opposition is simply this:

"If all employers will act together to shorten hours and raise wages a few cents per hour, back to work. No employer will suffer.

"Only a relative level of competitive cost will achieve by the same agreement for all. It is time for a decisive group should jag or shirk, this great opportunity will pass, by and we will go into another desperate winter. This must not happen.

CANNIFTON THREATENED

and assisted in every way to stem the advance of flames. Before any organized attempt at fire-fighting could be mustered the Callery-owned house had become a mass of red house had become a mass of red flames, at which time the local fire department was called to the scene. Despite their efforts, assisted along with the bucket brigade, that had been improvised saved the other buildings from the spreading fire.

Fire Spreads

Once the fire in the first building gained headway it rapidly spread until it practically enveloped the Canniffton Post Office, now occupied by Miss Mary Callery as a general store. When the flames gutted the frame building they soon spread and advanced into the rear of the store, where coal oil and gasoline were stored and from there through the building before them, despite the efforts of the fighters, who by now were centring their efforts on saving the newer building. The two buildings completely demolished by the fire were owned by Mr. C. A. Callery and Miss Mary Callery of Canniffton, which is the home for the time of the blazing inferno was occupied by Mr. Harold Callery, a brother of Mrs. Although not severely burned was scorched considerably.

Goodman Recently Convicted

The fire originated in a vacant house previously occupied by John Goodman, who was recently convicted under the C.O.D. and the house has been vacant for the past two months. The flames soon spread, fanned by a north wind until they took into their wave the old Canniffton Post Office.

Owing to the fact that the Callery store boasted of a thick tin roofing the flames and sparks failed to spread southward, thus saving the Waits' boggs, to the south. The efforts of the Belleville fire department, in preventing the blaze from spreading into wooden-shingled trees, telephone poles and nearby buildings, saved the village of Canniffton.

The fire, which broke out about 11.30 p.m., had gained rapid headway after 2 a.m. Tuesday morning and at that hour Belleville was summoned to assist that a further fire might also eventually wipe out the entire village.

After the fire had been controlled by a certain extent Mr. C. A. Callery was approached by the Canniffton-Intelligencer and in which he said that although both buildings had been completely gutted by the fire, insurance the compensation assured would never reconstruct the buildings.

Furniture Removed

After the fire had first been discovered the bulk of the furniture in the second building, occupied by Miss Mary Callery, was removed. Some furniture in the Waits' home and the home of Mr. C. Callery on the eastern side of the road was also moved into a place of safety.

Thomas Jarrett, Trenton, is New Police Magistrate

Has Been Connected With Journalism For Many Years

TRENTON, July 25. (Special)—It was officially announced on Saturday, that Mr. Thomas Jarrett J.P., had been appointed Police Magistrate of Trenton. He was appointed Justice of the Peace in 1926, and during the illness of Magistrate O'Rourke, considerable Police Court duties have been performed by him.

Mr. Jarrett has in all, spent about twenty-five years of a busy life in Trenton. After an absence of about ten years, fourteen years ago, he left an editorial post on The Toronto Telegram, and returned to Trenton encouraged by the officers of the Board of Trade and other citizens, and after a short connection with The Trenton Advance, he founded the Quinte Sun, of which he has since been editor.

Years have taken an active interest in the affairs of the town, and during 1931 and 1932 was Mayor of Trenton, councillor, being chairman of the Court of Revision. He is vice-president of the Trenton Rotary Club, being a charter member, and formerly was a member of the local Mothers' Allowance Board; was a member of the Trenton Canada Club, and is identified with St. George's Church.

The new Police Magistrate first came to Trenton in 1911, and he was, for some time identified with The Trenton Advocate, then published by the late Senator Clark. Mr. F. J. O'Rourke, He and several other prominent citizens founded The Canadian Graphic, as a monthly magazine, which was conducted by him and became a weekly, with a number of leading Canadian writers and artist contributing to it, the late J. Castell Hopkins being associated with it. It was eventually succeeded by The Canadian Courier.

Chairman of Board

During his earlier residence in Trenton, he served for ten years as a member of the Trenton Board of Education, of which he was chairman for two years. Both he and Mrs. Jarrett were actively identified with Trenton's first Public Library Board in 1908, he assisting in organizing the position of managing editor of The Gazette, from 1911 to 1913. During this time he served on the first Haileybury Ship-building Board for over a year, and in the Town Council for three years, being chairman of the Court of Revision and the Finance Committee and acting Mayor during the illness of the then Mayor.

He answered a call to the west in 1913, accepting a position at Portage la Prairie, as editor and manager of the Daily Graphic. There but in the second year of the war, he left to enlist, but was rejected as he fill an editorial position on The Daily Mail and News, and for many years was the generalissimo time for newspapers and a couple of years the old Canniffton Post Office, now occupied by Miss Mary Callery as a general store. When the flames gutted the frame building they soon spread and advanced into the rear of the store, where coal oil and gasoline were stored and from there through the building before them, despite the efforts of the fighters, who by now were centring their efforts on saving the newer building. The two buildings completely demolished by the fire were owned by Mr. C. A. Callery and Miss Mary Callery of Canniffton, which is the home for the time of the blazing inferno was occupied by Mr. Harold Callery, a brother of Mrs. Although not severely burned was scorched considerably.

THREE DROWNED IN CANAL AS CABLE SNAPS

Guide Line of Workboat Breaks, Pulls Boat Under With Men in Old Canal

Three St. Catharines Men Spreading Netting to Protect Course

AT ST. CATHARINES

Superintendent of Sewage One of Victims of Tragedy

St. Catharines, Ont., July 26 (CP).—Three men were drowned in the old Welland Ship Canal near here today when their work boat sank as they were spreading wire netting to keep debris off the Canadian Henley course.

Only one of the bodies, recovered later, was identified positively. It was that of William Hughes, 60, superintendent of sewage for St. Catharines. The other two were identified tentatively as William Jones and George Battle, St. Catharines, relief workers.

The boat was believed to have sunk when wash from a broken cable carried it to the bottom. The cable was stretched from shore to shore as a guide line on which the boat travelled through motive power supplied by a winch on one side of the canal.

James Patterson, city workman, who was operating the winch assisted police and firemen in dragging operations.

Patterson said the cable snapped on the opposite shore to that on which he was working. On the far shore it was snubbed to a tree.

"The cable," he said, "snapped at the other side of the canal and whiled the boat under it. Hughes bobbed up a little way down the canal, but I did not see the other men."

Batterson shouted for help and drew attention of J. W. Lark, neighboring farmer, who rushed to the bank in time to see Hughes sink for the last time.

St. Catharines fire and police departments were called and the Welland Ship Canal launch "Adventurer" was summoned from Port Dalhousie. George McNulty, aboard the launch, took charge of dragging after Patterson and Carl had directed him to the spot where they saw Hughes sink.

James McCrath and Jas. Smiley assisted in small boats.

After two hours constant grappling searchers raised the sunken boat, a metal craft, and dragged it ashore. There was no sign of the bodies. One oar remained in a rowlock.

Dr. A. R. Macdonald, Port Dalhousie coroner, watched operations from the bank.

Southampton, England, July 26 —(CP Cable)— A thousand children and 5000 adults looked on today while the King's yacht, the Victoria and Albert, steamed slowly into the entrance and severed a thin red, white and blue ribbon to formally open the world's largest graving dock.

The dock is principal feature of harbor improvements begun which will cost the southern railway $65,- 000,000. On board the royal yacht were the King and Queen and the Duke and Duchess of York.

The ribbon lay on the placid water and floating flowers swirled around the bow as the Royal vessel steamed majestically into the dock which is 1,200 feet long and 135 feet wide. To the tune of "Here's Health Unto His Majesty" the King, accompanied by the Queen, then stepped ashore.

It is true today as ever that the welfare of this country is largely bound up with sea-borne traffic," said His Majesty after declaring the dock open.

"I look upon the opening of the largest graving dock in the world as a great augury for the future of Southampton. I rejoice to think its building has given the blessing of employment to many.

"Their Majesties were welcomed by Lord Middleton, better known as General Jack Seely, Commander of the Canadian Cavalry Brigade in the War, who is Lord Lieutenant of Hampshire.

PLANE DOWN REST ON WAY

Armada Reaches Shoal Harbor, Nfld., And May be Delayed

Shoal Harbor, Nfld., July 26—(CP Cable) General Italo Balbo brought 23 of his homeward bound seaplanes down here today, ending the third leg of their flight back to Orbetello, Italy, from the Century of Progress Exposition, Chicago.

The great squadron, with one plane out of formation and down at Victoria Harbor, P. E. I., completed its 500-mile hop from Shediac, N.B., in a little more than four hours.

A report from Captain Boyle, Commander of the ship forced down, said he would need a new water pump before he could continue. It was anticipated two days would elapse before the pump could be installed.

May Delay Armada

Victoria Harbour, P. E. I., July 26 —(CP)—Captain Rovin, pilot of the Italian seaplane forced down here by engine trouble, sent a wireless message to Shediac shortly before noon requesting assistance.

While he did not speak English, fishermen who towed the plane ashore said they understood he expected the pump reported early in the part needed for repairs.

Captain Rovin was accompanied by Lieut. Aini, Second pilot, Sergt. Cipellotti, mechanic, and Corporal Martinelli, radio operator.

One of the aviators knew a few words of English and said "too fast" "too hot", evidently meaning the engine had been overheated.

The plane alighted about a mile and a half from shore and was towed in to the wharfside by a boat from Victoria Harbour.

Fifty Years Ahead of World Says Shaw on 77th Birthday

Master of Satire Calls Delegates to Conference in "Museum of Fossils" Men Who Have Messed Own Countries' Affairs

London, July 26 (CP)— George Bernard Shaw by his own reckoning should be 27 years old today, although the calendar says he was born 77 years ago today.

"I am 50 years ahead of the rest of the world" is the way he puts it.

Mr. Shaw, white-bearded master of paradox and sarcasm is sleeping gaily down the years, walking and woodchopping and keeping rigidly to a vegetable diet without alcohol or tobacco, which he has followed for decades.

He has been exceptionally quiet since his return from his world tour last April. His only notable comment had to do with the economic conference in London. "The conference," was biting enough to satisfy his most exacting admirers.

When you examine the multitudinous of the members of this conference, you find that they are gentlemen who have made a despicable mess of their own affairs or national affairs in their own countries," he said. "Now they have come to the Kensington Geological Museum—a museum of fossils—to help those they can not help in their own countries out of the mess other countries may do so."

Dives in Water from Overloaded Boat to Save Fiancee and Friends, Drowns

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 27. —(CP)—When Albert Sloan dived into the St. Mary's River from an overloaded boat he did so that four women and a crippled man would have a better chance to reach shore in the storm tossed craft and saved the life of his fiancee Nellie Mayberry, Detroit, it was learned here today.

Miss Mayberry had gone with seven others in the boat late Monday evening to travel from Alcott Beach to Bay Mills. While the party was half a mile from shore the wind became so strong that the boat was in danger of being overturned. As there was a crippled man and two children in the boat, Miss Mayberry was to have been married to Albert Sloan this week

TWENTY THREE U.S. CARS IN HALF HOUR

The extent of tourist traffic through this city has been revealed by actual count. Standing on Bridge Street at the four corners just before seven o'clock last evening, a local citizen in less than half an hour counted a load of twenty-three cars bearing U.S. license plates, stopping for the traffic light. Practically every State in the Union was represented.

TRAINING SHIP ON WAY HOME

Although sailors from this district were on the lookout Tuesday afternoon for the appearance of the Norwegian training ship, Norlandet, now en route to her home port from Chicago, none reported seeing her pass down the lake. It is believed the boat kept well out in the open water. Passing Kingston the ship had her sails furled and was being towed by a launch. She had been one of the attractions at the World's Fair.

SPANKING BREEZE FOR PUNT RACES

A spanking breeze from the east which blew steadily created an ideal day for the racing punts which assembled in the local harbor for the regular weekly races. One of the largest fields yet seen awaited the flash of the starter's gun about the afternoon. Interest was high in all classes of punts owing to the additional challenge pennants offered for the races.

DIFFICULT TO DO PROPER WORK

Despite the city orchestra against it and the warning signs erected in the downtown area, all night parking of cars in the business sections of the city is still being carried on, making it very difficult for the operator of the street sweeping machine to carry on his work of cleaning the city after midnight. On account of the parked machines many of the gutters here are left on the streets by the sweeper each morning.

FIRE ALARMS IN TWENTY FOUR HRS.

In an apparent attempt to create a new high record in a 24 hour period runs for the department, members of the local fire department were given another run late Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mr. Harry Vanover, John Street south where piles of cut and dried grass were burning vigorously in the rear yard. It was the fifth alarm in 24 hours.

WELCOME RELIEF FROM HEAT WAVE

Temperatures continued to side on Wednesday as cooling winds held away over the district. During the past four days a 15 degree drop in temperatures has brought comfort to a long stressed people and the heat wave, which held the district for two weeks. On Wednesday the highest recorded mark was registered at 80 above. Low during the morning was 53. For Tuesday high was 82 and low 52. Swimmers in the Bay of Quinte found the water just to their likin on Wednesday and the average temperature was given at 71.

SEVEN SINGLE MEN REFUSE A JOB

An attempt by officials of the Central Relief Bureau in the city to get seven single unemployed men to work this week on the project of the Air Camp on the Trent Road ailed. Not a single one of a dozen or more on the list held by the Bureau would accept the position offered. All had excuses. Some had fishing rights others appointments thin. It was easily observed that the work had little appeal. Replacements will be called for from time to time at the camp to replace men, who are leaving for other jobs.

LAWN SOCIAL BY V. O. N. COMMITTEE

In order to bolster the funds for the V.O.N. work in this city the committee have arranged for a lawn social on St. Agnes' Manor lawn, Dundas street. Arrangements have been completed for the sale of Home Cooking on the Ground, the articles offered for sale having been donated. Letters to The Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer.

Kindly permit me a space in this paper to discuss a much needed publication on the treatment the newspapers are getting just now from the waterworks dept.

When my water bill came in for July to January I noticed an increase of six dollars a year charged and I have no increase in taps. I went to the department office to know this six dollars deducted as a mistake, but they have so far refused to do it. I have tried to get Mr. Austin, waterworks department manager to rectify it for me but am continually seen on a wild goose chase from one department member to another, with the hope of locating him with the same excuse he had just left and we don't know when he will be in.

I think it's just about time an investigation was made into the cost of the water pumping expenses.

Now that the hours have been cut down it certainly is not costing as much to operate the filtration plant so what is the desperate need of the raising of the water rates?

I have only two inside taps and a toilet, yet I am charged sixteen dollars a year for this. There is something radically wrong with the rates somewhere and the sooner the rates are put on a scientific basis the better for all concerned.

There seems according to my investigation, different charges for different houses. I am paying more for my two taps and toilet than some houses with all conveniences.

I certainly hope the water rates discussion will soon be ironed out as it is time something was done about it.

50 Years Ago Atlanta Crowned Champ of Fresh Water Sailing Sloops

Boat Built in Local Water And Sailed by Capt. Covert

LOCAL CREW

William "King" Rogers Tells How Sloop Won Fisher Cup

There's a salty tang of reminiscence in the memory of Mr. William "King" Rogers of this city this week. For it is just fifty years ago, almost to the day, that he, with a party of other Belleville sailors, packed their sea-chests and stepped aboard the yacht Atalanta to begin the first leg of a journey, that was to lead them to international fame and glory.

The memory of that boat — as staunch a hull as ever sailed fresh water—is still fresh in the minds of Mr. Rogers and other old-time sailing men who foregather nights along the water front to compare past and present performances. But they speak of the Atalanta in a kindlier tone than of the other boats they knew. They have never forgotten that she was once champion of the lakes.

Staunchly built and solid was the Atalanta. With a waterline length of 47 feet and a beam of 18 feet, 8 inches, she had the lines of a greyhound. She was built in Flint's lumber mills in West Belleville by Captain Culshett, master boat builder as well as master mariner. And she was owned by Mr. Charles Hatton. Although memory does not recall the full crew which sailed on the boat it is known that Captain Covert was in charge when she left Belleville with Joe Lambert, William Hazlitt, Edward Oatman, William Rogers and others.

She left Belleville during the last week in July, 1883. With sails slightly belled by the fresh wind an uneventful trip was made down the Bay of Quinte to the Upper Gap, thence up Lake Ontario to Port Dalhousie, and through the old Welland Canal to Buffalo. Here in the shipyards of Buffalo a new main boom that had been ordered was fitted to the boat. Leaving Buffalo she then made the trip up Lake Erie to the Detroit River, along the St. Clair River the Straits of Mackinaw, then Milwaukee and Chicago.

Four Boats in Race

In the glittering afternoon sun of that July day at Chicago, four boats jockeyed for position at the starting buoys awaiting the gun, competing with the Belleville built and manned Atalanta was The Wasp. The boys, both Chicago owned and the trim yacht Rene of Toronto. The race was for the Fisher Cup, donated by Commodore Fisher, of Chicago, and a $500 purse.

A dull boom of the brass cannon at the judges' stand, and all four boats got away in a close and even start, with all sails jammed on to catch the first of the stiff breeze that blew. Forging steadily ahead, the Atalanta gradually widened the slight distance between herself and the nearest contender, with Captain Covert holding a steady course with firm hand on the wheel. It was a close and exciting race, one that would bring a thrill to even the most seasoned sailor. Then, something snapped. A spinnaker boom, loaded to the limit with canvas, broke and carried away sail and lines into the water. While the Atalanta rolled helplessly, barely maintaining steerage way, the crew fought with broken boom and dragging sail to clear the wreckage. Three other boats passed the Atalanta, steadily forging ahead in what was now a three cornered race. Tough luck, sympathized Belleville residents, who had been advised of the results of the race by wire.

With that race over, and with broken boom replaced, the Atalanta spread her sails and headed again down the Great Lakes to Cobourg, where the Fall Regatta was just about to begin. This was closer home to Belleville, and interest among young and old ran high.

Ten first class lake sailing yachts were entered in the regatta. They had come from all over the Lakes both from the Canadian and American side. And expert sailors manned each.

Again came the boom of the starting cannon, and again the Atalanta, always fastest on the getaway, forged steadily ahead in a strong breeze that blew. Every available inch of canvas was crowded on by the eager crew in their attempt to create a record time for the course, as well as come in first. Then, another accident. Crowded beyond its capacity, this time the jib mast carried away in the strong breeze, and falling with its weight broke the balloon jib pole. With crew working frantically at repairing the damage and with every bit of canvas which remained, billowed out, the Atalanta in spite of the accident, managed to beat the nearest contender by twenty-two minutes. As the Atalanta passed the finish line amid the cheers of the crowd on shore, the next boat was just rounding Gull lighthouse, with three miles yet to go.

Challenge Issued

Following this heartening win the Atalanta then challenged the winner of the Chicago race, Cora, skippered by Captain Bell.

Over a twenty mile course that was laid out both boats hauled during that afternoon, with but a few feet separating them as they rounded buoy after buoy into the straight away. Revenge was sweet. This time the Atalanta managed to best her former conqueror in the same time of sixteen minutes. It was a neat clean-cut win.

Back to Belleville and the plaudits of its citizens, came the victorious Atalanta, bearing the Fisher Cup. For some time it was held in this city, and then one summer day another race was arranged between the Cora—Kanuka to their defeat —and the Atalanta. This time a course was laid out in the Bay of Quinte. History would like to record the fact that the Atalanta again defeated her closely pursuing foe, but truth was that the Atalanta was beaten handily in her own water. The Cora rounded the course like a scared cat and again carried off the cup in triumph. Later the same cup was won from the Nora by the forward of Rochester. Throughout the years since then the cup has reposed in the club rooms of the Rochester Yacht Club, awaiting the time when Belleville will again build another Atalanta to wrest possession of the oft fought for trophy.

But, as old-timers will agree, fifty years has made a great difference in sail racing boats in the Bay of Quinte.

ANOTHER TOWER OF BABEL

Man's ingenuity can not be cramped.
Today his intellect is as keen as steel, his knowledge of what pleases was never more diversified than at this time. The success of entertainments everywhere in the civilized world shows, and his plans can actually be carried out with the aid of science.

There were seven wonders in the old world and there have been new wonders in more recent times. And there is likely to be a great wonder by 1937 when Paris is to hold a great exposition. It is to be the "Lighthouse of the World", a tower 2300 feet high with a spiral track for motorcars, a garage, a restaurant, a hotel and lighthouse at the top. The huge structure will be of concrete and steel and double the height of the famous Eiffel Tower.

The plan is inspired by the modern skyscrapper, which now rises almost a quarter of a mile into the air. M. Freyssinet, an eminent French engineer is planning to put up a structure which will dwarf the highest building in the world. It will be almost twice as high as the famous Empire State Building in New York City.

The tower will be circular with a brilliant beacon installed at its peak. A spiral highway for automobiles will protect around the tower and will run beneath the hotel at the top below the pinnacle will be the four hundred car garage. The restaurant will be above the garage.

There is of course a possibility that this will never be built, although the engineer has stated to the French authorities that it could be put up at a cost of two and a half million dollars, and that it will be safe and practicable.

Visitors will ride inside the tower from the base to the restaurant and hotel and there will be three observation platforms.

BENEVOLENT DICTATORSHIP

President Roosevelt has launched his industrial recovery program, the like of which has not been attempted in history. Speaking on Monday evening over a broadcast he laid before his entire nation, his plan of united action on the part of employers in shortening the hours of labor and increasing wages. On the other side, he said failure on the part of the people to accept would mean another disastrous and suffering winter.

A few men might try to thwart his program for selfish interests, he said, but there are adequate penalties for such infractions yet the president plans to use the method of voluntary co-operation.

His other mammoth scheme which he expects will send millions of men to work through public works improvements, has in this country been timid in raising the purchasing power of the people.

The president makes a plea which cannot fail on deaf ears. He said he can not accomplish alone and that the huge plan requires the support of every employer and every individual employee.

Though new authority he has been called will use only two weapons, public opinion and individual conscience. That is the secret of a dictator of a free people who will be dictated to only for the public good. His is not the velvet-covered iron fist some dictators use. But he is dealing with people who are willing to aid in a scheme for economic recovery.

These two weapons will have greater effect, it is claimed, than domineering methods of other dictators upon their peoples.

CONDITIONS IN BRITAIN

The British Ministry of Labor reports an improvement in industry. It is estimated that at June 26 there was an approximately 9,783,000 insured persons, aged 16-64, in employment in Great Britain. This is 135,000 more than a month before, and 461,000 more than a year before.

This improvement in employment extended to all but a few industries. It was most marked in iron and steel manufacture, engineering, shipbuilding and ship-repairing, metal goods manufacture, the textile industries, distributive trades, and the hotel, boarding-house, road transport, shipping, dock and harbor services. The number of unemployed persons on the registers at employment exchanges in Great Britain on June 26 last were 1,884,322 wholly unemployed, 463,712 temporarily stopped, and 90,074 normally in casual employment, at total of 2,438,108, which is 144,771 less than on May 22, 1933 and 309,235 less than a year before.

Sir John Simon, the Exchequer speaks of these figures as encouraging, because at this time of the year they usually go in the other direction. He says the revenue is also improving, the customs receipts having exceeded the estimates. "We are more than holding our own, compared with other countries," declared Mr. Chamberlain, an announcement which will offset in some degree the disappointment caused by the failure of the World Economic Conference.—London Advertiser.

SIDELIGHTS
GRAVE and GAY

CLEAR-EYED

Suddenly (none can say how)
From some dim region around us
Voices will fall on our ears,
Sounds that amaze and confound us:
Whispers that break through our dreams,
Stirring us harshly and rudely,
Vexing our visions of ease,
Baring our selfishness crudely.

Dreams were the dearer by far,
Bright the mirages we cherished;
Yet at a breath (none knows why)
Castles long fostered have perished.
Clear-eyed at last we can go.
Seeing life's truth, not its seeming:
Done with the false pleasure-show,
Done with the folly of dreaming!

Suddenly (none can say how)
Comes the awakening that frees us;
Braver and stronger we grow,
Seeing ourselves as God sees us.

SYNCOPE was given as the cause of the drowning of a girl of twelve years, a good swimmer in Montreal Sunday. Entering the water too soon after eating caused the boy to be seized with cramps and cost his life by drowning. There would be fewer drowning accidents if people, young and old, would learn to play without haste.

DESIRE TO GO LOW-BRED IS COMMENDABLE

But Civilized Men Must Never Go Low as Savage

By Lewis E. Rieck, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

Since we are all, fundamentally speaking, simply primitives, it follows that the desire to go "low-brow" at times is not to be misinterpreted. Indeed, such is actually the case. No matter how highly trained and refined a person may be, there is no gainsaying the thrill he gets when now and again he lets go and acts his own animalistic self.

Of course there are limits to how low one should go. We should never act like savages. Certain standards must be respected, no matter how great the urge to kick them out of the window. Well, as I have said and done, it is not so much this sort of regression that we must fear, but rather the conservativeness and conventionality that holds us back and prevents us from having a low-brow fling or two now and whatsoever.

Take music. There are those who would like to revert in a time like "Tipperary" or "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," or to dance and sing some lively jazz. Their bringing-up and breeding, however, forbids it! Instead, they don't feel at ease unless they sit up very stiff and swing to the rhythms of the "Blue Danube."

Am I exaggerating. Well, perhaps a little. But you know the type of person I have in mind. Or, you must be one of them. Come on, be good, a lawsuit having been launched to decide the ownership.

Between Five and Six Million Unemployed Back to Work Labor Day Plan Victory Claimed For Roosevelt's Latest Plan

READY TO HELP

Industry And Business Men Co-operate in Increased Numbers

(By James Cope, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 26—Victory was claimed today in President Roosevelt's latest move for the re-employment of jobless millions by Labor Day even though the campaign has yet to reach top flight.

Tomorrow 5,000,000 agreement blanks, asking volunteer pledges of higher wages and shorter hours for all workers, will be laid on the desks of American business and tradesmen. Today, Hugh S. Johnson, the general of the industrial recovery campaign, exulted at the testimony of thousands upon thousands of telegrams, that the country was ready to back its President all the way.

"Nothing can stop the President's programme!" Johnson exclaimed last night.

Definitely now, Johnson estimated the goal of getting new jobs in the bare months to Labor Day would be won, for five to six million unemployed.

He swung again into perfecting the campaign, which will enlist hundreds of local leaders to carry the President's message to every community. Simultaneously, he dug into the task of bringing out permanent codes or fair competition for industries, which have been leaders in taking advantage of the new law for business self-government.

Conclusion was sought for hearings on oil and lumber. A start was made on a code for the men's clothing industry. A shipbuilders' agreement needed only presidential promulgation to go into force. Deputies shaped reports after hearings on wool and rayon wearing apparel, lumber, hour-cutting codes for these could go into effect.

Meaning, the recovery administration showed concern lowards preventing friction between capital and labor. Reports of strikes, general or threatened, and of wide-spread discharges of union sympathizers drew both Johnson and his chief counsel, Donald Richberg, to advise against "unfair practices and opinion" and unfair activity by either side.

COW HILL RESIDENTS SEE MANY MOOSE

Browse Consistently Within Sight of Farmers' Homes

Moose have become tamer and more plentiful in the district of Cow Hill this year, residents declare them so tame, that often they will browse contentedly in the cleared fields within plain sight of farmers' home. Last week Mr. Hugh Nicholson was treated to the sight of a large cow moose and two calves feeding unconcernedly not far from a section road. Hardly a week passes that other residents do not see a bull or a cow, generally followed by a spindly-legged little calf or two. Even a bear has been sighted as close in as Millbridge lately.

General Italo Balbo, Italian Minister of Air and leader of the present flight, were out to his plane at 7.15 a.m. N.S.T. and took off at 7.45 a.m. E. S. T., the other planes following in their usual spectacular formation. Weather conditions over the route were reported favorable.

Instantly before he left General Balbo said that a departure from Newfoundland tomorrow was unlikely owing to bad weather towards the other side or the Atlantic. Ireland will probably be the next objective and a course into the Azores will be chosen only if weather makes the intermediate route impossible.

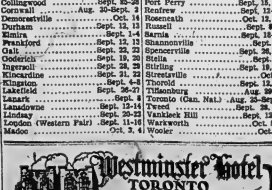
The first triad, with General Balbo's plane at the apex, circled over Shediac Bay and struck out on a course that would carry them over the eastern tip of Prince Edward Island. A later deviation from the course of the fleet may be made. At 7.54 a.m. N.S.T. 21 planes were in the air.

Big Farewell

The last triad were away at 7.56 a.m. and Canada had said farewell to the most spectacular flight in history.

The youthful leader of the expedition led the planes to Shediac Bay yesterday afternoon after a flight of five hours and 46 minutes from New York.

Twenty-two planes arrived in the usual picturesque formation and swooped gracefully to the water. The General's plane tooched the water at five o'clock and the fleet were down at 5.26.



Another plane that had been forced down at Rockland, Maine, with a broken oil line, arrived an hour and a half later, and another that had stopped at Milledgeville, near Saint John, N. B., to adjust slight engine trouble and refuel, came in within half an hour. Before the whole complete squadron of 24 machines was resting on the bay here and before retiring General Balbo ordered the men to prepare for an early take-off today.

ACT OF PROVIDENCE

Sarnia, Ont., July 26—(CP)— It was "an act of providence" alone that caused the deaths of Russell Mair, 37, Sarnia coal dealer; Clifford, 11, Point Edward, a coroner's jury today had found. The men were killed and 18 others injured, when a cyclone wind demolished the Canadian National Railway sheds at Point Edward last Friday.

COUSINS FIRE VICTIMS REST IN ONE GRAVE

Bones of Three Children Placed in Single Casket

MEMORIAL PLANNED

Ironic Fate of Bert Grant, Who Was on Visit

Underneath a solitary mound in one was casked the charred bodies of the three boy victims of Dungannon Townships lightning-fire tragedy of Sunday night. In Bancroft Cemetery on Tuesday, the unidentified bones of Arnold and Donald Whitmore, sons of Thomas Whitmore and of Bert Grant, eight year old son of William Grant of Madoc, Mills, were laid to rest while the tearful and friends of the bereavedy family looked on sadly and reverently.

It was a strange fate which brought the Grant boy to his fateful cottage. He had arrived only a few hours before the calamity, in time to eat his supper with his cousins the young Whitmore's. At ten-thirty he was thrown unlived with two of his own age, his bones separated from the embers being undistinguishable from those of his young relatives.

Funeral Services

Though Tuesday's burial closed the last outward act in the drama of tragedy, a memorial service is to be held by the Brethren congregation on Sunday. The Whitmore family are members of this body.

This will write the last of the story of the three boys who gathered about the supper table on during that fight in which the prospect of spending the holidays together, about mischiefy they planned, upstairs and one hour later the home was thrust through with lightning bolt and burst into flames. Mrs. Charles Thomas, grandmother of the Whitmore boys who was sleeping downstairs with her husband, was a witness. She was awakened by a terrific storm which beat upon the house. "It felt nearer than the time the lightning struck the house here hall", she said. "The next thing I knew the house was all around in flames." Mrs. Thomas, fearing for her husband, who could not get about himself, called to her son, Thomas Whitmore, who was sleeping with three children and another Whitmore boy, twelve years old, and retired.

"I shouted, "Tom, the' house is afire, come down and help get grandpa out". Tom ran down the stairs and I followed him as far as we managed to get him outside to safety."

Boys Missed

It is only after the recess of Mr. Thomas that the absence of the children was noticed. The father and Tom Whitmore dashed back into the house, but as it was all flame by that time, had to find way up to their bedroom. He ran to the window, calling encouraging for the boys to leap out of the windows. Isadore was the only one to appear at the window to jump.

The latter son recalled seeing the fire upstairs. He knew the while the four boys were spending the night by up and awakened them as I did so. I told him to get up as there was a fire. He said, 'I know it, I thought he did," Isadore could not find his other brother and so was forced to leave him. As for the smoke was so dense he could not see clearly but he saw the form at the window of the pantry. There was a third brother, Arnold, missing, so make it give way and he jumped to the ground.

Father Frantic

Thomas Bronson, fire ranger had been the scene from Bancroft and hurried the few miles to the farm where the fire. Frantically the father who was running about the house, but the flames had almost entirely burned off him and he was helpless. Meanwhile his son went with him to the house ruins to find the survivors crowded around the body of the unfortunate child. It was clear that nothing could be done for the three boys. Shortly after the father then only agreed to go to the home of his brother, Bert Bancroft, to have his burns treated, where he will be for some time. The bodies of the survivors went to the homes of neighbors.

Provincial Constable Price Morris and Dr. Lumb directed searching for the bodies in the morning.

The Whitemore family is a well-known one in the district, Thomas has lived there all their lives. No insurance was carried on the house, but it is hoped that it will be possible that the people of the district will contribute to the fund in order that to endeavor to set up his home which has been broken by disaster and sudden death.

Snow-Shoes Bought at Bargain Sale

The snow-shoe toting tourist has again made his appearance in this city. In the heat of the July evening, a large car bearing Michigan license plates pulled to a stop at a downtown curb. Observant pedestrians craned necks to view the spectacle of a brand new pair of snow-shoes strapped with an accumulation of other luggage on the rear trunk.

"Bought 'em in Quebec—at a bargain sale," a trifle wearily explained the tourist as he was joined following a sly wise-crack regarding the snow-shoes.

"Get this message to your folks: 'Grape-Nuts' Flakes is the biggest breakfast hit in years. Good? One spoonful starts the old smile. But one bowlful never satisfies me!"

And one bowlful of this grand new cereal doesn't satisfy most people! That glorious "Grape-Nuts" flavour in those nutty, golden flakes always calls for more. And the beauty of it is that just one serving supplies more varied nourishment than many a hearty meal!

Delight your family with this delightful cereal tomorrow morning. See how it. And don't forget to save coupons, in addition, in well-known economy packages of Grape-Nuts, Post Toasties or Canada from Canadian wheat and malt.

M. F. HEPBURN AT COCHRANE

First Appearance For Ontario Leader in This Section

Cochrane, July 26—(CP)— Making his first appearance before electors of Cochrane North, Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal leader, last night stressed the need for decreased provincial expenditure, and declared the depression was due to unsound economic policies.

Interest and carrying charges on Ontario's public debt, he said, were equal to ordinary revenue and the debt would soon reach the $600,000,000 mark. "Nearly all the timber lands in the province are in private hands and yet when members of the Ontario Legislature sought last session to bring out how much was owing to the Provincial Treasury by timber operators, the answer was it was not in the public interest to give the information," he declared.

The Department of Lands and Forests did not bring in enough revenue to pay the staff that was maintained.

He declared James Lyons, M.L.A., Conservative member for South Simcoe, was receiving $6,000 per year $20,000,000 spent on northern roads $6,000,000 was "wasted in political patronage."

Contractors on the Ashtia Canyon Power Development, he said, had been paid $3,500,000 in addition to the $18,000,000 paid the bondholders, and this money was unaccounted for and did not appear in government accounts.

People were unable to obtain information regarding the Liquor Control Board, he claimed. On the same journey as the Quebec commission, Ontario's revenue from liquor was one-third less, he declared.

VACATIONS and HEALTH

By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES
Medical Director and Chief Magistrant Dermatologist

THE OPEN ROAD

The call of the open road lures it many thousands, Weekend, Week-end, smooth highways throughout the nation carry millions of people every summer to historic spots or other interesting places of interest, or perhaps to the seashore, mountains or elsewhere.

Although it would seem that sufficient advice and warning had already been given on how to avoid accidents and mishaps, yet the automobile is responsible for about 100,000 accidental deaths every year, a disheartening fact in one of the quickest ways to bring a happy holiday to a tragic conclusion.

Drive carefully always. Slow down at all crossings, and stop unless you can see a long way both right and left. Although you may think you have the right of way, the other fellow might not agree. So don't take chances. Stop at railroad crossings and drive cautiously in congested areas, particularly where children may be playing in the street. You may lose a few seconds of time, but may save a life.

Have your car checked over by a competent mechanic before starting a trip. Brakes, steering gear, headlights and tires should be in perfect condition.

If you drink alcoholic beverages let someone who does not drink drive the car.

Don't drive if you enjoy taking chances, other than your own life and safety depends on who is at the wheel. Don't try to pass a line of cars unless the road is clear a long way ahead, ample warning has been given, and you can pass while driving cautiously. Don't try to pass any car if you have to rush to make so much easier, too, to make a certain signal the reminder to come in, than for mother to step on the porch and shout at children. And the curious thing about it is, that children will obey a given signal without loitering or trying to argue with it—the latter being virtually impossible, while when mother calls, there are ego to be replies of, "In a minute," or "Wait till I finish this."

A burger being lacking in your family, there are still whistles to be had very cheaply. There are bells. There are any number of ways to attract children's attention and to remind them it is time to come in without yelling yourself hoarse. Somehow, for a mother to vocally corall her young seems to me unnecessary.

And on the other side of the yelling situation, are children who stand in the yard, on the porch, who never budge from the sand-box or swing and shout, lustily for mother. This is a habit that I, for one, wouldn't tolerate for an instant.

The mentality and physical condition of the driver are equally as important as the condition of the car, if not more so. Intelligence and quick perception and reaction are essential. People with heart disease or other serious ailments make better passengers than drivers.

Don't drive if you are tired. Many accidents occur from drivers dropping asleep at the wheel and waking up in the hospital.

If you are driving across country, don't try to drive too far each day. The tendency is to increase speed and to take greater risks the longer a person has been driving. Don't wait until the gasoline tank is almost empty before stopping for fuel and relaxation. If you have one person in the car can drive, change places often.

Make cross-country driving a vacation, not a contest to see how far you can drive each day or how quickly you can get from one place to the next.

This is the fourth of a series of 12 articles on Vacations and Health. The fifth, on Food, Milk and Water, will answer the questions:

1. What diet is best in hot weather?
2. Is the use of drinking only pure milk and water? 3. What are common causes of "acute indigestion"?

Correct Manners

Correct Wedding Announcement

Dear Mr. Beeckman:

I. Please settle this friendly dispute:

Several of my friends, as well as myself, received announcements of a mutual friend's marriage. This girl's (the bride's) mother died when she was very small, and she was raised by her maternal grandmother. The girl's father married soon after his wife's death and while he probably never felt very particularly fond of her father's new wife, at the same time she visited him on various times. The wedding announcement was sent out as follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. James Black announce the marriage of their daughter, and so forth".

My friend contends that this announcement was in bad form and that it should have been worded:

"Mr. James Black announces the marriage of his daughter".

I contend the announcement, if one must send out, should have been worded in the name of the father and his wife. Please tell me which form is correct.

2. We disagree on another small matter, too: In introducing one's "in-laws", I hold that it is correct to say "my father and mother" and omit the "in-law". In introducing my sister-in-law, I called her my "sister" to which my friends object, and say that I am misleading, when I call her "my sister". They say I should say "my sister-in-law".

B.

1. You are thoroughly right about this. It is far better taste to send out announcements worded as this one was worded. "Mr. and Mrs. Jamie Black announce the marriage of their daughter....etc." I am glad that these people used this form. To send out these announcements in the name of the father only, would have been a social slight to his wife, and apparently the girl was fond of her, and did not wish to offend her.

2. Here we are delightfully right in your judgment. I agree with you that, whenever it is at all possible, it is far pleasanter to omit the "in-law" from the connotation. Instead of being misleading, people are usually grateful for the use of the term, and rejoice that we choose it.

He Helps Himself

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have heard it said that a young woman (or any woman) should never help a man on with his overcoat. If a man be your husband, fiance or a very dear friend, of course, if the man is disabled in some way, so the argument goes, it is permissable to help.

Often I have been standing directly for the street....cars, hat, gloves, and my young man friend has been struggling with his overcoat. I have thought it proper manners to help him with his coat, although my mother has strenuously said it is most improper.

Please let me kind as to all me which is proper.

C.

Your mother is right about this. It isn't a big, good form, and it's quite absurd, for a woman to help a man on with his coat. With the exception, of course, is the one you have mentioned. Then, of course, in some way, I manly man won't like having his coat helped on. He overcoat, no matter what relation he is to you, or no matter where you are, is no place for you. He's a big boy, and should be treated as so.

The same thing applies to a woman's holding a man's hat, in a theatre, while motoring, and so forth. He will thank you for getting him to take care of his dress coat.

And the same thing applies to it's taking a man's coat and hat or either, when he comes to see you. Don't take his coat and hat....indicate to him where he is to "rest" them.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Nearness Is One of Love's Strongest Props

"Propinquity, or the quality of being Johnny-on-the-spot, or in your case, girl-on-the-spot, has dished all my plans," writes a young man in a highly diverting letter of self-revelation and pique.

He tells me he wasn't quite so much girl-shy as he was girl-opposed—that girls, as such, had no place in his philosophy. "That's because," I'm course only success. The capitals are his. And he took for his motto, Kipling's poem:

"Down to Gehenna, or up to the throne,
He travels the fastest who travels alone."

He admits it was Gehenna, all right, some of the time, and that he was terribly lonesome. But with a will to succeed as the motive power of his life, he stuck it out until—

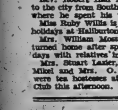
He met Essie. Now Essie, despite her name, is no fluffy-ruffles young lady. She was a law clerk in the same office as himself, but she wasn't be-specialed, prim, prudish, or a grind. She was a ravishingly pretty girl, and likewise intelligent—an unbeatable combination. Furthermore, she was personable and industrious, and she seemed entirely unaware of the young man at the adjoining desk.

He began looking her fresh, exquisite freshness of her blouses, her trim twinkling feet, the sheen on her well-brushed hair—and the way she minded her own business. His confides in that six-page letter, that other girls may have these provocative qualities, but never to the extent he has found one closely enough before to observe these lures. Thus he writes:...that propinquity, or nearness, is a cracker of plans and a destroyer of air castles.

What's my opinion of office-rade romances?

My opinion is that office marriages are as likely to be "made in Heaven" as any other kind, or even more likely, because the parties of the first and second pa..s see each other under all and sundry conditions. He or She is on view when called down, praised, cut, furloughed, when the powers-t-be smile or frown, and when the slings and arrows of fortune (office politics) are sharpest.

So, take it by and large, a girl and a man who fall in love while pursuing the clusive dollar in the same organization are less likely to become victims of lost illusions than any other candidates for the holy state.



At the same time, if my young correspondent is experiencing a case of fascination, due to the propinquity of what she claims to be a "victim", he would better wait and let him "sweat" before he is really in love. Or, better still—he or the girl could be transferred to the other department or office—and see how the temporary separation would do.

Perhaps the blouses of some other girl at an adjoining desk would seem as fragrant and her hair have the same witching sheen as that first love, or propinquity may have lost distinguished girls.

It's terribly risky to put the thought of girls entirely out of mind, and to mass of success one's only love. When that policy is adopted, it's likely to be upset by Propinquity and the first girl.

No Tardiness In This Home

By Constance Cameron

"What time do you want the kids in for supper, mom?" There was a bit of swagger as eleven-year-old Tommy consulted his wrist watch. Mother told him five thirty. "O. K." With an air of responsibility he swung off to play.

As five-thirty to the minute, Tommy crossed the front porch in a business-like fashion, got his bugle from the hall closet and on the front steps executed "Mess call." "The kids"—aged nine and six, came running. That's all there was to it. Mess call meant "Come home to supper." And no one came.

OVERCROWDING OF BOAT BRINGS DEATH PENALTY

Captain of River Steamer Held Responsible for Tragedy

Yaroslavl, U.S.S.R., July 26 (AP).—Nicolai Andreev, captain of a little Volga River excursion boat that sank with a loss of 98 lives, was sentenced today to be shot for allowing the vessel to be overcrowded.

His assistant, Leonid Kurakoff, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and nine others were given terms of one to two years.

Their trial began shortly after the launch carrying locomotive shop workers and their families went down in the Volga three miles from this city, located 172 miles northeast of Moscow.

Although the little craft had a capacity of 125 passengers, twice that number were aboard.

FUN IN A BIG STORE WITH JACK HULBERT DANCING COMEDIAN

Another "weather-breaker" from the Gainsborough Studios! That is the claim the Capitol Theatre makes for the new Jack Hulbert picture, "Love on Wheels," now showing.

"Love on Wheels" is said to be the most technically perfect picture yet made in a British studio. It is modern throughout, and its very best. In addition it is excellent allround entertainment a real comic opera, in which the characters are interpreted with artistry and charm.

The story is not one "around which the action revolves" in orthodox fashion. There are many approaching quietness in this fantasy of love-making which began in a Green Line bus, continued and ended, after a lot of mixed-up merriment, in a Rolls-Royce.

This Gainsborough picture is altogether a merry film, telling a story of the business lives of ordinary people who get a lot of fun as well as a lot of anxiety out of business life. Here lies the charm of the appeal—"it might happen to me," says the younger picture-goer, and her or his humorous pleasure in the pranks of the years when life was full of possibilities.

Miss Hulbert and Mr. Hulbert need no write that Jack Hulbert is a great screen comedian. He is also the picture all the time, acting the stupid fool, singing, dancing, very ably assisted by Cicely Courtneidge, Edmund Gwenn and Leonora Corbett.

Gordon Harker's idea of a "pub" conductor is appropriately, to take a kindly interest in the customers and who regularly use the vehicle of which he has charge. Miss Linda Fred Hopkins (Jack Hulbert) a trifle slow in the uptake and sets out to assist Miss Hopkins with Gordon Harker manner, with immense success. The scenes in Gallop's Dairy are ludicrously funny.

Edmund Gwenn proves to be a dignified, impressive manager, a capable business man quick to seize an opportunity. Cicely Courtneidge, Hopkins, however, smashes up his reserve and adds to the fun. Leonora Corbett gives a fine performance, portraying a character demanding the least of her talents.

In the character of Jane Russell, Leonora Corbett plays first leading lady, and is said to act with charm and ability. She is a decided asset.

"Love on Wheels" is at the Capitol Theatre today for a three-day showing. Another will prove a "weather-beater" indeed.

The programme is made complete by the addition of comedy and news.

FRANK LLOYD HAD TO USE ALL HIS POWERS MAKING "CAVALCADE"

Unquestionably, it takes a Stan of varied experience to direct a picture like this picture, particularly one with the proportions of "Cavalcade" which comes to the Belle Tomorrow (Thursday) and Friday, matinee daily, showing for the first time at regular prices.

Standing even in his busiest moments, never had to digress from the subject in order to give a thought about the dialogue his soldiers were speaking. Stalls never worried him enough on the Kremlin wall when he was planning the great coup that established a single objective. A motion picture director is denied that. His interests while directing are so diversified that were he three or six men he would not have enough time to give his scenes to get around adequately.

Frank Lloyd, who served in a directorial capacity for Fox's version of the internationally famous Noel Coward play, began his worrying six months in advance of the picture's release date and he and when the moment on which he was to begin the first word of the production did arrive, he had to spread his activities.

Director Responsible

The supervision of 26,000 extras is no simple task even for a Napoleon. Lloyd, as an individual when the action, of necessity, is stopped practically in order to do so and then. There is no climatic moment for the picture director. His work proceeds from one to the other in the procession of one thing after another, although the same time.

A director, in the end, is responsible for the finished picture as it presents. And this makes his obligations so numerous as to seem impossible. The direction, dialogue, sound recording, pcnography, setting, light photography—all come under the lip for which he is held responsible. He is obliged to oversee the mass of detail which goes into the making of "Cavalcade," the finest picture that has yet been made in the English language, producing it in such a way that it will establish an all-time record for the respective theatres including the Belle Tomorrow this week $1.50 Canadian premiere at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto.

Has Notable Cast

Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook have the leading roles. The supporting cast includes Ursula Jeans, Herbert Mundin, Una O'Connor, Margaret Halstan, Beryl Mercer, Frank Lawton, Irene Brown and 31 prominent leading roles.

William Powell scored another outstanding success in the comedy drama "Private Detective 62" showing at the Belle this week-end.

Recognized as a past master of suave men of the world, Mr. Powell in the title role of "Private Detective 62" is at his best last night's large audience with his subtle sense of humor. But Mr. Powell is not all comedy. It has some powerfully dramatic moments and thrilling situations which he handles with exceptional ability. Supporting the leading lady lovely Margaret Lindsay who will be remembered in the "Thank" scene in "Cavalcade" and everyone who sees her in this her first leading role is apt to include her in their list of screen favorites.

Ruth Chatterton and George Brent are co-starring in "Lily Turner" the second-feature offering on the same program. The entire program will be repeated again today.

ROYALS PUSH WAY INTO A LOOP PLAYOFF

Since June 20 Have Played .667 Ball in League

WIN 5 STRAIGHT

Defeat Toronto 3-1 as Former Leaf Allows Seven Hits

By HERBERT W. BARKER,
Associated Press Sports Writer

Whether or not Montreal Royals push their way into a championship play-off berth in the International League they can be credited with the biggest reversal of form this season.

Since June 20, when they were lodged in the cellar with 29 victories to their credit against 40 defeats, they played .667 ball, winning 34 games and losing 13 and today are within a game and a half of the fourth place Baltimore Orioles and only three games behind third-place Toronto, the team they must displace to gain the second northern qualifying position.

A 3-1 triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday gave the Royals their fifth successive triumph and their 84th in 107 games this season, thus putting them above the .500 mark for the first time since May 21.

Ogden's former Toronto pitcher, limited the Leafs to seven hits and was complete master of the business except in the sixth when Toronto's one run was scored. Doc Gautreau, Royal second baseman, stole home to give Montreal its first run in the initial inning. Kenny Tate clouted a homer for the scoring in the second and Ogden and Wings to a point two games behind Newark Bears.

All other clubs were held idle by rain.

Recently the executive of the Belleville Intermediates were in communication with the heads of the West Ontario League relative to the men playing for the Toronto Terminal-Belleville National doubleheader here on Civic Holiday. Secretary Secretary Gerald Lynch received official information through Secretary F. J. Stewart of the Toronto league sanctioning the defaulting of the games by the Nationals.

x x x

This move gives the local executive an opportunity to go ahead with their plans for an "old timers" game on that date. The game will be staged for charity purposes through the local, Kiwanis Club, who ratified the suggestion yesterday. Incidentally when approached relating to the possibility of procuring special dispensation for Jack "Chief" Williams, K. A. Bell, Past President of the O.B.A.A., asked for permission to have the league unofficially sanction the game. Apparently Mr. Elliott was more than confident over the idea and it might be added that his request was naturally granted. There is a possibility of the "old timers" appearing on the diamond in brand new, spick and span uniforms, we hear.

x x x

With the suggestion that Manager Mills is to be on the receiving end for the "old guard" who will assume the reigns of the Nationals at whatever means the change of "center-rear"? It is understood that the decision of the old bunch will be left to the discretion of Harry Frimple and Billie Thomson, who led the 1919 club.

x x x

The latest issued O.B.A.A. bulletin gives the first round draw for the provincial play-downs. The winners of the Central Ontario League have been drawn against the winners of the West Ontario League. This should not worry the C.O.B.A. champs to any degree of fear notwithstanding the fact that New Toronto eliminated Kingston last night. The general opinion is that the better team lost that particular series.

x x x

In the intermediate series the winners of the Bay of Quinte loop are scheduled to cross bats with the winners of the Kingston and Dibrict Leagues. Unless the Easterners have better intermediate clubs than they have boasted of for some years past, any one of the Bay of Quinte clubs should "take" the Limestone entry into camp.

x x x

When the Belleville pulled out for Kingston this afternoon it was announced that Roy Smith, their initial sacker, and "Chuck" Barrage, who covers about the hot corner, were both absentees from the line-up. Either Ernie Holmes or Ernie Smith will get the pitching duties or the day. At the same time the Victorias are fighting with their backs to the wall up at the local Exhibition Park this p.m. A win for the Fanshaw-managed outfit would be worse than drastic, while a win would practically "put them in."

x x x

The Gull's Garage nine, semi-finalists in the local Men's Softball loop, who meet the College Hill Club in the first of a three game series on the Coleman Flats diamond, starting Wednesday evening, downed the Tweed softball nine in an exhibition game played at the old Albert College field last evening by the score of 10 to 6. The two clubs are the second set of two clubs as the Tweed club defeated the Merchants by a single run margin at Tweed recently.

x x x

Headed by "Andy" Blair and possibly "Ace" Bailey of the Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey Club, the Toronto "Marvelettes" battle the local Alemite softball team at the top of Pine St. this evening. The game has been arranged for by Manager Stevenson through such sport celebrities as Colonel E. A. Oliver and O. N. Fitzgera'd of Toronto, while Manager Fee Toronto softball fame, will hart for the visitors.

Herman-H. Jacobi, manager of the Belleville Arena, is at present a visitor in the city. "Jake" is back staying here and in the meantime looking over the buildings and equipment at the Arena. He also seemed quite optimistic regarding the possibility of hockey in Belleville this winter as about the first topic of conversation raised by him yesterday was, "How are all the hockey players? I've been reading where we have Will O'Heeney with Port Arthur here in the city." All in all Mr. Jacobi seemed quite optimistic over the possibilities of winter sports in Belleville this coming season.

TIGER

Starring Mr. Ward

By Russ Westoyer.

"I mean, Jerry... Why, I mean that suddenly I find myself thinking of you as a woman instead of as a little girl... I mean that you have been the mother of my children so long that...."

"Peter, I love you, too. And I've been loving you all these years and haven't really known it."

"We're in love, Jerry. That's what it is. Oh, Jerry..."

He drew her to him very gently, for he could not quite rid himself of the impression that she was still a little girl, and she lifted her lips and they kissed tenderly, as children sometimes kiss, and then very deeply as only lovers kiss.

And Jerry remembered two lines from Elinor Wylie:

"They were no longer friend and friend.

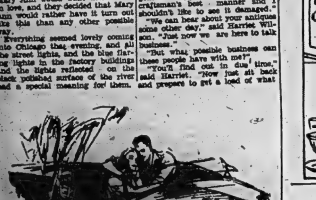
But only lover and lover."

And perhaps that was why she said quickly, "But if we can't still be friends I don't want this, Peter. I want you always to be my best friend, and everybody I can go places with and talk to and bum."

"You can bum on every day of my life, Peter said. "And we'll have the finest kind of time together. Of course, we will be friends."

"I could pull your hair I love you so much," Jerry said.

"That dam," said Peter. "I'll roll it down the side of that hill and it'll be a thicket of cockleburs."



"You're dreadful Peter. I'll have to put a spooky spook under the back of your neck."

They rode on happily, talking delightful nonsense and Jerry kept exclaiming over everything she saw, and Peter had a wide boyish grin on his face that made her tell him over and over again how much she loved him.

And then they were serious for a while and talked about whether they really want them to be in love, and they decided that Mary Ann would rather have it turn out like this than any other possible way.

Everything seemed lovely coming into Chicago that evening, and all the street lights, and the blue flaring lights in the factory buildings and the lights reflected from the black polished surface of the river had a special meaning for them.

"Peter, I love you, too. And I've been loving you all these years and haven't really known it

Because they were in love.

One thing alone could still come between them and happiness, and they knew until that matter was settled they could not be so happy, or plan for the future so confidently as if it were all concluded and washed from their minds.

That was the outcome of the conference tomorrow with Joe Middleton for they had decided with Harriet that they would all be present Monday noon when Jerry gave her answer to the Tiger.

And both Jerry and Peter realized they could not avoid that conference and still continue to live with any sense of security. They realized now, as they had not before, that all the fight had really decided nothing, and that Joe Middleton had perhaps been only more infuriated by its outcome.

They could not rest on Peter's laurels as a fighter, they must if at all possible, whip Joe Tiger into complete and permanent submission.

But Jerry felt that on one score they need not worry. She knew that Joe Middleton might do anything in the world to Peter or to herself, but she knew in her heart that he would not hurt the children.

Joe Middleton was not a fool. Of among the fair buildin a Tower that has risen against the above, and came at last to the little attic apartment where Jerry and the children were waiting for them, worried that they had been away so long.

They did not know whether to tell Sarah or not at all that had happened but concentrated by letting her have a sly mild version of the entire affair.

"O-h, Daddy, I'll bet you licked Joe Middleton plenty," Jackie said in admiration.

"First I gave him one like this and then one like that and then I gave sayin' sizing up to the little boy. "And one like this, see?"

"I gave him about twelve like that, son."

"Gee, you're swell, Daddy. Isn't he swell, Jerry?"

"I'll say he's swell," Jerry said.

They had not told Sarah Joe's threat against the children. And now Jerry still felt that there we no danger.

But after they had all gone to bed Peter got up quietly, and strapping one on the big Colt gun he had fired to the boot, went out to the head of the stairs to watch.

He sat there all night, dozing now and again, and thinking long and happily about Jerry and the children.

And there Jerry found him in the morning, still keeping guard over his family.

CHAPTER 20

The time for the showdown had come!

Joe Middleton sat behind the wide topped walnut desk in his private office, on which lay a pair of silver-mounted dueling pistols, an ivory ball carved with a thousand tiny rats and a dangerous-looking knife, with sawtoothed edges.

And there was a bored look on the face of this yachtsman, adventurer and wealthy president of a more or less successful radio concern.

He pressed a button and Jerry, Harriet and Peter walked into his office.

He took from his watch pocket his thin jeweled watch which he had lifted been given to him by Albert, king of the Belgians, and consulted the dial.

"It is just noon," he said. "What is your answer, Miss Hartford? Will you take the house and the trust fund or will I have to dismiss you?"

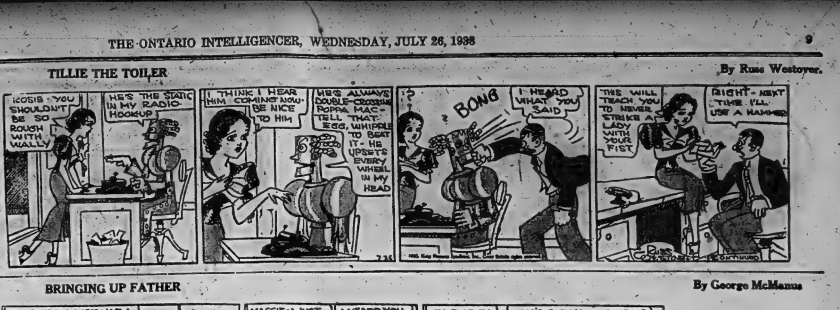
"I wouldn't take your house or your ill-gained money or any of the other things you offer if you were the last man in the world and I was an old maid and starving."

"Very well, then, you are dismissed. Good day, Miss Hartford; it has been a pleasure to have you with us as an employee of the Middleton Radio Company and I hope you will soon find another job."

"I didn't realize you were invited to this conference," said Joe, looking at Peter as if he were seeing him for the first time. "Who let him in, Miss Wilson?"

"I let him in," said Harriet, "and since in everything but name I am head of this firm, I should like to know what you are going to do about it?"

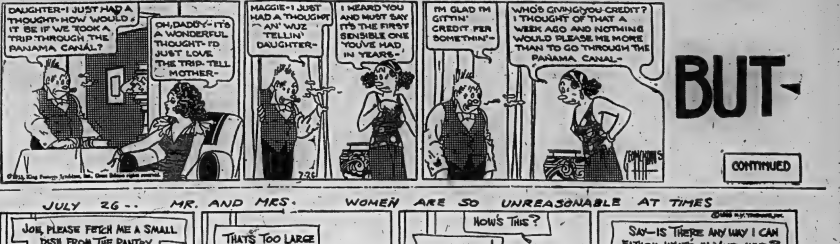
"I imagine I can still throw him out of my private office if that is my pleasure," said Joe.



"I think we settled that once and for all yesterday," said Peter quietly.

"Oh, very well. But please don't grip the arms of that chair with such ferocity, Mr. Baird. It is a genuine Hepplewhite in that rare craftsman's best manner, and I shouldn't like to see it damaged."

"We can hear about your antiques some other day," said Harriet Wilson. "Just now we are here to talk business."



"But what possible business can these people have with me?"

"You'll find out in due time," said Harriet, "since just at present I've got a load of what

"Don't touch that trip," warned Harriet just as Jerry was preparing to pull upward on the ring. "But why not?" Jerry asked.

"I had foreseen that, Joe. And I refuse to take it as a gift. I have raised $100,000 in cash which I will give you when you sign this paper. As I happen to know, you need the money."

"That is very kind of you, Harriet....And to you, Jerry Hartford and Peter Baird. I leave the home I built for Jerry on the North Shore together with my hope that your married life will be a happy one."

"That is very kind of you,' Peter said, "but I'm afraid that we can't accept."

of artillery, who having been decorated for bravery in action, kissed on both cheeks by a French premier, declined, demobilising and demoralized, came...home to set half of feminine Chicago on fire. Now getting old. Joe.

"I fear that is true, Harriet."

"You are beginning to tell some of your stories?"

"Excuse me of anything but that, Harriet. That is too cruel."

"And today you, because you have been very cruel to me, and even more because you have been cruel to Jerry, you are out of a job, out of our lives and out of Chicago forever."

"How can you force my hands?" Joe cried. "You wouldn't tell Louie that I killed his cousin Vito, Del Harriet, if you still love me at all... I get Hartford out of my hair, and I would do any of those things unless you lied to comply with my three simple requests."

"Out of my job, out of your lives, out of Chicago forever," Joe repeated mechanically. "How can you be so cruel, Harriet?"

Cruel? Am I being cruel? Do you know what poetic justice is, Joe Middleton? Can the Tiger accuse the other animals of the jungle of being cruel?"

"You are right, Harriet."

"And, for once I am going to be hard to the bitter end," Harriet said, "Perhaps if you had not threatened Jerry, but that is another story. Therefore you cannot change my mind by being sweet, or wistful or romantic or charming or sarcastic or threatening.... I know all your many poses by rote. You cannot move me no matter how you change your shape, your personality, or your necktie.

"What must I do then, Harriet?"

"Only what I 'ha-e asked."

"Very well," said Joe. "We will make this my farewell Party. Let's dial tiger rug, please, Miss Harriet and you will find a little, rectangular trapdoor beneath which you will find a bottle of old champagne together with other wines on ice."

"Don't touch that trip," warned Harriet just as Jerry was preparing to pull upward on the ring. "But why not?" Jerry asked.

"I am leaving to you, Harriet, the Middleton Radio Company."

"Do you want to blow this entire building into the Chicago rivers" "You are making that I go out in humiliation instead of glory, are you not?" Joe said. "Well, even you cannot stop me in this Harriet. I am leaving as a parting gift to Genevieve my apartment, my country estate and my yacht. She has money enough to keep them up."

"I will draw up the papers," Harriet said.

"I am leaving to you, Harriet, the Middleton Radio Company."

PUPPY LOVE

by Alma Sioux Scarberry

CHAPTER ONE

The footlights dimmed to an entrancing amber. A hush of expectancy fell over the big theatre. Mary Jane Judge sat up straight and gripped her little hands tightly together. The orchestra played softly—enchantingly. From "The Fisher Lady":

"To you beautiful lady I raise my eyes.....

At last the "Parade of the Manikins," was on. Mary's first fashion show. She started to clap her hands with joy. Then, remembering where she was, she sat back with a discreet little sigh and smiled happily to herself.

And to little Mary the girls grew more and more beautiful...the gowns more and more gorgeous, until by the time she fell, pencil-slender platinum blonde came on in the silver evening wrap trimmed with the bat breath was almost gone.

She just had to have some one to share it all with. She just had to...and she'd exploded! So, timidly, she turned with a hopeful little smile to the red-haired girl sitting beside her.

"Am't she lovely! She's just too beautiful to be a real person, isn't she?"

The red-head turned flashing large teeth in a friendly grin.

"Don't bet your bottom money on it, sister, or you'll walk home. I've seen her with her pan laid up for eyeballs—and that's kid stuff. Of.

"If you've what?"

"There was complete mystification in Mary's voice. The red-head thought it was pretty funny at her in the half light. Her grin grew still wider as Mary stared unsonsy by back at the stage, half puzzled.

"Take it you're a stranger in these here now woolly wilds hitherland known as Hollywood?"

"Yes, I am," Mary forced a shaky laugh. "Can you tell I don't belong here—even in the dark?"

"Honey child, you can tell you all nails from somewhere below the Mason-Dixon line. Yes sah!"

The stranger's gross exaggeration of Mary Southern drawl sent a hot flash of resentment to her face. She turned coldly and gave all her attention to the models on the stage. But the redhead didn't seem to notice she was being snubbed.

Having been given an inch conversational edge she took the whole mile. For talking was by no means her smallest accomplishment. Mary listened stiffly while she babbled on.

"Sure! I wasn't kidding when I said I knew that platinum blonde model with the silver wrap. Her name's Sara Coit. She's only an extra girl—in pictures. And so are almost all those babes. If they're not in luck to get a whole week's steady work out of this show! They will not be in shadow."

Mary was dying with curiosity, despite her pevve. This girl, this red-headed creature, was only one of the charmed circle that went to make up the glamorous little set of would known to the hungry outsider as Hollywood. The lights went up for intermission and she turned to her still babbling companion.

"It must be wonderful to really know the moving picture people—like you do."

She hoped that would encourage the girl to talk more. The redhead beautiful to be a real person, isn't she?"

"Sure I wasn't kidding when I said I knew that platinum blonde model with the silver wrap. Her name's Sara Coit. She's only an extra girl—in pictures. And so are almost all those babes. If they're not in luck to get a whole week's steady work out of this show! They will not be in shadow."

Mary was dying with curiosity, despite her pevve. This girl, this red-headed creature, was only one of the charmed circle that went to make up the glamorous little set of would known to the hungry outsider as Hollywood. The lights went up for intermission and she turned to her still babbling companion.

"It must be wonderful to really know the moving picture people—like you do."

She hoped that would encourage the girl to talk more. The redhead accepted the compliment graciously, friendly giggle, and settled down to another monologue.

"Well, yes and no. It's all right till you get wise to 'em. But— ne I am. Everybody's trying to get by with their fismes laid up for repairs and—and I don't fall off."

"If you've what?"

"There was complete mystification in Mary's voice. The red-head thought it was pretty funny at her in the half light. Her grin grew still wider as Mary stared unsonsy by back at the stage, half puzzled.

"Take it you're a stranger in these here now woolly wilds hitherland known as Hollywood?"

"Yes, I am," Mary forced a shaky laugh. "Can you tell I don't belong here—even in the dark?"

"Honey child, you can tell you all nails from somewhere below the Mason-Dixon line. Yes sah!"

The stranger's gross exaggeration of Mary Southern drawl sent a hot flash of resentment to her face. She turned coldly and gave all her attention to the models on the stage. But the redhead didn't seem to notice she was being snubbed.

Having been given an inch conversational edge she took the whole mile. For talking was by no means her smallest accomplishment. Mary listened stiffly while she babbled on.

"Sure!

VETERANS AS CRUSADERS IN EMPIRE TRADE

Crusade of Ex-Service Canadians Under Currie to Britain is Proposed Canada Legion Head, Major Roper Makes Suggestion

FOR EMPIRE TRADE

Prince of Wales Endorses Plan of Service Organization

By Thos T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 27 (CP Cable).—Proposal to send a group of distinguished Canadians, former members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, under leadership of General Sir Arthur Currie of Montreal on a new empire trade crusade to the United Kingdom was put forward today by Major John S. Roper, President of the Canadian Legion.

This "crusade" to boost trade between Canada and Mother Country was outlined by Major Roper in an address to the convention of the British Empire Service League during discussion of empire trade.

"Our appeal to the British people," declared Major Roper, "will be given over to this country, with the cooperation and assistance of the British Empire Service League and of the British Legion, a group of our most distinguished ex-servicemen, statesmen, professional men, business men, whose duty it will be to represent the very highest qualities in our national life.

Cheers at Meetings

"We propose to hold a series of meetings, all over the country, and when addresses will be made to the British people generally and to the leading and financial interests in particular."

General Sir Arthur Currie, commander of the Canadian Corps during the war, now President of McGill University, would lead the Canadian group, Major Roper revealed. The proposal had been endorsed, he added, by the Prince of Wales, approved by Dominions Secretary J. H. Thomas, had the blessing of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and the enthusiastic support of the Empire Council of the British Empire Service League.

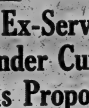
"We propose at such a time to vividly recall the memories of 1914 to 1918 and will be content to suggest that the magnificent spirit of loyalty and of service and sacrifice and comradeship and Empire ought not to be forgotten. We shall remind them how, without him or suggestion, Canada has made the Empire's battles for ex'stence her own battles.

The main purpose of the "friendly invasion" would be to impress on the people of Great Britain the virtues of purchasing Canadian and Canadian sources those goods they need from abroad and which Canada can supply. Major Roper said:

MAY NOT EXPORT GOLD

Washington, July 27—(AP)—Attorney General Cummings has ruled that no export of gold produced in the United States which has been through the mints or assay offices can be exported under the President's gold embargo proclamation. If it is exported only because of the value of its gold content.

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS



Bordentown, N. J., July 27 (AP)—The volunteer firemen's team was leading the Yeport team next door to them in the second inning of a strong battle for coming up when—blast it all—the fire alarm sounded. It ended the game. The fire was put out, but by the way, a hose line below the firemen have a lead like that again.

Greeley, Neb. July 27 (AP)—Somewhere in Custer County there's a jack rabbit that's alive today because of the help or aid astonishable.

T. H. Murphy of Greeley was driving along a highway when he came upon a hound in hot pursuit of the jack. As he drove alongside the rabbit he shoved down momentarily and the rabbit hopped upon the running board of the car.

The rabbit rode there about a quarter of a mile, until the hound had given up the chase, and then jumped off and went his way leisurely.

TWO CAMPERS ARE KILLED

Berry Pickers' Party in Car Crashed Into Train

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 27. —(AP)— A man and a child were dead and the child's parents believed near death today as the result of a collision late yesterday between their auto and a Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic train in the village of Raco, 15 miles west of here. Two other occupants of the car were less seriously hurt.

William Potter, 45, farmer, of Eckerman, was instantly killed, and Marjorie Michaud, five of McFarland, died in a hospital here several hours later. The child's mother, Mrs. Leo Michaud, 34, suffered compound fractures of both legs and internal injuries. Michaud, 32, driver of the car, was injured slightly on head and body.

Announcement of the engagement was made yesterday by Miss McDougall's mother, Mrs. Ellen McDougall of Winnipeg, Man., but the date for the wedding was not disclosed.

Miss McDougall explained that her mother's health and the press of State affairs upon the Governor were factors that would enter into the choosing of the date. At all odds, she said, the ceremony will be simple, and probably will be held at the Presbyterian Church of which she is a member.

MAY NOT LEVY SUCCESSION DUTIES, FOUND

Alberta Loses Case Before Privy Council on Estate Property

EFFECT HERE

Finding Has Important Bearing in This Province

London, July 27.—(CP Cable).—In one of the most important Canadian Appeals before the judicial committee of the Privy Council for some time, their Lordships today ruled the Alberta Government had no right to exact succession duties on estate property either within or without the province.

The Privy Council dismissed the appeal of the Province of Alberta from a ruling of the Alberta Court of Appeal that the Government had no right to impose succession duties on property outside Alberta. The Alberta Court however, had held the government was entitled to impose duties on personal property within the province.

The Privy Council allowed the cross-appeal of executors of the estate of the late L. R. Kerr, who maintained the government cannot legally collect succession duties owing to the executors being required to become liable for duties in respect of beneficiaries upon whom the burden ultimately falls.

Duties Not Valid

In the opinion of their Lordships the succession duties mentioned in both sub-sections of the Alberta Succession Duties Act, challenged by the Kerr Estate, are not valid in the case of the Kerr Estate and is found to be neither direct nor within the Province and in the case of the other their Lordships decided the taxation is invalid.

Therefore invalid.

No order concerning costs is made, the appeal and among the parties to the dispute.

Involved in the case, of far greater importance as a test of the act's validity, was the sum of $60,000 claimed by the Alberta Government on the estate of the late Leigh R. Kerr, legal in Alberta would have a widespread effect in Ontario.

The decision of the Privy Council would tend to free the Province from Succession Duties' Law, Mr. Common was not present when the ruling was handed down. The decision "undoubtedly would considerably simplify the question of succession duties".

Officials of the provincial Treasury department, however, did not believe today's ruling would affect the Succession Law.

W. G. Watson, general manager of the Toronto General Trust Company, said he did not believe Ontario's law would be affected as the province has a direct tax on beneficiaries. He added the decision, if it becomes complicated by the right of a testator to insert in his will that the duties are to be paid by executors, and not the beneficiary, responsible for payment of the duties.

In this way the duties would be direct succession taxation and not legal accordance with the ruling of the Privy Council. They were applied to property held outside Ontario.

MacDONALD IS VERY HOPEFUL

Expects to See Delegates Back in London Shortly

LONDON, July 27.—(CP Cable) —With words of hope Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald this afternoon drew the curtain down on the first week of the Great War of the Depression. He insisted it was only the first act and not the end of the play.

"There must be no mistake," he said, "that we are through the winding up."

"We adjourn not because we are disheated, not because the committees require a little longer time to continue their deliberations and consider their conclusions. I therefore bid you adieu in the firm conviction that before many months pass I shall have the pleasure of offering you a welcome

Parley Adjourns but with Hope of Success

President Roosevelt in Message Sees Continuance of Efforts at International Harmony—Domestic Difficulties First to be Smoothed

London, July 27—After hearing addresses from a number of leading delegates, the World Economic Conference was adjourned late this afternoon to meet again after a recess and make a new attempt to restore world prosperity.

London, July 27—(CP) Cable)—Some blunt words marked the closing hours of the World Economic Conference today.

"We have no reason to congratulate ourselves that this session has attained," was the outspoken comment of Premier Hendrik Colijn of Holland, chairman of the economic commission.

"There is no need to disguise the fact," added Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, "that we are greatly disappointed to have to record today that very little progress has been made towards our goal."

Yet none questioned that the conference had begun a task which should be carried to its conclusion. James M. Cox of the United States, chairman of the monetary commission, thought the conference had had distinctly worth-while results. He predicted that when the national industrial units had been restored trade would again begin crossing the frontiers.

Domestic Ventures

Cox did not believe domestic ventures rendered necessary by extraordinary times would be a thing of fixed permanency policy. The social order was a pathetic figure of the mediaeval past. Likewise the national barrier of today would be their modern days, Cox asserted.

The United States optimism was keynoted in a surprise message from President Franklin D. Roosevelt read to the conference at the end of the morning plenary session. Before the previous speaker, Cordell Mr. Chamberlain, had pointed out inability of the United States to stabilize her dollar at this time was primarily responsible for ending the full work of the conference impossible. Though the British spokesman did not name the United States for this, under the circumstances.

President Roosevelt said results could not be measured always in terms of formal agreements, that the interchange of national views had brought a better understanding by the nations of the problems of other countries and for this purpose the World Conference could not be regarded as a complete fail-

Solutions Necessary

Former Governor Cox earnestly counseled to impress on the delegates that ultimate achievement might be possible. "The men who believed in this conference still believe in it," he said. "After the national task have been completed there will remain problems affecting every nation that has unabandoned together must solve.

"The artery of life provided for the conference is vital," he said in referring to the fact the steering committee will be kept in being to eventually consider reassembling the conference. "When I shall assemble I don't know, but it patiently waits upon the time for the inevitable hour of service. Gentlemen, you will be back in your seats or others of your countrymen will be."

And Russia naturally, through L. M. Maxky, the Soviet Ambassador in London, saw in the failure of the conference the imminent breaking of the capitalistic system, with Russia spurred by economic nationalism sparing for a new war. For this reason the Soviet delegation would not vote on the modest resolutions the conference.

"The whole world atmosphere," Maisky added, "is filled with vague forebings of advancing catastrophe. He who does not realize this, he who attempts to deny it, either lives in a fool's paradise or lacks the ability to read the march of events.

Economic Nationalism

"That unrestrained economic nationalism which threatens to break through all bounds when our conference disperses may easily become if the proper measures are not adopted, in the fore-runners of a new world war." The Soviet delegation, he concluded, stood for peace and in its struggle for peace would have on its side the toiling masses of the world.

The delegates' gloom lightened a little as they rose for lunch after hearing Roosevelt's statement.

The court pointed out to the accused man that it was a rather petty matter to be guilty of enter summer cottages.

Too Big Task Under Present System to Iron out Difficulties

London, July 27—(CP)— Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, President of the German Reichsbank, told the World Economic Conference at its closing plenary session today that no one in particular was to blame for the fact that in six weeks the parley had reached almost none of the subjects on its carefully prepared agenda.

After saying that committee resolutions were merely generalizations and recommendations, he maintained that "the mistake is in the system."

The task of regulating simultaneously conditions in 66 entirely different countries proved to be impracticable, he said, citing as an example the question of currency stabilization.

Letters to The Editor

Belleville, July 27th, 1933.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:—

In reply to letter by Fair Hill Tax Payer would say that if this party will make any definite charges over his own signature we will be most pleased to have his complaints investigated at once.

Geo. A. Bennett,
Chairman of Waterworks Dept.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer,

I trust you will find space in your columns for the following letter in behalf of those of our citizens who do use the jitneys for our east side bus, to and from our hospital.

This request, or suggestion goes out to the citizens of our "Belleville the Beautiful" for one or two substantial benches or park seats to be placed on the north-east corner of Dufferin and Dundas streets for permanent use of people while waiting for the bus. During this extreme heat I have noticed a mother with a new babe in her arms with five small live's boys to be kept from the passing car traffic while standing. Some few old aged couples returning from visiting sick friends not to mind the bus-waiting so long in the sun, and present no crutches standard after just missing it by a few minutes, and these are times of financial depression surely, and I am sure we as citizens with this opportunity to help in giving a small, yet most acceptable assistance, will esteem it a pleasure, and avail themselves of the opportunity. I have permission to use Lot four for the benches.

Thanking you for your kindness, I am respectfully

Beatrice Jones.

NAPANEE FALL FAIR IS CALLED OFF

Unable to cover Midway For Attraction

At a meeting of the Officers and Directors of the Lennox Agricultural Society, held recently at Nap, anee, it was decided not to hold the annual Fall Fair this year.

The reason for not holding it was that the Society could not get a Midway to come, as they have done in other seasons, also that the outlook of entries of vegetables, and animals is not favorable at the present time, and the management, although having a little financial success last year, thing it unwise to hold the fair again this year.

Without the Midway, and products in the Palace, the Fair could not possibly be a success.

FIREMEN OUT TO GRASS FIRE

City firemen sidled another run to the present week's high record when they were called out last Wednesday afternoon to a grass fire on the west end of Charlotte street, near the old Fair Grounds. No damage resulted from the blaze.

CUT THE WEEDS FROM HARBOR

Two men armed with long handled scythes and rakes, under the direction of the local Harbor Commission, were busy at work today on a raft in the upper harbor cutting out the heavy growth of weeds formed there since the beginning of the season. According to workers and waterfront residents, the present growth is the heaviest since the low water ebb in the harbor four years ago.

SLIGHT PICKUP IN CONDITIONS

While the improvement in unemployment conditions during the past few weeks has not been decided, according to reports from local office of the Employment Service of Canada, a slight pickup in conditions locally has been noted. Construction work now in progress in and around the city, and other seasonal work has assisted the upswing of conditions. Farm work is still scarce for the few, who volunteer for the job.

PLEASANT WEATHER STILL CONTINUES

City temperatures stood at 83 at noon on Thursday, the same mark recorded for high on Wednesday. Cooling breezes still swept the district bringing a return to comfort to residents. High for Thursday was marked at 86, two points higher than Wednesday. The West heralded heat wave had not yet put in its appearance.

20 MILE RATE AT CROSSINGS

A recent bulletin issued by the highway department of the Province of Ontario definitely stated that a new speed limit for motor vehicles had been established at railway crossings. The new limit set by the department is twenty miles per hour for all motor vehicles while crossing a railway crossing. The various traffic officers and patrolmen throughout the province received instructions to enforce this new law implicitly. The new speed law for railway crossings followed a demand for more and better protection for motorists at railway crossings.

EXCURSION BY BETHEL HALL

The annual outing of the Bethel Hall Sunday School was held Wednesday afternoon at the Ontario Lakeside at Cedar Vale, Sand Banks. Shortly after the noon hour visitors left Bethel Hall, conveying the children and scholars of the school to one of the most enjoyable outings ever staged by them. Everything that goes to make a successful picnic was forthcoming for those attending, plentiful supplies of ice cream and peanuts, good eats and a variety of races, that provided everyone of both sexes opportunities to prove their athletic abilities.

The fine sand beach made an attraction for nearly every member of the party, who enjoyed swimming or paddling at sometime during the afternoon, and the temperature of the water of Lake Ontario was most favorably for these pastimes.

The superintendent of the Sunday School, Mr. W. Logue, and his teachers had a busy afternoon looking after the wants and welfare of their charges.

STATE PROPERTY TO BE OPENED UP

A large slate property, two miles north of Madoc, which has been dormant for years is to be again brought into production according to plans of the present operators of the newly-formed Quinte Slate Products Limited. This mine is one of the very few in Canada, and the only one in which slate can be quarried in paying quantities. The new company is headed by Alex MacLeod of Peterboro, and has a capitalization of $30,000. It is planned to produce slate shingles at the plant, and grind the waste products suitable into asphalt roofing manufacture. Other by-products will include slate flour, used as a filler in the manufacture of rubber insulating material.

SPARKS FROM PASSING ENGINE CAUSES BLAZE

Occupants of Section House Forced to Leave in Night Attire

Collins Bay, Ont., July 27 (CP).—Fire, believed to have been started by sparks from a passing engine, destroyed a section house, property of the Canadian National Railway, here early today. Sydney Reid, his wife, and three children, occupants of the house, escaped. All household effects of the Reid family were lost in the fire.

HARBOR BD. TAKES ACTION

Is Pressing Suggestion Made by Mr. Tummon on Dredging

"The matter is being pressed by the local Commission", declared Mr. Geo. F. Calvert, chairman of the local Harbor Commission, when questioned today regarding the probability of an extension of harbor dredging as far as the Schuster coal dock. "While we have had no direct word as yet from the department at Ottawa, we believe the prospects are very good."

In conversation with the government engineer today, stationed in this city and in charge of the work of dredging now being carried on at the government dock, it was learned that no orders had yet been received by him to take further soundings in the harbor, but that he was a probability that word would be received later this week.

The matter of dredging along the east side of the harbor as far as the Schuster dock has interested Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P. for South Hastings who has taken the matter up with Ottawa officials for the additional work, according to Mr. Tummon, appear to be good.

It is believed that if the harbor could be deepened sufficiently to allow large coal carriers to make port in this city, a decided saving would be made. Coal rail rates now higher than those from Montreal to Toronto.

POLICE PUP HELD AT CITY POUND

An ambling three months old police dog, found on the west side of the river today awaits an owner at the city pound. The animal appears to be a well bred one, and the pet of a food owner. No tag or collar was on the pup.

RASPBERRIES PRICES DOWN

Price of raspberries declined slightly today on Belleville market. The red sold for two boxes for 25c while the blue brought 10c. Black cap sold for 15c a box.

Small baskets of cherries were offered at 25 c each while the larger ones brought 65c. There was no advance in the price of eggs, 18c a dozen.

Green corn brought 15c per dozen and local tomatoes 60c per berry box. New potatoes were lower at 40c a peck. Other fresh vegetables such as onions, carrots beets etc., remained stationary in price.

Cheese Awards in P.E. County

Several weeks ago Mr. George H. Barr, Director of Dairying for Ontario, accompanied by Mr. O. G. Publow of Kingston, made a tour of inspection of the cheese factories of Prince Edward county. Mr. Elwood Fox, secretary-treasurer of the Prince Edward County Cheesemakers' Association, was this week in receipt of a letter from Mr. Barr, accompanying his report on the condition of the cheese factories of the county. Mr. Barr says:

"I am pleased to congratulate the cheese makers in Prince Edward on the exceedingly fine showing they have made this competition. I have never seen more attractive cheese made in all my experience in the dairy business; and both Mr. Publow and I were very well pleased with the quality of cheese we saw. Again let me congratulate the Cheesemakers' Association in Prince Edward on putting on this competition."

Mr. Barr's and Mr. Publow's gradings of the cheese factories show that a factory in the county with a possible 100 points fell below 90 per cent. The following are the percentage standings of the first four factories under each inspectional standard:

Outside factory conditions—Black River 98.5, Rivercrest 98, Mt. Gill 97.5, Waupoos 96.5.

Factory conditions inside—Waupoos 98, Black River 96.7, Cloverdale 96.5, Rimbrook 96.

Curing room and cheese on hand—Waupoos 97, Ben Gill 96.3, Cloverdale 96.2, Rimbrook 96.

Appearance of makers and assistants—Black River 100, Rimbrook 99.5, Royal Street 97.5, Fish Lake 97.

Cool curing room—Cloverdale 98, Ben Gill 97.5, Rimbrook 97, Mountain View 97, Royal Street 97.

Ordinary curing room—Rimbrook 97, Northport 96.5, Big Island 96, Fish Lake 96, Black River 95.

OBITUARY

HELEN F. KEMP

One of this city's popular and most lovable young women passed away Wednesday afternoon in the Belleville General Hospital, following a short attack of appendicitis, when the death of Miss Helen Frances Kemp occurred in that institution. Miss Kemp was born here 25 years ago, the daughter of Mrs. Edith A. Tucker and the late Joseph Henry Kemp and received her education in the public and high schools of Belleville. She was a valued member of Emmanuel Church and her amiable disposition and charming ways made her many friends in the city of her birth. When the J. J. Cash Co., opened its plant here, Miss Kemp was one of its early employees, and by her capability and tact rose to fill the important position of floor lady. Known to hundreds of the younger generation in Belleville, her untimely death is sincerely grieved by them. To those left to mourn the loss of a devoted daughter and sister and friend is extended the sym-

THRILLS GALORE IN PUNT RACES

Good Racing, Spanking Breeze Gives Large Crowd Thrill

Thrills galore. Spectators standing on tiptoes, and crowding every available inch of available space at the end of Victoria Park. Split second hair line laps at the turning buoys. A good clean wind, which stiffened into a hard breeze, rippling the water of the bay and making the course just right for the navigators. Punts tipping over in the breeze; others running aground. Still others forced out of the race by accidents. Wednesday's racing in the local harbor had excitement aplenty. And there were challenge flags for every winner.

Callaghan's After You II. had an easy victory in Class A race, when Boulter's Joks went astray on the third lap and followed the wrong course. The Joks had previously led the way during the better part of the afternoon. Volunteer, with "Okay" Smith at the tiller, after leading the field over the course for the first lap was forced out with a broken pulley on the mainsail.

Roma in B Class emerged winner over her nearest rival the Swallow, when the youthful crew of the Swallow, a new entry, also took the wrong course. Scrapper in that class capsized in a sudden squall, and Mary Lou lost the race, when she went aground on a shoal.

C1 Class provided the closest race of all. Only 25 seconds separated Zephyr from the Toots as the former boat crossed the finish line. Skippy in that class was third, and lagging closely behind.

Again the Ron Wallace showed her superiority in the water, when she led the field in D Class around the course with a rapidly growing distance between herself and nearest competitor, and landing across the finish line long before the others were in sight. Bobbie O in this class broke her rigging and was forced to retire, leaving the Gloria to battle with the speedy Ron Wallace. The largest crowd of the season crowded the park to pick the winners.

Official time for race is as follows:

A Class—
After U..II.	2.34.00	4.31.32

WILL HOLIDAY IN HOME LAND

Loy Ling and Family Leave For China Middle of August

Loy Ling, part owned of the Quinte Cafe, Bridge St. East, Mrs. Ling and their 8 year old boy, Gordon, leave the city Monday next for Vancouver, B.C. From that port they sail on the C. P. R. S. S. "Empress of Canada" August 12th, to spend the coming two years in Mr. and Mrs. Ling's native country. Mrs. Ling has been in ill health for a number of months, and it is in hopes that a lengthy visit among relatives in China will restore her to health.

The Ling family propose passing the next 24 months about 20 miles outside of Hong Kong, and while in that port anticipate seeing J. S. Yon who formerly, for many years, conducted the first Chinese restaurant in Belleville. Yon left for his native country some six years ago and is now proprietor of a Chinese drug store in Hong Kong. Last year he was joined there by his son, Moy, who was one of the first, if not the first baby of Chinese parentage to be born in Belleville. Moy was an apt scholar in both the public and high schools here and had many friends in the city.

Arrived in 1910

Loy Ling arrived in this country in 1910 and, after five years spent in Toronto, came to Belleville in 1915 to be employed by his brother Charlie in the Empire Cafe on Front street. When the Canadian Air Force established the camp at Deseronto during the war in 1916, Mr. Charlie Ling opened another Empire Cafe there, and put his brother in charge of it. In 1921 a partnership of the two Lings was formed with the opening of the Quinte Cafe on Bridge street. For 12 years the brothers have carried on the best restaurant of its kind in the city and their courtesy and attention to business have won their place of business a most deservedly good name and excellent patronage.

It is hoped that Mrs. Ling's health will benefit fully by her trip to her old home and relatives, and that the excursion to China may be fully enjoyed by those participating in it.

Each mind is pressed and open every ear to hear new tidings through they no way joy us.—Fairfax.

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE

These are days of serious thinking on the part of parents and others including educationists as they look over the ranks of boys and girls who are awaiting or are nearing the time to choose their lifework. This issue which is always one of vast import in the life of a boy or girl is rendered so much more intense by the present day situation or at least the situation which has obtained up to the present as a result of slackening of demands for labor, either manual, commercial or professional. At any time the decision of a vocation is one of the great crisis of life and as usual there is no doubt that many have avoided answering the problem, merely alighting the opportunity to make the choice while there yet is time. An excuse such may find in the business world of today, but that will not do for the time of choice is now or never.

Many boys and girls, however, have been bettering their time in these slack years and will be the better able to face whatever problems arise in the coming days in regard to their lifework.

If there ever was a time when children must be guided it is today when so many nostrums and shortcuts to better things are proposed. The young must learn that only the straight way and the hard way are the avenues to success.

Mr. Hall Linton of the Vocational Guidance Committee of the Victoria College Alumni Association believes Canada is on the verge of a great development in vocational education and Premier Henry shares his view of the vast importance to the professional, industrial and commercial future of Canada and to the individuals themselves that they have the true course pointed out.

The question resolves itself into this: What is to be done to help the boy and girl make the most of themselves for the good of others as well as of self? Mr. Linton points out the danger of spoon feeding which has no place in modern vocational education, then parents incline toward setting their sons and daughters upon a higher social scale than they themselves have occupied, all forgetful or failing to realize that the child's welfare and society's welfare play a great part.

The Y.M.C.A. and the courses in secondary education in collegiates and vocational schools have done much good work along this line of vocational guidance. The Kiwanis Club of Belleville have made no small contribution in furthering the aims of this progressive movement. They have given practical demonstrations in opening up the way for a number of young people through the guidance they have been able to give.

VIMY RIDGE MEMORIAL

The memorial on Vimy Ridge, which four Canadian divisions and the Thirteenth British Brigade of West Kents and Scots stormed in April, 1917, is not yet completed fifteen years after the Armistice. But it is an undertaking massive in conception, 240 acres 200 feet above the Douai Plain, and designed to be worthy of a victory of which Sir Douglas Haig said that it was "the hinge upon which Vimy Ridge is an achievement of the highest order and of which Canada may well be proud." It was fitting that the sculptor should be a Canadian, Walter S. Allward, who won an award that was open to the British Empire. Since 1925 he has been engaged on the work in a London studio. "All the time," he says, "I have sought to avoid any semblance of drum-beating. Canada mourns her dead in the valley of Vimy and seeks to show in the Mother Spirit, which stands with drooped head on the wall, brooding over the plain on which she fell. Sorrow there, but not vainglory is there." Blocks of from twelve to twenty tons were required, and they were found in an old Roman quarry in Normandy, from which the stone to build the Palace of Diocletian in Spalato in the third century was taken.

The commune of France and Canada is to be represented by twin pylons 188 feet high. Below them will be seen the Spirit of Sacrifice in twenty heroic figures grouped at the ends of a wall 287 feet long, the base of the memorial. Surmounting the pylons will appear in relief Peace, Justice, Truth and Knowledge. The design calls for the covering of mouths of guns along the base by olive branches and laurel. The memorial should be ready for dedication on Dominion Day next year. The approaches will be by avenues of pines grown in Canada and France. In F. A. McKenzie's "Canada's Day of Glory" may be read the breathless story of the capture of Vimy Ridge. A Canadian correspondent, he does justice to the part the men of Kent and Scotland played in that immortal feat of arms. The dedication would not be adequate without the presence of the commander of the troops engaged, Sir Julian Byng, Governor General of Canada from 1921 to 1926.—New York Times.

The noblest motive is the public good.—Virgil.

BACK OF ALL

My days are full of many things,
Small tasks that must be done;
In such mad haste this old world swings
Again to set of sun.
I bake the bread, I stir the fire,
I mend and sew and sweep,
Until my head and hands must tire
But somewhere deep, oh, deep.
Through every hour of the day
From dawn till shadows fall,
Through happy toil and laughing play
One thought is back of all!

I fill the lampe, I stir the cream,
I rub the glasses bright;
Yet these are like a flying dream
That fades before this light.
For back of all and through it all Round, above, about,
From dawn till dusky shadows fall
The thought of you shines out!

LAST SUNDAY was the hottest day in ten years in this province, according to the Kingston Whig, and other more or less reliable weather recorders. This Great Family Journal will cordially endorse any kind of language employed on last Sunday's weather, and will say that anybody who could sleep behind bricks in Toronto last Sunday night from midnight to four a.m. E.S.T., was certainly possessed of a clear conscience and good digestion.

THE WORLD'S FAIR OF 1893, and the Pan American Exposition at Buffalo later were thrillers for the youth of those days who were privileged to see them. They raved over the sights and scenes for weeks and months after and in fact never forgot the pleasure and thrills which made epic events occasioned. A dentist from Erie, Pennsylvania, who specializes on the care and treatment of children's teeth, was in Belleville this week, and mentioned that as a boy he had visited the World's Fair in Chicago and had never forgotten the thrills of that event. Recently he was quizzing child patients who have visited the Century of Progress exhibition as to their reactions. Only one, thus far, a little girl, carried away definite impressions of the big affair, which seemed to have left them cold. This one little girl said that her aunt had taken her to the art exhibit and the pictures were wonderful. The others when questioned as to what they thought of the World's Fair, gave various answers, none of which were a thrill. Some of them commented on being tired, of sore feet, of something they had to eat there, but nothing as to what they saw. Youth today is so sophisticated, so fed up with knowledge through the movies, books, newspapers, etc., that it takes a good deal to give them even a tiny thrill of delight.

"NO DOGS ALLOWED" signs still stand at the entrance to Victoria Park, but the occasional dog finds its way unescorted by male master, into the sacred precincts, and redden the faces of the visitors. Of course the dogs can't read. An occasional automobile finds its way into Victoria Park despite signs stating that, like Bermuda, automobiles are banned—perhaps the motorists have eye trouble, too.

x x x x

READER OF THIS COLUMN gives it as his considered and emphatic opinion that electric lights should be restored to Victoria Park, and that motor cars should be permitted to enter. The poles and wires have been removed from Victoria Park, for reasons of economy, we presume, but it would seem that in view of the fact that the citizens own the local electric lighting system the City Fathers and Hydro Commission could be more generous with the public lighting. As to permitting motor cars to use the park, that is another question, many mothers bringing their children to the park knowing that there is no danger of being run over there by an automobile. One thing very apparent at Victoria Park in holiday time is the need of some supervision over the pool where the kiddies, big and little, have a whale of a time, and are at times in danger of drowning in the deep end. The deep water swimming platform would also be the better for supervision although it must be said that considering the absence of supervision the conduct of patrons is remarkably good. A supervisor for August might prevent lamentable accidents.

ALL'S WELL THAT begins WELL

AH, THERE'S THE RUB! A party must be well begun. And from time immemorial, the opening gesture has been the serving of the long, tall drinks.

And there's only one way to insure that! Make them with Canada Dry—The Champagne of Ginger Ales!

There's something almost magical in such a drink. Just look at it! Did you ever see anything sparkle so gaily? Just taste it! Is there another ginger ale with such subtle flavour?

There's a reason back of it all. This Champagne of Ginger Ales doesn't merely mix . . . it blends! There's never a bit of harshness to a drink made with Canada Dry . . . never a touch of evenness. It's mellow and smooth always.

And, of course, there's cool refreshment in a glass of Canada Dry all by itself.

WHAT GERMS ARE AND HOW THEY PERFORM

Germs Are Everywhere in Air, in Mouth Passage

By Louis E. Block, M.D., Ph.D.
Pasteur Laboratory on Health and Psychology.

Germs are very minute organisms. In fact, they can only be seen with high-powered microscopes. Some are vegetable in origin, some are on the borderline between vegetable and animal, and some are animal and frankly parasitic in nature.

Germs are everywhere! In the air we breathe, in the food we eat, in the things we touch and come into daily contact with. Germs lodged in the mouth and nasal passages, for instance, may enter the body proper by way of the lungs or the digestive tract. We do not succumb to their ravages, however, when nature's defenses, which might be summarized in the two words "normal health," are strong enough to fight them off.

All disease germs of whatever kind are composed of an outer covering of cellulose and an internal substance, protoplasm, which is alive. But the vegetable ones do not, like plants, contain that special coloring matter known as chlorophyl. We therefore find germs of vegetable origin to be colorless.

There are germs which are round, oval, rod-shaped or formed like a thin filament. When round they are called cocci. Bacteria, they are microscopic they are often designated as microbes. When looking like rods they are known as bacilli or bacteria. The size of the various germs varies from one fifty-thousandths of an inch to one five-hundredths of an inch.

Germs multiply either by simple division or by the production of eggs or spores. Strange to say, these spores are very hardy. Indeed, the spores often survive in a solution that is boiled, while the mother cells succumb under similar treatment.

All varieties of micro-organisms grow and multiply with astounding rapidity. A single bacteria, for instance, divides into two parts, then into four, then into eight, sixteen, thirty-two, etc., until the number of offspring from a single germ may total as many as sixteen or seventeen millions!

It is easy to understand, therefore how readily a disease may flourish when once it becomes lodged in the system. Often all the intricate chemical and physiological processes within us are found unable to withstand such an onrush of millions upon millions of germs. For wherever the disease germs lodge, they immediately multiply, and usually they have been present in the blood or in the tissues themselves for days before actual symptoms of the disease manifest themselves.

This preliminary growing stage is familiarly known as the "incubation period," during which germs are getting a foothold and are gradually breaking down the body's defenses. Thus an individual may not show immediately that he has become infected with disease. It takes from one to eight days for diphtheria to reveal its presence, and in chicken pox the incubation period is from ten to fourteen days!

Moisture and heat always favor the growth of germs of whatever nature. That is why cool, dry, fresh air—even by an—is best when we are ill whether the germs responsible are only those of the ordinary cold, or pneumonia.

Each type of germ gives rise to a special set of symptoms. That is how physicians identify the kind of organism responsible. And it is not so much the germs themselves that cause the damage but the poisons or toxins which are given off by them during their own life cycle.

One disease after another is being conquered as germs hitherto unknown, are identified, labeled and their habits studied. This science which deals with these phenomena is called bacteriology, and it is an intensely fascinating study.

Dr. Block's Daily Health Hint

Guessing about pregnancy should be avoided at all costs. A physician should always be consulted, as the first suspicious signs and his advice strictly followed. In this way many dangers may be really avoided.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was to supper, being stake under outdoors and ma said to pop, Well, it took me practically all afternoon to get them there, but the t ith.

That is a quick work, pop said. It takes a lot of people all their lives, and even then they dont find out the truth, he said, and ma said, I've felt that way often in my days for several days now. Were they roomatism or weren't they, pop asked, and ma said, Well, the roomatism I wanted to ease my mind by finding out was if it was possible, and on the other hand if it was roomatism I didn't want to continue living in an ignorant, sinful fool's paradise. After all words there's nothing I detest more than uncertainty, I want to look the truth in the face and not hide behind its back. So I went strate to Dr. Rossi and asked him to point black English whether I had roomatism or whether I didn't, he said.

Then ya go on, pop said, and ma said, Well, he asked me a few insignificant questions and then announced in an irritating cocksure manner that the twinges were roomatism and that I would have to go on a long diet. Well, I can tell you right now I wasn't going to a casual offhand diagnosis like that so I asked him what I wanted to see the absolute truth so I hide me to Dr. Raggly, he's the Hewsen doctor and Maud told me he was wonderful and so he is, because it didn't take him 2 seconds to diagnose that the twinges were one of temporary passions, practically meaningless, so now I know the truth and my mind is at rest, ma said.

My gollies that's remarkable and I propose a toast to the fair truth seeker, may all er twinges be happy ones, pop said, and ma said, That's very sweet of you Willyum.

With by that time he was in back of the sporting page.

COLLEGE HILL LOSE BY 8-7

Grills' Garage Win First Game of Playoff in Softball Loop

Grills' Garage has one in the bag in the senior men's softball play-off for the right to meet Delaney Mercals in the finals for the loop title, when they defeated College Hill Cubs in the first game of a two out of three game series at Coleman Park Wednesday night by a score of 8 to 7. The largest crowd of the season was on hand and they were treated to a snappy, scrappy game of softball and no doubt the majority will be on hand for the remainder of the series. The second game will be played at the flats on Friday night.

Grills' Garage received the breaks in the game benefitting by a decision on first base and also a decision at second in the seventh when both times the College Hill boys were in a position to new up the pastime. So intense was the rivalry between the two teams, that umpire George Clapper behind the plate put E. Reid out of the game for disputing a decision, which was followed by abusive language by that player. The games are only being played for sport and it seems a shame that players are not responsible to control their temper. In all justice to the player in question it was edged on by the management in his grievance and the umpire in child would have been quite within his rights to banish the manager from the game. On every close play all one could see would be a flock of green shirts moving swiftly to surround the umpire and cause trouble. Umpires are put in charge and they try to call them as they see them and players should abide by the decision without question. The umpires are getting paid to call them, while the players are in there for the sport.

Farrara Wins.

Farrara was selected by Manager Tebworth but was derricked in the sixth with runners on first and second and none out. "Bert" Miller being called to the hillock but a couple of hits before being properly warmed up spelled his defeat and he had to take the loss. Farrara walked five and allowed eight hits but his team mates did not accord him any too good support, a misplaced fly ball in the fourth allowing two runs to score. Clarke, the opposing hurler, was unsteady in the early frames but settled away to pitch a fair game. He allowed ten hits and walked but three and his team mates made seven of the plays behind him. Clarke especially standout with a one hand stab of a hard driven ball over second. T. Miller was the big hitter for the losers by having a homer, triple and double to his credit in four tics. Vic Whitlow hit for the circuit but the outfielder misjudged his drive. College Hill was up four runs but they got one back in the third, three in the fourth, two in the fifth and two more in the sixth. The losers put on a rally in the seventh and came within one of tieing the score. The line-ups:

College Hill — Lupenette, J. Murray, F. Murray, Covert, T. Miller, Farrara, Jenkinson, Robinson, McDonald, Miller.

Grills' Garage—J. Barriage, Haley, H. Reid, Latchford, K. Clarke, W. Clarke, Matthews, White, Barnett.

Score by innings:

College Hill . 0 1 3 0 2 0 1—7 10 3
Grills' Garage 0 0 1 2 2 3 x—8 8 3

Batteries—College Hill, Farrara, Miller and J. Murray; Grills' Garage, K. Clarke and Latchford.

Umpires—Clapper, plate; Rollins, Ethier and Miles, bases.

Yesterdays Stars

POLICE COURT

Thomas Irwin, Sidney, appeared in the local police court this morning charged with driving a car while intoxicated. Irwin was found guilty by Magistrate Ponton and owing to the fact that it was his second offence under the L.C.A. Irwin was given the maximum sentence of three months and his driver's permit is automatically suspended.

The case arose out of a motor-car accident on the evening of July 14th last when Irwin's car collided with a telephone pole on the fourth concession of Sidney. Numerous witnesses from the nearby vicinity who were present following the accident testified.

Irwin giving evidence on his own behalf, swore that the accident followed the blowing out of a front tire of his car; He denied drinking that day. In summing up the case His Worship pointed out that numerous witnesses called had testified that Irwin appeared to be under the influence of liquor and also that circumstantial evidence also led him to believe the majority of the witnesses called. Irwin had been convicted on several former occasions, charged under the L.C.A. Stanley Whalen, transient, appeared charged with vagrancy. He was arrested by the Provincial Police and a quantity of "canned heat" was found in his possession. The case was enlarged for three days.

R. C. Donnan, K.C. local Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution throughout.

Weddings

PIKE—JEEVES

The marriage of Mr. Irvin E. Pike, eldest son of Major and Mrs. Pike, Salvation Army, of 122 Hurst-bourne-gardens, Barking, and Miss Dorothy Winifred Jeeves, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jeeves of 143, Boundry-rd, Barking, took place at the Salvation Army Citadel, Ripple-rd., Barking, on Saturday. Brigadier Boller officiated. The Citadel was decorated by Mr. Cecil Forsberg, says the June 24th issue of Barking, East Ham and Ilford Advertiser.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a white satin dress with veil and wreath of orange blossom, and white satin shoes, and carried a bouquet of arum lilies. The bridesmaids were Miss Lily Jeeves, chief, Miss Rose Jeeves, and Miss Kath. Jeeves, sisters of the bride, Miss Olive Brown, cousin of the bridegroom, and Miss Dorothy Friends, a friend of the bride. The three sisters of the bride and Miss Friend were lemon silk crepe ankle-length dresses, with lemon hats, and lemon satin shoes. Little Miss Olive Brown wore a white satin dress, and a crown of red roses. They carried shower bouquets of pink peas. Master Bertie Jeeves, cousin of the bride, attended as page and wore a white satin suit. The best man was Mr. Basil B. Pike, brother of the bridegroom. Mrs. Captain Ashley, organist sang the usual benediction during the ceremony.

A reception was held by Mr. and Mrs. Jeeves at the Municipal Restaurant, Barking, which was attended by 90 guests after which the bride and bridegroom who were the recipients of 150 wedding gifts of varied kinds and of great value, left for Ilfracombe for their honeymoon. For travelling the bride wore a grey coat, white fur, white hat, and gray suede shoes.

The groom is well-known in Belleville, where he learned the shoe business while employed with Mr. R. W. Brown, in his shoe shop in this city. Mr. Pike after having served his apprenticeship here returned to make his home in England.

VACATIONS and HEALTH

By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES

FOOD, MILK AND WATER

On your vacation, make it a point to have three good meals a day. The proper food in proper amounts is essential to building up the reserve of mental and physical energy for the next year's work.

But do not overeat, particularly during the hot weather. Many attacks of so-called "acute indigestion" are due to heart weakness brought on by overeating and drinking or undue exertion.

Most people confine themselves too much to the staple articles of diet such as meat, bread, potatoes and sugar in various combinations. In hot weather it is particularly advisable to avoid eating too much meat. Cereals, fruit, vegetables, eggs, milk, salads, fish and a moderate amount of meat should be the chief articles of diet. Although green vegetables and fresh fruits should be eaten in abundance care should be taken to maintain a balanced diet.

Vegetables and cereals should be thoroughly cooked. If you carry cooked food on a camping trip or picnic, it should be kept in glass jars. By all means avoid keeping food in an open metal container, or a can that has been opened. Any food, particularly meats, fish and poultry, that you may suspect has taken on smell to be contaminated should not be eaten.

Drink pure milk and pure water. Avoid drinking too many iced soft drinks and alcoholic beverages which are common causes of gastro-intestinal upsets.

Milk in country places is not always pasteurized. It is a wise precaution to inspect the dairy or storage place of the milk you have to drink. Scrupulous cleanliness and a cool place for storage are necessary to keep milk pure. Don't carry a supply of milk too long in a thermos bottle, for if it gets warm, bacteria multiply too freely. Make a special effort always to obtain the purest milk you can find, even if it costs a few cents more per bottle. If you are traveling with a baby, it is better to carry along a supply of evaporated milk, dried whole milk and pure water.

If your child is going to a summer camp, find out if the water supply has been tested and kept under favorable conditions. If necessary, have it analyzed yourself.

Be careful of the water you drink in camps, summer resorts, and by the roadside when traveling. Make sure that no contamination by sewage from barnyard pollution is possible. If in doubt, use only boiled water or certified bottled water, and if you can't be sure of obtaining it readily, carry with a thermos bottle of pure, cold water.

(By Alice Alden)

A good support is given by the all-in-one foundation garment, which is really the best wear for the larger woman. A new and very light model is made of fine net, the whole garment marked by horizontal strips of satin ribbon. This keeps the figure remarkably firm. Porous elastic is at the sides.

Dots are marked for success as doted fabrics and polka dots appear on everything from evening dresses to bathing suits. A lovely frock for Summer dining is in dotted red and white Swiss. The skirt has a series of double tiers bordered with pleating ruffles edged with Val lace. The sleeve has attractive treatment. The sash is of red velvet ribbon.

You can't do better than the printed frock for general Summer wear. A delightful model is a flower print in three shades of blue and white on a navy ground. The material is crepe de Chine. There are big pleated cuffs at the shoulder and pleated ruffles at the hem. The belt is plain navy crepe; to match the plain navy capeline hat.

Quite a splash is being made by the printed crepe evening frock done in large splashy floral prints. Such a model done in blue, mauve, white, yellow, black in a huge splash pattern has a con-cide sheari drapery that almost covers one arm. The silhouette is princess, the skirt has slight train.

Watch the birdie for bird trimming is being launched and used by several important milliners. A little hat of sulphur yellow straw cut on position lines, has tiny yellow and brown birds perching right on bread crown.

Wheat Rises at Winnipeg But New York Cancels at Late Hour Early Gains in Rails, "Wet" Shares and Steel—New York Buys Gold Shares at Toronto, But Toronto Exchange Lags

NEW YORK

New York, July 27 (AP)—Stocks took a moderately turbulent course in late dealings today after early bullish incentives had carried transactions to the highest in more than two points in trading. Gains in rails, "wet" shares, steels and other issues were largely cancelled, while a number of volatile issues registered net losses. Case showed a four-point gain while U. S. Smelting dropped six points after having risen two. Allegheny Corp. of 4 point or more was lost in U. S. Steel, New York Central, American Can and Allied Chemical. Transfers approximated 3,700,000 shares.

Mixed prices generally ruled in the Canadian list. Dominion Government 5s and 4s were slightly lower and the 4½s improved fractionally. Canadian Pacific is down 10 points from its point. Shares of Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines advanced moderately. International Nickel was a trifle easier and McIntyre Porcupine unchanged. The New York dollar sagged ⅛ of a cent to 85¼ cents.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

Toronto, July 27—(CP)—There was nothing very convincing about today's session of the Standard Mining Exchange operations. The list made an early show of firmness and the gold stocks moved ahead strongly after the New York markets opened at 11 a.m. but the best prices were not retained till the close.

Nickel closed 10 lower at 30.13 and Hollinger 5 lower at 5.00 but around mid-day slipped and closed about unchanged.

New York brought the gold shares today and the group firmed correspondingly on the standard market. Wright Hargreaves appearing to be the most active issue. The firmness was traced to renewal of the rumor that a free market for gold in the United States will be an early development.

Oil shares lagged today and trade was quiet also in the silver stocks except Eldorado which turned over in considerable volume. Nickel was 6 lower yesterday at the Base Metal group in the early session but it dropped its bullish tone before the close.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Toronto, July 27 (CP)—Stocks made little ground today in a quiet session. Buying was heavy in Nickel in the early session and some of the beverage shares but selling pressure ruled in the afternoon, easing off from yesterday's highs. Base Metal group in the Wall Street Board.

Nickel dropped its early gain, eased back to 30.35 and finished closed 2 higher at 32. Hollinger and C.P.R. receded fractions but Ford of Canada held a gain of 1 at 16.

Mid-summer drowsiness hung over the market today and volume was below normal except in International Nickel concerning which many rumors are plentiful suggesting rapidly increasing earnings. The United States warship building program is expected to be considerable prize to nickel's mill.

Buying of the liquor issues was not heavy but the general group maintained a firm tone. Beer shares were slightly unsteady the rapidly improving situation for the motor car industry gave Ford of Canada a lift along with the others.

FOREST HIDES CONVICT BUSH

Hold-up Near Milhaven Leads Police on Possible Clue

Kingston, Ont., July 27—(CP) David Bush, 25, penitentiary escapee of Kingston Penitentiary who made a sensational escape from the Canadian Pacific on July 16 is thought by police to be in hiding in the woods near Milhaven, following the report of a hold-up and robbery in the district, it was said.

An Odessa farmer, J. McCumber was held up and assaulted by a man on the road near Milhaven. The man's description given to police by McCumber is similar to that of Bush.

A further report that the Wrigley camp near the same town had been robbed of provisions and strengthened belief of police that the escaped prisoner is hiding somewhere in that district.

REBEKAH AND I. O. O. F. PICNIC

Over 200 Rebekahs and Oddfellows, their families and friends, Wednesday afternoon and evening, thoroughly enjoyed the annual picnic of those lodges, at Peach Point on Prince Edward County. Meeting at the I.O.O.F. hall at 2 p.m. transportation was made by motor to the point where bathing, games and contests were indulged in throughout the afternoon. Many interesting stories and novelties were introduced in the contests by those responsible for that portion of the evening's entertainment, and everyone of picnickers enjoyed these events.

A mammouth supper party did ample justice to the contents of the baskets and boxes at 6 o'clock and the excursionists motored their way back to the city reaching it at 9 p.m.

Those participating in the outing to Peach Point are profuse in their praise of the entertainments made by the picnic committee and the supervision of its chairman, Mr. R. H. Ketcheson.

KINGSTON MAN WINS DRAW

An interesting drawing was made Wednesday evening in the Synagogue of the congregation of the Sons of Jacob, Pinnacle street, for a Frigidaire refrigerator. Mayor Geo. O. Tice officiated and drew the ticket of Mrs. Morris of Kingston as the fortunate winner of the contest. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the congregation had instituted the event, and the revenue obtained goes to augment the funds of the Synagogue.

PETTY THEFTS ARE REPORTED

Three petty thefts were reported to the police Thursday morning. A bicycle that was reported stolen from the doorway of No. 8 Victoria Ave. was recovered by Constable Sword. Mr. Wm. Hall of College St. reported the loss of his son's watch while some time early Thursday morning miscreants stole a 12 lb. ham and a 10 lb. roll of bacon packing quilt from the rear of Wray's furniture store. The police are investigating the latter two cases.

THREE LOVE STORIES WOMEN IN "CAVALCADE" — GREAT BRITISH EPIC

In "Cavalcade" which Fox Film Corporation brings to the screen of the Isle Theatre, Sunday and Friday, at regular Belle prices, Noel Coward has woven three romances into the pattern of his tapestry record of the march of the generation.

The first romance is one between Jane and Fred, a rather unique departure in these days when marital fidelities appear. The theme for so many dramas. It is this romance of Jane Marryot and Jurling through the trials and vicissitudes of the years that bring that is said to add much power and strength to "Cavalcade," the story of which starts with a boy and girl affair between the daughter Marryot and Mr. Smith, the butler who are passengers, goes down in mid-Atlantic.

Jane Marryot is a modern-day sort of affairs between young Joe Marryot proud and handsome in his officers uniform, and rummy Bridget, a dancer she met on the boat of London, but whose parents former-ly were servants of the Marryots. Their affair persists throughout the war years, Fred's brother Edward refusing to marry Joe or discuss the matter until peace is declared. Despite his protest and his attempts to the attitude of the family toward their marriage.

Numerous spectacular episodes add to the dramatic effect of "Cavalcade," and include a number of historic events linked up in a kaleidoscopic resume of the chaotic condition of present day life.

Frank Lloyd, who directed, spent more than six months in preparation with a large technical staff before filming one scene, and every detail is accurate to the smallest particular. He scoured the world for the best talent available for the various roles, gathering an all-star cast which includes Diana Wynyard, Herbert Mundin, Una O'Connor, Irene Brown, Margaret Lindsay, Frank Lawton, Ursula Jeans and Merle Tottenham.

"Three Little Pigs" a gorgeous cartoon in full beautiful color, and the popular Belle Canadian News.

"Cavalcade", is beautiful and everybody everyone should experience, but to get the full enjoyment of the picture it is essential that it be seen from the start at 7.00 and 9.00 p.m. at the evening performances.

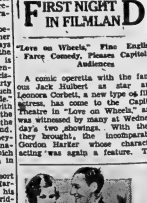
FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

"Love on Wheels," Fine English Farce Comedy, Pleases Capitol Audiences

A comic operetta with the famous Jack Hulbert as star and Leonora Corbett as a true type of film actress, has come to the Capitol Theatre in "Love on Wheels," and was witnessed by many at Wednesday's two showings. With them in the supporting cast are incomparable Gordon Harker whose character acting was again a feature. The story is novel as it treats of a department store and the trials of a salesman who is employed "to be fired" whenever the customer airs a complaint. With him in the trials is Leonora Corbett who plays the part of the banker's daughter studying music who finally takes a post in the store after a flirtation on wheels in the back of the car on the conservatory in the mornings and on their return home in the afternoon.

Edmund Gwenn, the character actor who was the star of the original among the men characters in "The Good Companions," appears in an entirely different part in "Love on Wheels." He is the business manager of the store and he creates his Mr. Philpots a real character.



The story is a typically delightful kind of pure English humor so far from the American. It is rollicking and gay, based on human foibles.

The music which is given in patches in the play is in complete accord with the spirit of the scene—cheer joy and pleasure are excited by this film.

An interesting film is one featuring Jack Dempsy in fighting attire in the ring.

Ursula Jeans and Frank Lawt on, two outstanding English actors in "Cavalcade" now at the Belle.

Leonora Corbett and Jack Hulbert in "Love On Wheels" now at the Capitol Theatre.

IN MEMORIAM

RUSSELL—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Willie R. Russell, who passed away July 27, 1932.

One precious to our hearts has gone
The voice we love is still
The place made vacant in our home
Can never more be filled
Although we loved him, one and all
The Saviour loved him more
And He has gently taken him
To the rest of shining shore.

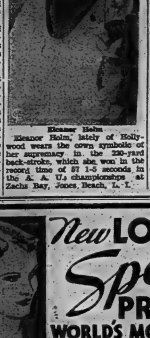
CANADA SLOW WITH TARIFFS

British Manufacturers Feel Dominion Must Move Rapidly



By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, July 26 (CP cable). With the World Economic Conference awaiting tomorrow's formal adjournment empire talks again held the stage today.

Major Walter Elliott, British minister of Agriculture, warns the Dominions to restrict their exports of meat, dairy products and other agricultural commodities to the United Kingdom. These restriction proposals, it was understood today, do not affect Canadian exports seriously.

The impression in Canadian circles is that an amicable arrangement will be reached. Cash and concentrated milk products are chiefly affected as far as Canada is concerned.

There is also a feeling here that Canada has not proceeded with revision of tariffs on British manufactures with the celerity anticipated when the Ottawa agreements were signed. In this regard it is understood assurance has been given that the Canadian Government is observing and intends to observe the agreements both in the letter and spirit, that Canada realizes her stake as the British market and is prepared to do everything possible to retain it.

Eleanor Holm, lately of Hollywood, wears the crown symbolic of her supremacy in the 220-yard back-stroke, which she won in the record time of 2? 1-5 seconds in the A. A. U.'s championships at Zacha Bay, Jones Beach, L. I.

POST RIDES THRU CANYON

Ticker Tape Flutters Down Upon Doughty Flier

New York, July 26 (AP)— Wiley Post rode through a New York's canyon of acclaim today to receive the plaudits of thousands and the traditional ticker tape tribute for his latest flight around the world.

From the battery to City Hall he rode along lower Broadway through just such a shouting crowd as he and Harold Gatty were greeted by two years ago after their world flight.

From office windows towering high above the narrow street thousands of clerks and stenographers looked down to cheer and toss out rolls of ticker tape to make the paper blizzard which New York casts on all its heroes.

DECISION OVER DORLAND

Toronto, July 26—(CP)—Usually reliable sources said today Mr. Justice A. C. Kingstone's report to the Ontario Attorney General regarding charges of Albert Dorland, convict, that Toronto police "framed" him, will be delivered within about one week.

LIGHTNING FIRES FORESTS

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 26—(CP)—Two major forest fires started by lightning during the week end are well under control here today, the Forestry Branch announced and no further blazes have been reported.

TURNS COCKPIT INTO DEATH TRAP

Broken Wing Closes Escape And Seven Perish in Crash

Oceanside, Calif., July 26 (AP)— Twisted metal from a broken wing turning the cockpit of a twin-motored army amphibian plane into a death trap for seven men.

The wing, sheering off inexplicably at 1,000 feet elevation yesterday, soared away independent of the main body of the plunge, but investigating officers said today it apparently closed escape hatches in such a manner that the crew of the giant bomber was prevented from leaping with their parachutes with a chance for life.

Those killed were:

Second Lieutenant Carl H. Murray, of Pier, Idaho, pilot, who was attached to headquarters of the 17th group, March Field, Riverside, Calif.

Sergeant Archie W. Snodgrass, San Antonio, Texas, of the 64th squadron.

Sergeant Bonnell L. Herrick, Warsaw, Ind., 95th squadron.

Private Walter T. Taylor, Los Angeles, 95th squadron.

Private Stanley Book, Detroit, 95th squadron.

Private Albert Overend, Coronado, Calif., 95th squadron.

Private Vincent Galdo, Grand Rapids, Mich., 95th squadron.

The bodies were taken from Oceanside to San Diego to await a military investigation, beginning yesterday.

C. C. F. ASSAILED BY TORIES AT ALEXANDRIA

Abolishment of Senate Not Favored by Speaker at Conservative Rally

Hon. W. A. Gordon Assails C. C. F. in Spirited Address

HEPBURN CRITICISED

Hon. J. M. Robb Tells of Survey For Five Eastern Centres

Alexandria, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Two Dominion Ministers and one from the Provincial Administration laid down a heavy barrage in the Ontario Provincial campaign here last night with Hon. Wesley A. Gordon, Minister of Labor, Hon. Arthur Sauve, Postmaster General, and Hon. J. M. Robb, Ontario Minister of Health, deliver addresses at a Conservative rally.

The Dominion Ministers concentrated on National matters, traversing the record of the present government, indicating the difficulties which it had had to meet on assuming office and outlining the methods employed to overcome them.

The Provincial Minister criticised the campaign of Mitchell Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal leader. At the same time he extolled the Henry administration, and indicated expansion of governmental efforts along public health lines. The province, he said, was embarking on a survey of the five eastern counties—Dundas, Glengarry, Stormont, Prescott and Russell—with a view to canvassing the possibilities of extending further medical care to citizens unable to pay. Such a study might occupy two or three years, Mr. Robb declared, before any developments took place.

Co-operation of local medical men and dentists would be invited, and to this end the Ontario Dental Association had contributed $1,000 towards it.

Assailed C.C.F.

Mr. Gordon vigorously assailed the programme of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, crowning points of similarity, he declaimed, existed between that and the 14-point speech delivered at the last session of parliament by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader.

In 1921 there was a union between the Liberal party under Mr. King with what was then the progressive party now operating in the C.C.F. stated the Minister. This union was continued in 1925, and a year ago the Liberal leader had in an address indicated that his platform was broad enough to include that of other parties. The invitation was not accepted by the C.C.F.

The Minister discussed the C.C.F. programme adopted in Regina this month. He referred to the proposition for removal of farmers debts. What did the resolution mean, asked Mr. Gordon?

How could the farmers debts be removed except by payment or repudiation?

If payment who was to pay. The business, professional and industrial classes? If by repudiation what would be the effect on life insurance, to say nothing of the National credit? Similarly who was to pay for the insurance against crop failure?

Continuing Mr. Gordon stated the C.C.F. aimed at the retaliation in accordance with the National policy of external trade through tariff and export boards. Appointment by the Ministry of Labor, Government surrender by the individual of his right to engage in collective trade without the permission of the government. From that it was only another step to the surrender of his right to engage in internal trade and the complete stifling of individual initiative.

Senate Essential Says Gordon

Turning to the C.C.F. stand for freedom of speech, the Minister of Labor declared, the real danger to freedom of speech and assembly lay not in a democratic capitalism but in an autocratic class organized socialism. There was certainly no lack of freedom of speech in Canada; he remarked, but a person had to be very careful what he said in Russia.

Both Mr. King and the C.C.F. wanted the Senate abolished. But, said Mr. Gordon, the Liberal leader had not done so when he had the opportunity during the two previous declarations of intent.

The Senate would not be abolished, asserted Mr. Gordon. That body was a necessary check on the National life and if a socialist party ever came into office Canada would need that body more than ever.

Mr. Sauve emphasized the benefits to Canada of the Imperial conference agreements. The meeting continued into the morning hours.

Among those on the platform were Mr. Sarry, Chas. Seguin, M.L.A. for Russell, Jos. St. Denis, M.L.A.

MOSQUITOS SOON TO TRY OUT DEVICE

Orillia, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Electricity has been commandeered by the Orillia anti-mosquito committee in their war on the pests. A new device, which, it is predicted will wreak havoc among the winged insects has been invented by Frank Gover, chairman of the committee, with the assistance of L. G. McNeice, town engineer.

The invention consists of a screen door, the wire netting of which is charged with 110 volts of electricity, deemed sufficient to kill every mosquito that may alight upon it. The charged screen is masked on both sides with pieces of cheesecloth netting. A test of the device will be made t. the near future.

ORILLIA WARS UPON NUDISTS

No Cult But Hoodlums Says Reeve Proposing Bylaw

Orillia, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Orillia township authorities were asked today to take drastic action to curb broils of nude bathers at Bass Lake and Reeve John Drinkwater said hereafter captured nudists would be treated severely.

Reeve Drinkwater declared:

"I am going to make a personal investigation among people living around them, because there seems no doubt there is a bad condition of affairs."

He revealed numerous complaints had come to him that nudists of both sexes were causing chagrin among Bass Lake residents, prompting some to sign a petition asking a law to curb "nude bathing, bad language and disorderly conduct".

The Reeve deiled stoutly existence of any nudist cult in the neighborhood. "Of course," he said, "it is a lot of nonsense about us having any kind of organized nudist cult, in the township, but it seems certain that Bass Lake is being used as a playground by hoodlums of both sexes from Orillia and elsewhere."

He said a by-law would be passed at the next council meeting making it unpleasant for persons appearing without clothes and created a similar outbreak of nudity several years ago had been subdued by provincial police.

Babe Herman's Batting Feat Tops That of Roger Hornsby

BY HAROLD K. GEORGE

Central Press Canadian Writer

CHICAGO, Ill., July 27.— Floyd (Babe) Herman is hitting spree at Chicago in which he plastered Philadelphia pitchers for three home runs, a triple and drove in eight runs, tied the best individual day's work of any Club ball player in nearly 50 years.

Between memory and record books, it is found that way back on May 30, 1894, the Williamson of Indianapolis Nationals, hit three homers and a double and alone then only one Club player besides Herman has done as well—Rogers Hornsby, who turned the trick as Herman on April 24, 1931.

x x x

HERMAN'S and Hornsby's feats were identical, but if one wants to draw a line between them, then Herman gets the edge.

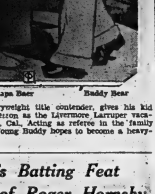
It is this way:

Hornsby's exhibition two years ago showed three home runs, a triple and eight runs accounted for out of the Cub's 10 for the day. On two of his home runs Kiki Cuyler was reposing on base.

The Cubs also scored 10 runs the day Herman hit his three for the circuit and eight of them went in the rabbit's run-batted-in column. But, Herman found Cuyler on base each time he hit a round tripper and the last time Cuyler and two other mates had the bases loaded! That's where Herman rates the shade over Hornsby.

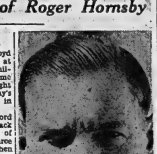
x x x

ANOTHER ODDITY of Herman's greatest individual feat of the Cubs in half a century is that he was playing by accident. A few benched for light hitting—a .220 average which was considerably less than he maintained at Brooklyn and Cincinnati.



But Biggs Stephenson showed up with a summer cold and the Old Hoss was badly in need of a substitute. Herman played the role and returned to the outfield, where he probably will be regularly stationed the rest of the season as his big day has given him new life—or is it his old one?

Herman is a much traveled man and if there is anything you want to know, Edmonton, Brooklyn, Detroit, San Antonio, Little Rock, Seattle, Minneapolis besides the three National league cities of Brooklyn, Cincinnati and Chicago, just ask the Babe. He's played for all of them.



x x x

UP TO HIS term with the Brooklyn brigade he had played five years and had seen service with 11 clubs in eight leagues.

Herman's best batting average in one game was 416 when he was out on option to Omaha from Detroit, but even that high figure wasn't enough to earn a regular job with the Tigers.

Babe Herman

Somehow the Babe became tantalizing up, which, according to New York and Chicago writers, isn't anything new to him, and found himself with the Boston Red Sox, who promptly despatched him back to the bushes.

Brooklyn led him out of the wilderness in 1926 to do tricks for them.

Hack Wilson hit three homers in one day in 1930 when he was a Cub but there were only a total of two runners on base and in two other times at bat Hack failed to produce.

Rowlandson was selected from a field of nine at a nomination meeting here last night attended by about 400 persons, including Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., Ontario Liberal Leader who spoke briefly.

BUILDINGS ON MURRAY TWP. FARM BURNED

Murray Hanna, Owner, Suffers Heavy Loss But is Insured

STARTED IN STRAW

Mr. Hanna Collapsed While Trying to Salvage Belongings

In one of the greatest and most rapid conflagrations ever recorded in that section of the country, every building except one smaller structure on the farm of Murray Hanna of the 6th Concession of Murray Township, two miles north of Wooler Village, was levelled to smouldering ruins on Wednesday afternoon. So rapid was the spread of the flames from an unexplained but insignificant little blaze discovered first in a loose straw pile near the main barn, that in an hour or so only one badly scorched and charred smaller barn some distance from the main buildings remained to rear above the glowing ruins of what had been a fine large barn, a modern brick dwelling, and numerous other farm structures. Although loss is great, it is expected that it will be largely covered by insurance. A quantity of hay was consumed with the barn, but all livestock had been let out in the field. Nearly all farm machinery had also been removed from the building, and some furniture from the home was salvaged.

Late Wednesday evening, nearly five hundred neighbors and residents of the district had gathered around the smoking ruins to assist in the final dampening of the feared, wind-blown sparks, which still caused anxiety. Lack of water, however, handicapped their efforts as it did neighbors who aided as firefighters during the initial stages of the crackling blaze.

Starts in Straw Pile

According to Mr. Hanna, who was alone on the farm at the time, the blaze was first discovered in a loose pile of straw near the main barn. How it originated is not known. But it was discovered in a small one. Failing to extinguish it himself after repeated efforts he immediately made his way to telephone and called for help. Then he returned to the fire, which had now spread to the barn and stood on the side of the barn. In spite of the efforts of himself and neighbors who had arrived on the run, the blaze continued to take headway in the powder-dry wood, spreading out of reach between the two buildings. Adjoining them on the farm was a large woodhouse. Creeping slowly along the barn, the flames soon reached the structure, finally igniting it. From here a shed which had been mounted steadily in the intense heat blowing directly into the barn. Soon it was the doomed house the fire ignited other smaller structures as it passed on. Fanned by the intense heat, which was felt for hundreds of yards, neighbors stood at the vantage operations in the house and barns, pitching the burning straw and hay inferno, with a pail of smoke attracting hundreds of the scene. Without water they stood and watched, powerless. In the excitement of driving cattle and belongings and fighting the fire, Mr. Hanna, the owner of the farm collapsed and was cared for by neighbors. One theory advanced is that the fire in the straw was the burning rays of the sun, which had been focussed by a piece of glass near the straw pile.

Back - to - Nature Problems Numerous In Chicago as Nudism Is Rampant

Moonlight Bathing, World's Fair Exhibits, and Nudists Colonies Keep Investigator Yarrow and His Vigilance Committee on the Move in the Windy City

PHILIP YARROW, superintendent of the Illinois Vigilance association

By BRUCE GRANT

Central Press Canadian Writer

Chicago, July 27.—The "Raw-rah" boys of Philip Yarrow's Illinois Vigilance committee are busy these days collecting the naked facts on Chicago's ultramodernistic craze for nudism. For Chicago nudism, despite its more "nude" connotation, is more ridiculous.

From moonlight bathing along the Lincoln Park shores of Lake Michigan down through Lincoln park, where 10,000 have signed a petition to establish a nudist camp, into the world's fair grounds, clear down to the Jackson Park shore, where "nude-skin" and bandana bathing suits have been sanctioned—all along the lake shore, in fact—the investigators have been kept very busy—to meet problems than they have encountered in many previous years of investigating.

Yarrow, himself, in various disguises, has visited the fair grounds night after night. He has concentrated on such concessions as the Streets of Paris, the Oriental Village, the "Miss America, 1933" side show and the "secret spectacle" where undressed feminine forms are parcled out in.

Yarrow Disgusted

"I never have seen such a disgusting display of nakedness in my life," Yarrow said. "Every night at 10.30 o'clock a girl named Sally Rand comes out with nothing to cover her but two fans and dances before men, women and children. It is evident that she is there by the invitations in the form of silver flip is at the Oriental Village, is just as bare as Sally Rand is well known around Chicago. Last December she shocked society folk at the Arts Ball when as the apparent ex Lady Godiva, riding on a white horse, with nothing to cover her except her hair—and it was bobbed.

The other day Superior Judge Joseph Davis ruled there is nothing lewd in the Streets of Paris exhibit, including the dancing of Sally Rand and the "life" posing of pretty Doreida Wood. A large city and a big world's fair must have something for looks, he said.

Nevertheless, The Streets of Paris is remains the chief target of persons campaigning against lack of good taste. At one side show there is an unclothed woman in a bed. Bells are sold to customers to toss at the trap. If the trap is sprung the woman is thrown from beneath the covers into a tank of water There is a peep show there, too, euphemized by the title "Art Class", where three real nude poses for would-be artists at 25 cents a "lesson".

"Little Egypt"

In the Oriental Village there's "little Egypt", who does a sinuous hootchy-cootchy with less on than her prototype of the world's fair of '93. "Miss America, 1933," is Miss Bee Cartier, 18, whose undraped charms are measured as a standard of feminine beauty before an audience of spectators.

In the fair grounds, too, an attempt was made at James Beach's tent—the European cult movie, "This Nude World", to 1,000 specially invited guests. The invitations in the form of silver flip

PARLEY ALIVE SAYS JAS. COX

Bank of International Settlement is Upheld

LONDON, July 27.—(CP)—The Bank for International Settlements was upheld by James M. Cox of Ohio in a final address at the plenary session of the World Economic Conference today as providing a valuable means of dealing with the problem of the international indebtedness and future extension of international credits.

Speaking as the President of the Conference, Monetary Commission the former Ohio Governor said that "we can easily foresee an entirely new order created by the bank for international settlements," which is in Basle, Switzerland.

"Of course it can have no arbitrary power in these matters," Mr. Cox said. "Its services are simply available if desired.

"It is intended to flow only to sound bases, the ultimate interests of which will be advanced, and of unsound loans will be an exception."

He decried 'the cynical view' of the conference, but acknowledged that much remained to be done and said he refused to regard the parley as dead.

PUPPY LOVE

by Alma Sioux Scarberry

"Let's get goin'," Freckie got up and threw the peanut shells from the window, "before I get too discouraged, and throw myself into somebody's ash can."

Mary was in such a flutter of excitement that she said no attention to Freckie's chatter, nor the scenery, as they rode out to the Court Little estate on the bus.

Before she realized it she found herself on a lawn that stretched for acres and acres over the lovely California landscape. Twilight was gone and hundreds of lovely, fairy-like lanterns swayed in the trees. Booths lined the paths and she saw, with a breath-taking shock that in every one of them was a famous movie star, smiling and selling things for charity. Wrapping packages, making sandwiches — handing out soft drinks.

In a happy daze Mary let Freckie propel her around the Movie Fair and point out this and that celebrity. Freckie was getting a huge kick out of playing guide to the innocent and wide-eyed stranger from Virginia.

Suddenly her hand tightened on Mary's arm.

"There's Curt Little coming right toward us," she said excitedly. "That tall, good-looking man with the gray hair. He usually speaks to me—I've worked in a couple of his pictures."

Curtright Freckie stopped at a doll booth right in his path. She looked up in surprise and saw more a little rank as he came abreast of them.

"Why—good evening, mike good host," she said with her best grin. "I trust thine flowing bowl is brimming with good health and better spirits this lovely June eve."

Curt Little stopped with an amused

It seemed an age to him before he found his voice... "How—nice," he said then, slowly, "of you to bring Miss Sawyer to my party."

ed smile.

"Yes, verily," he said, shaking her hand heartily, "and he gets fill on the radiant Mary. "And who," he asked politely, "might we be?"

"Oh, I'm sorry," Freckie smiled apologetically. "Mr. Little, I'd like my friend Miss Mary Mansfield Sawyer from Millstream, Virginia, and point, South Carolina."

Curt Little stepped back. It seemed an age to him before he found his voice. But neither Mary nor Freckie noticed the pause.

"How nice,"—he said then, slowly, "of you to bring Miss Sawyer to my party."

He was in the shadow, so that they could not see the pale face that turned the color of ashes and that his hands trembled as he lit a cigarette.

"It's ovver of you—sir." Mary told them in her nicest little Southern drawl, "to let me come and here on. I've never been to Hollywood before."

"Mary's father is a physician—a big surgeon," Freckie added — the little fib bothered Freckie — he'd heard of him, Doctor Mansfield Sawyer.

Curt Little's voice, it seemed to him, came from a thousand miles. "Doctor Mansfield — the surgeon? Perhaps I should know him. But you see I came to California from the Oklahoma oil fields."

He looked down at Mary again—child-like and angelically sweet in the soft lights swinging from an orange tree overhead. Then, suddenly the hot blood of revenge tore through his body like a flame. Old memories came and robbed him of reason. He was amazed at the smoothness of his voice when he turned to Freckie with a little smile.

"You—run over there and help Ronald Deeming at the ice cream booth. He looks awfully busy. I'll take your little friend around and show her the animals."

Freckie looked surprised—then raised her eyebrows knowingly.

"Scarce an hour's leecherv I gotta see a man about a dog Horace. Cooeee bye."

Curt Little knew he had been rude. But he had felt one thought in his mind—Deeming! Mary wadn't there he could question here. There could be only one Mr. Mansfield Sawyer and one Millstream, Virginia, and he had to know the truth.

Mary smiled up at him shyly, flustered that so great a man should notice her company. Old memories came over him in a tide that was as sweet—and he was such an innocent clay that he never had yet used to the idea that the golden little Gloria was his.

Such had been his thoughts as he urged the horses, clucking at them impatiently, and had seemed to him the last five miles would never end. Then his home was in sight. It sat on a little white house with green shutters, at the turn of the valley road that led to Millstream Honeymoon cottage. Home!

Curt felt in his pocket, to make sure the box was there. The little box that was to be a surprise for his Gloria. A ruby ring—no larger than a child's ring. Soft, Gloria loved rubies— and it was the best he could do, for a while.

Feverishly he tied the horses to the post by the watering trough, then, tip-toeing softly so that his home-coming might be a complete surprise, he went to the kitchen window. She was not there. But there was a delicious odor of chicken simmering slowly and ginger bread.

He was tempted to go in through the kitchen and steal a little of it. But—smelling softly Curt stifled the temptation and walked around to the other side of the house. Gloria was probably in the front room making herself beautiful for him. Dressed in the little yellow dress that was his favorite—and made her look a saucy little daffodil.

Curt Little always passed his hands over his eyes when he came to that part of the scene. The memory was too keen. Relentlessly the calendar turned on, stabbing at his heart like a two-edged sword. Softly, he had walked through the grass. Stepping on little dandelions that always reminded him of the gold of Gloria's hair. There he was and then he had climbed back into the room then. His Gloria was lying cold soft sweet arms up and put them around the man's neck.

"Oh—I'm so happy!"

Curt Little had stumbled away from the window. And—like a man in a dream he had climbed back into the buggy and driven away. Hours later he was still driving—on, he didn't care where. Running away from memories. Several communities that had turned to ashes and left his world in ruins around him.

Then he had stopped at a little country inn. There he counted the money he had taken in the war that had been away from home. Exactly a hundred dollars—and two horses and a buggy. That was the extent of his fortune.

Gloria could have the house and the few hundred dollars they had saved in the bank. She deserved more than she deserved. He told her in the letter, scarcely legible he had penned—the only one he had ever written her after this flight. He afraid to go back. Afraid he would kill his beautiful wife, whom he had loved with a love that sickened him. And he was certain he could have killed them both. No power on earth could stop him if he went back.

Two and on and on he drove. Weeks later a haggard man drove into the Oklahoma oil fields with two worn-out, half starved horses. He told them his name was Curt Little, And he asked nothing but work. He got it—driving work.

And everything he had touched turned to gold. Five 10 15 years passed, and, like magic his oil wells sprang up and soon made His name—Became a legend in the oil fields. Curt Little—the millionaire.

It was then he went to Hollywood to sink millions into the motion picture business. The idea fascinated him. In five years he had become a power in the cinema world. Again everything he had touched turned to gold. He had never had a failure Some charm seemed to hang over his every venture.

CHAPTER TWO

The world saw Curt Little as a tall, splendidly built, aristocratic looking man with iron gray hair. Work in the oil fields had strengthened his physique and given him a powerful body.

Women broke their hearts over his prematurely gray hair and the searching, cynical look in his deep blue eyes. He was fascinating, aloof —appealing. No one knew anything of his past. Questions were answered with an enigmatical smile, a smile that increased the depth of the two lines at the sides of his mouth. A mouth that was kind, yet hard. Smiling, yet sad.

That was the way Mary Sawyer saw the famous producer as they sat on his great verandah at the top of the knoll where his home stood and watched the Movie Fair below. He stole glances at him now and then and his face, now hard, now soft, fascinated her deeply. It was, she thought the most unusual face she had ever seen.

If she could have known the thoughts that came to him—turning his heart to stone and his blood to the boiling point, she would better have understood his chafing expression. In Curt Little's heart at the moment there was waging the greatest battle ever staged in his turbulent spirit.

The black of Mary's hair—and the pigeon gray of her eyes —something in the way she turned her head—every lovely little mannerism Curt Little noted. And his heart turned to ice.

Revenge—sweet and tempting, lay within his reach. A chance to pay an old score that ate at his vitals and made him sick with the intensity of his desire to hurt as he had been hurt.

Two hours passed. Curt Little heard himself saying to a little girl he looked at him worshipfully and breathed in his every word:

"We must see lots of each other while you are in Hollywood, little one."

"How can you bother about poor little me—a big busy man like you?" Mary asked him in happy wonder.

Even Freckie, used to almost anything happening in her hectic happy go lucky, life was floored by Curt Little and Mary joined her when Curt Little turned their car home in one of Curt Little's cars.

"I'll call you tomorrow," the millionaire said, holding Mary's little hand in his at parting.

"Oh," was all Mary could say as the car started and they were on their way.

Freckie never too overwhelmed to talk—looked at Mary with an envy akin to awe.

"Well! You may be from the sticks, baby. But you sure do it! It takes—whatever that is. Curt Little! Been a world-wide lover. And he fell for—you like a big city ticker tape out—Broadway parade."

Curt Little arrived at Mary's rooming house—his mind a turmoil. He had no plans. All he knew was that revenge was his for the taking. And that he must keep Mary Sawyer in Hollywood at any cost, while he planned and executed that revenge.

Twenty years!

Mary went to sleep that night, weary as a child who had played too long, her soft while cheeks flushed with triumph.

For how was she to know that 20 years before—a man who broke Curt Little's life was her own father. And that against her would be waged all the pent up hatred of his revenge!

The next morning Freckie invited Mary to have breakfast at her apartment. Mary awakened late after the excitement of the evening before—and it was almost 10 o'clock before she arrived at Freckie's.

Freckie came to the door in her pajamas, sleepy eyed and troubled.

"Oh, it's you," she yawned heartily. "If you'd been an agent I was going to kill you."

"Did I came too soon? It's terribly late for me." Mary was embarrassed for fear she'd shown up too early.

"Not at all." Freckie hastened to assure her. "I wish I had somebody to get me up mornings. I'm a regular owl. Stay out all night and sleep days. I'll never get up in time to catch a husband. Not even an iceman. Do you eat a big breakfast?"

But Freckie didn't give Mary a chance to answer. She walked into the kitchenette just big enough for one to squeeze into and opened the inhalator box.

"I think I'd like just a small repast this lovely morn. How about grape fruit, sliced bananas with cereal bacon and eggs, coffee and toast? Will that hold you together, Mary?"

Mary groaned.

"Hold me together! That's laying it a wider aspect for groceries for me. I never take anything but a little fruit and toast and coffee in the morning."

Freckie sighed.

"That's what you look like an illustration from a fashion article. I guess, compared with you I look like 'the telephone directory.'"

Mary was amazed at the neat Freckie turned out in her little kitchenette on a two-burner electric stove. Everything in its place and spotlessly clean. Everything in its proper place. Freckie had a largely developed domestic streak in her, which seemed contrary to make up. In the middle of the breakfast Freckie looked up thoughtfully.

"Why don't you come to live with me, Mary? The Independent Grub is no place for you. Having to be in at 12 o'clock—and every night.

"Well——" Mary said a little doubtfully, "I—I'd like to. But I'm afraid I couldn't afford it. I don't wanted to run up a lot of expenses and have my money give out...I'm sure mother and father wouldn't send me any."

"If that's all that's really standing in your way, we could easily get together on the money. It wouldn't cost you as much to pay half the rent and food here as it does to live where you are. I only pay $30 a month rent. Your share would be $15. And the food is easy. You save a lot cooking."

Mary was astonished.

"Oh—then I will come," she said eagerly, glad for the chance to live under the protecting wing of Freckie.

"Do you cook?"

"I love it. And dish washing, too." Freckie sighed happily.

"Would rather cook and wash dishes than iron the pantiesin clean!"

"Would I?" Mary laughed. "Then it's settled." Freckie said practically. "You worry about our meals and I'll do all the rest. I'm a good strong-arm scrubwoman. I guess it's the Irish in me."

"Let's hurry—and I'll go right to the club and pack. I've been terribly homesick, Mary," and with fully. "And a little bit homesick. Being with you will help."

"The boy you left behind you?" Freckie raised an inquiring eyebrow.

"Wouldn't you like to know?" Mary answered childishly with a wise little smile.

"Sometime when I have a day off," Freckie got up to clear the table, "I must tell you about my Willie. He's the most gorgeous plumber in Brooklyn. And is he romantic?"

Mary had to stand outside the kitchenette door to dry the dishes for Freckie. When her had finished she remembered that Curt Little was to call her.

"Oh, what'll I do?" she asked Freckie with a worried little frown. "Suppose they don't give Mr. Little my message."

Premier Henry Defends Purchase of Abitibi Power by Province

GOOD DEAL

Liberals Attacked Over Beauharnois Power Deal

TORONTO, July 27.—(CP) With the prediction the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission would have use for all the power available in the near future, Premier George S. Henry had today defended his governments' acquisition of the Abitibi Power Development and warned the public against the speeches of Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., Provincial Liberal Leader.

"I am quite satisfied with the Abitibi purchase," he said, "and when it is completed and the actual cost of it is known, I'm confident the public will endorse the offer we made for it. And at the next election I feel overwhelming endorsation will be voted for it as one of the best interests ever negotiated by any government in the interests of this province," he said.

Mr. Henry was addressing a picnic of the East York Conservative Association. He said "specious promises" of Mr. Hepburn must be disregarded, in which regard, he was going to cut down the members, or the number of them, in addition scarcely a week goes by without him announcing some new panacea for his cabinet," said the Premier. "No wonder he is pessimistic in his early election. He doesn't get one soon he will have promised cabinet position to all his chief supporters and then where will he be with all leaders and no followers?"

Premier Heckled

In upholding the Hydro enterprise as one which had no duplicate anywhere, and labelling it as a "constructive achievement," the Premier ran into a few snags with his audience when he used the name Hepburn.

"Oh, oh," clicked one voice, at his mention of "Conservative achievement".

"If my friend who apparently cannot follow me will only be patient a little while longer, I shall return to that," he said, "have no fear, I'll prove to him that what I say is right, for I'm not in the habit of making statements I cannot back up."

"Back up the Abitibi then," interrupted a sort-shirted gentleman with a loud voice.

"The Liberals," he said, "have never failed in Conservative days in taking such a money-making proposition out of private hands, and they are hoping to get the ring of evil and reward their friends for it in suitable fashion. You don't hear them saying much these days about the Beauharnois scandal, and the $750,000 the Liberal party accepted from private interests out to get a grip on the St. Lawrence to develop its character for demanding victims, I am merely making a

THE TEST

By Ethel Mack

After the last stack of magazines was straightened and the pillows in daffodils arranged artistically in the low blue bowl, Mary Booth had one more thing to do before the apartment was quiet and orderly. She had been feverishly busy since morning and now there was nothing else to be done, everything was dusted and polished, everything in order, trying to appraise it with the critical eye of a stranger. Yes, it was an attractive room, so inviting even, anyone would be sure to admit that. It was, without a doubt, the sort of room a man would be glad to come home to after a hard day's work.

And she, Mary Booth, was a lucky girl. Tom was a dear. He worked so hard and he was never too thankful that he hadn't lost his position. Of course, he wasn't making as much as he used to, but they managed very well, and Mary hardly knew the stretch clothes to the limit.

Mary knew all this. She knew she had much to be happy about, but in spite of it all she was decidedly unhappy, she didn't know just when she had begun to feel this way, when she became certain that Tom didn't love her the way he used to, she didn't know what made her feel that he didn't. He was just as kind, just as thoughtful as ever. That is, until last week when he had completely forgotten their wedding anniversary. That had hurt. Of course they couldn't afford much of a celebration, but at least he might have brought home a few flowers. Even other years he had brought flowers. That was why it had hurt so this year. But Mary tried to be gallant, and remembered the date, and even when Tom asked "Why the party?" when she served his favorite dinner, chicken and waffles and thick, thick apple pie. It had been foolish, no doubt, to expect her not to answer him frank. But if he had forgotten, he had forgotten. It must be that the date didn't mean anything to him as much as it did to her, and she loved him and that was that.

"Work is the best cure for worry," Mary's mother always said. So Mary had been working. Every day she had cleaned every nook and corner of the apartment, whether it needed it or not. On Monday she knew there was no more cleaning to be done Mar hurried to the kitchen. At least did not love her anymore, she love, she would do her pack. Even if Tom said him, she would continue to take care of him while he had to work by hand, and he be sure to have extra worries. When things were better, when the depression was over well, she would see what happened best to do. Meanwhile she would get to it that Tom had plenty of good, nourishing food.

Two hours later when Tom came home, the aroma that greeted him from the kitchen would have delighted any hungry an. And Tom was glad to do full justice to the meal Mary had prepared: roast lamb, new peas and mushrooms, chocolate pudding and chocolate cake. For Tom never could get enough chocolate. Just the last few crumb of cake was disappearing, the shrill call of the doorbell interrupted them. Mary hurried to "Hello, Mary, this is Dot," came answer in.

the greeting. "What has happened? Was Tom laid off, you be leaving soon? We're all ready to eat."

"Oh," said Mary, and the sinking heart, as she realized that her worries had made her completely forget that this was the evening of the Warren's. "Tom was late but we're hurrying to get ready and be over in ten minutes."

"What's the idea?" asked Tom.

"Oh, Tom, what will we do? I completely forget we were to go to Dick's for dinner! We haven't seen them for two weeks ago, and we'll have to go. I couldn't let her know that I forgot."

"Of course, we'll go. Wouldn't want to hurt Dick's feelings, she is so blamed sensitive. But what have I told you about forgetting things like that? You're always getting into jams, forgetting what you promised, and then you would do. And Great Scott, how can I manage another meal after that one?"

And go they did. Dot was inclined to be a bit huffy about Mary being so late, but she realized that Mary was always so busy with her engagements, so in a few minutes all was serene. And how proud Mary was of Tom as she watched him dispatch another tremendous meal. How could he do it? His merry loyed with her food, trying bravely to swallow a bit now and then. But Tom might have been a bootlegger, filling up after a hard day's work. Mary watched him in amazement as he devoured roast pork, pressed potatoes, buttered sprouts, and then, horror upon horrors, a thick piece or since piece and a wedge of cheese.

After dinner they played bridge, according to the time-honored custom of indoor sports for settled married folk on Sunday they got through the evening, just how Mary never knew. She was glad when it was time to leave, a feeling which they reached their own house.

Tom was glad too. For his tremendously overloaded stomach was complaining bitterly and in a few minutes he was violently ill. As Mary cared for him, trying to ease his suffering, her conscience began to bother her. She had got him into this jam. She had let her silly worries make her forget the dinner date and now poor Tom was suffering for it. It was her own stomach ache, she should remember our anniversary, dear. It was all didn't feel any too well, either. Those sandwiches when I make them. But it will never happen again. How could you feel any better after such a spell, at all, things?"

"Well, you were in a swell mood and I had to get you out of it, didn't I? We couldn't let Dot know we had forgotten our date with her. Besides, I haven't been very good to you lately. I was a beast to forget our anniversary last week. But I was so worried about things at the office I forgot completely. You see, Old Rogers had told us that he had to cut down the force. We have known for weeks that some one of us had to go. We didn't know who would be picked for the honor but it looked as though I was the guy. But it's all right now. We got three new accounts in today and I guess we're all safe for the time being."

Mary kissed her now convalescent husband without a word, and busied herself getting ready for the night. How could she ever have thought that Tom didn't love her? Any man that could eat a tremendous meal like that—a meal he didn't want and certainly didn't need—just to keep his wife out of a jam—well, there was no doubt about it, he loved her. Mary was very happy.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

As Tarzan approached, he heard the crashing of the beast and had the voice of man. Bolgani, the ape-man had remained hidden in the middle foliage whence he looked down upon the tragic scene beneath him. At once he understood the disaster that had overtaken Kala and her young. Then he saw Bolgani and his rifle, intent upon bagging two royal specimens with a single shot.

The snake was disturbed both by the crashing sounds of the pursuit and the roaring voice of Bolgani's rifle. Now, upon the full grown bull-gorilla, the python launched his relentless coils, quickly encircling Bolgani, who strove desperately to tear away the slippery folds. But he was borne to earth beneath a living force that held him helpless.

It was on this scene that Bolgani and Tarzan came at the same moment. Moving as ever silently, the

In Tarzan's heart was no great love for the gorilla. Since his childhood the shaggy man-beasts had been the natural foe of the ape-man and his tribe. But never when he saw the brute hard pressed by two enemies, there rose within Tarzan a sudden pity for the beast fighting without a chance. Before Bolgani could fire his weapon, Tarzan dropped upon his back felling him to the ground.

LADIES BOWLING TOURNAMENT HELD PRIZES RECEIVED

Stirling—In the second games of the playoffs in the Bawden League staged at the Stirling Agricultural grounds on Tuesday evening the Springbrook squad downed the Stirling team by a score of 2,703 to 2,611.

After the exciting game played in Campbellford on Wednesday evening when the same two teams battled out to a 13 to 13 tie, a huge crowd was on hand to witness the second fixture and although it was not quite so thrilling from the point of view of the spectators, it was a good clean game to watch with Springbrook having the edge on the play throughout and thereby gaining a well deserved win.

The Boards aggregation with Smith doing the twirling for Jeffs, did not seem to their usual standard and Smith was sent to the cooler in the third round to be replaced by Eagleson who finished the game. Eagleson on the mound for Springbrook lulled the visitors to sleep with his slow ball and succeeded in doing things right. In the first frame each team chalked up two runs but in the second Springbrook banished Hamish Boyd, the last player they said clocked the game by piling up eight runs. The same inning saw Eagleson in the box for Boards with Springbrook tallying for but once. Boards got one the fourth time started off with a bang but were limited to two runs by the northerners. Their fifth attempt to even the score was still less successful with only three men facing Eagleson. Springbrook in turn rallied again and came through in the sixth to retire Boards in three straight put outs and add four more runs. Boards at bat for the last time came back determined to stage a last ditch rally but their work quail allowed but two runs thereby registering a win by a score of 16 to 8.

Some snappy fielding was displayed throughout the game by both teams as well. Burkitt closed a home run in the second and again repeated the performance in the sixth with Merton and Hume also making circuit hits.

Springbrook—G. Williams, Lorne Paterson, p, M. Graham, c, Noah Boyd, Tom Ward 3rd, Gerald Hackett ss, Burton Merton 1f, Charles Burkitt cf., Wylie Hume rf.

Boards—Bill Jeffs c, Smith p, Hume 1st, G. Hackett 2nd, T. Macdonald 3rd, Ken Odle ss, Watson, If, Wilbur cf, Jack Brande rf.

Umpires—Jeffs and Boyd. Scorer, Harry Brown, Sales.

A minor baseball game on Sunday evening shortly before six o'clock when a northbound car operated by Jeffs and the Springbrook took the ditch on the Belleville-Stirling highway just outside the town limits and was brought to a halt only when it struck a large tree. The driver, owner and three other occupants of the car stated that on passing another car they were crowded off the road and forced to take the ditch in order to avoid a collision. None of the passengers were seriously injured although they received bruises and bruises from the impact. Constable Wickett of Stirling was called to the scene to investigate. The car which was badly damaged was removed to the local garage overhauling.

Pile Sufferers

Your itching, bleeding, or protruding piles will go and not come back when you actually remove the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel—and not one minute before. Salves or suppositories can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID, prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, drives out the thick impure blood, heals and removes the almost dead parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record of success in even the most stubborn cases that J. S. McKeown and druggists everywhere urge every sufferer to get a bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets today. They must end your pile agony or money back.

Blaker Breaks up Game in Eleventh Frame Singling Palmer Home to Win 7-6

Win Places Victorias in Tie With Picton Club

GOOD GAME

"Bod" Wilkins Outpitched by Ron Church in Mound Duel

Successive singles by Palmer and Blaker in the eleventh innings gave the local Victorias a 7 to 6 victory over the Picton intermediates at the Exhibition Park yesterday afternoon. After being in position and failing to score in the tenth inning Palmer opened the 11th frame with a sharp single to left, Blaker, the next batter on the hit-and-run play, crashed ball directly over second base, while Palmer raced for third on an attempt to catch the runner at the hot corner the ball evaded Lazarus and Palmer scampered home with the winning run. The win elevates the Victorias into first place in the Bay of Quinte loop, a tie with the Picton club.

Manager Fanning tossed his ace right hander, "Bud" Wilkins in against the league leaders and despite the fact that his team mates blotted the ball about the yard, he turned one of the best games of his career, improving as the game progressed, with Ron Church, with his wide sweeping curve was Manager Hanover's choice for pitching duties and the lefty right hander slightly bested his rival on the hilltop but was clouted rather meagre support on the part of his fielders at times as their errors were costly when committed. Church also helped his team's cause at the bat when he collected three hits out of four times at bat.

Losers Open Scoring

In the initial frame the Picton club opened the scoring when on two hits by Rorke and Lawless, coupled with errors by Flagler and Wilkins they scored two runs. Three more counters were added by Picton in the fifth when Hudgins doubled, Rorke singled and Lawless, all advancing on Haslett's error. Cole also hit safely but failed to give his mates four hits for three runs. After two were out in the eighth the Picton lads rallied to score their last run on three successive singles.

The Victorias opened their scoring in the second when Palmer walked, Blaker sacrificed and Haslett singled double; Flagler singled and stole to score on Wilkins' single, and in turn pilfered second to end the scoring. Darrah opened the third with a double to left field and scored when Palmer hit through second. Palmer walked in the fifth and scored on singles by Blaker and Flagler. In the seventh Flagler, who was hit with a pitched ball, scored on Wilkin's two base blow. Then in the eighth and in the eleventh following the timely hitting of Palmer and Blaker.

Defensively Gaudin and Green led the local outfielders, while Rorke, Church and Mann looked the best for the visiting team. The Victorias have yet to play Napanee.

IF ROGERS HORNSBY really will manage the Cincinnati Reds, St. Louis Browns—credit a Owner Donie Bush with having made himself more smart move.

In some quarters surprise has been expressed that Hornsby, manager of three National League clubs in temporary management of a fourth, should even be considered for such an important post.

The surprise should be that Hornsby hasn't been grabbed by some other club as pilot. Time and time this He's a highly capable baseball manager—and don't forget it.

That Hornsby did not always get along, because of his charges' need not be to his discredit. There were capable, winning managers before his time who were likewise traded punches, verbal and physical, with their athletes.

x x x

HORNSBY QUITE possible is just the type of Browns owner that cannot do any worse under Phil Ball than they have been doing under Bill Killefer. His lust for victory and his fighting qualities might instill in the players there a club which, at this time, seems to have neither.

x x x

Ball is said to admire Hornsby as a baseball manager. And Ed Barrow is not exactly cold to the Hefty old scout who brought Diamond City; via the Cardinals, its first pennant and world championship.

The Browns under Hornsby might be taken on sufficient lift to cause Ball to renew his efforts to build up the club. That Rogers would welcome a chance to show his former National league associates that he can start at scratch and get some place with a ball club goes without saying.

SOMEWHAT OBSCURED by the incidents which brought about his departure from the Cubs is the good record Hornsby made as manager of various National league outfits.

The Rajah led the Cardinals to a pennant in his first years, Traded to the New York Giants the following year in one of the strangest deals in recent baseball history, Hornsby refused to permit his troubles and treatment to bother him. He hit 361 and showed John McGraw such a display of baseball brains that he was trusted with one road trip of the Gotham club as temporary manager.

The winter — 1927-1928—Hornsby spent in Boston, Another astute deal this time going to Boston. Not at all upset by this second change in his fortunes Rogers began hitting at an even better clip. In May he was made manager of the Braves. The following November he was sold to the Cubs for a price sal do be $20,000 and five players.

With the Giants and Braves Hornsby showed the same level-headed good sense in directing these two clubs as he did with the Cards. His managerial troubles did not actually begin until after he became boss of the Cubs.

The useful bamboo is a tree-grass.

FRENCH CUP STAR

A rising star in the French tennis firmament, Andre Merlin, who was selected to play in the singles Davis cup matches against England in the challenge round. Merlin is left-handed, and Rene Lacoste, French Davis cup manager, considers a fine choice, believe the youngster would give the English veterans a close fight.

NATS SUFFER TWELFTH LOSS

Ponies Easily Defeat Locals by Score of 11-5

With a polished team of juniors, veterans and other ball players the Belleville Nationals were defeated Kingston by the league leading Ponies by the score of 11 to 5 last evening. The win was the fifteenth of the season for the Ponies and their twelfth loss to be registered against the Nationals.

Ernie Smith, just out of the junior ranks this year started on the hilltop for the locals and although he was nicked for 16 safeties burned a brand of ball that assures the Nationals of a first string hurler next season. Sonny Green who started on the receiving end was injured early in the contest and Manager Mills supplanted him. Green going to the outfield, Bervil Smith of the Ponies retired due to injuries sustained.

"Chuck" Pournier was the Ponies' choice for hurling duties and although he was touched for fourteen safe hits his team mates came to his rescue while on the offensive. Three, home runs were registered during the contest, one by Alex Weir and one each by Cornelius and McQuoid. Sonny Green led the local hitters with three singles and a double while Alex Weir collected a home run and two doubles. Pournier and Vince also hit well for the Ponies.

Manager Mills introduced a new face to the fans in Cy Barriger, a junior, who handled his four fielding chances like a veteran, never having a misplay 'chalked up against him. Alan Meagher returned to the game to fill in at second, while Alex Weir was used at the initial bag.

The Ponies opened the scoring in the initial frame by counting twice and kept adding until they piled up 11 runs. The Nationals did not register until the fifth when they counted, two and added three more in the seventh to end their scoring. The game was largely attended.

HIDDEN BALL TRICK PULLED

Crystalaces Checks Rally by Ancient Trick of Pastime

Behind the masterful pitching of Bill Hammett, their ace hurler, the Crystalac juniors stepped into Wellington yesterday afternoon and not only downed the homesters but annexed the league leadership by defeating them by the score of 5 to 4. They practically settled the final league standing in the Hastings County loop as the one remaining game would undoubtedly have no bearing in the standing, that now reads Crystalacs first, Wellington second and Junior Moose third, the latter two to battle a three game series to decide the right to meet the league leading Crystalacs in the league finals.

Hammett was in rare form in Wellington yesterday limiting the lizard hitting Picton Bayward County kids to nine safe blows. The win was the 6th of the season for the lung up by Hammett and his third win over the previous league leaders.

Staging a final ninth innings rally Billy the Wellington club catcher, batsman, with but one hand out, when the Art Young outfield crew completed the "hidden ball" trick on Bob Green of first base. The play was completed by Ford, the first baseman, after he and the battery mate had gone into a huddle in the middle of the diamond, Ford returning to the initial bag with the ball secluded in his mitt. This play proved the only one needed to be a last minute rally by the home club. Young piloted the home club and was nicked for 13 safeties.

Don Thomas, who handled the slants of Hammett behind the bat, led the local batters with a homer, Sid Field and Rigby hitting well. Kirby, Pilkington and Thomas filled the home town swat-smiths. The play-off in the league open next Monday between Wellington and the Junior Moose.

The line-ups:

Crystalacs—Gray, rf, Thompson, ss, Sinfield, 3b, Kirby, c, Burley p, Bowerman rf, Philips, lf, Van Derwater and Thomas 3b, J. Greer 1b.

Score by innings:

Crystalacs	020 002 1—5	9	1
Wellington	100 201 0—4	9	3

Oh, well, the locals won and that is about all, that concerned the fans. Both pitchers, Wilkins and Church, excelled themselves at times and would have been seen at a much better advantage had their team mates not booted and fumbled the ball around so frequently. History was practically repeated, when Palmer crossed the plate in the eleventh with the winning counter. Last fall in the play-downs with North Bay, as their rivals Palmer, opened the tenth inning with a single and scored on Baker's double. Yesterday Palmer duplicated his last year's feat and scored after Blaker had singled. On a throw-in to third however, Palmer scampered home on the pass ball. It was close enough to call a duplication.

Some time ago we spoke of a projected "Battle of the Bay" for June 3rd, when the Prince Edward County crew met the pride of the Wellington juniors. The project was held in Belleville following yesterday's game and it appears that when the local delegates voted against the proposed "Skipper" Gilbang announced after the meeting that he would take the matter to the O.B.A.A.

x x x

On the surface this entire matter looks rather skeptical. Presuming that Picton did violate the rules by not registering a player release for Greer then, why did not the Napanee club declare a forfeit in the first instead of waiting until such a late date? They knew of the matter some time ago, on the other hand, Manager Vanover admits that he did not sign Greer to an intermediate certificate. All in all it looks like a matter for the O.B.A.A. to settle. Vanover still takes the stand that he procured a written release for Green and contends that he complied with the rules in doing so. Time will see how the matter will be handled by the O.B.A.A. following the decision of the Bay of Quinte magnate.

x x x

Leaving aside the above questions and getting down to the truth, neither the Victorias or Picton Crawfords look like the Napanee club. But they have every reason to fear Tommy Palmer and his pet little curve. Apparently Palmer has made a name for himself in the Bay of Quinte loop this summer.

x x x

The Grills' Garage nine drew first blood in the play-off series of the Trenton Senior Baseball league last night, but, not before considerable wrangling and loud arguments ensued. To start with the idea of having four umpires on a baseball diamond during a game is most ridiculous. The diamond is far too small to be cluttered up with officials. Perhaps three umps would be o.k. but four is out of the question. Then what is needed at one of these games is a hard hitting, ripp-hatted fellow, who will toss a few of the ring leaders out. Most of the trouble originates on the baseball field, but the umpires per cooled the ball's coffee somewhat when he chased Player Reid during one uprising. The players apparently listen absolutely too much to the fans. Recall the players with "rabbit ears" usually get their club into trouble as they simply "can't take it".

x x x

With a patched-up team of veterans, juniors and what-have-you Manager Hall made things somewhat lively for the Ponies, when the league leaders coated his down to the tune of 11 to 5 last evening. Apparently Allan Meagher was pulling a bad one on the boys as he is slated to play during the old-timers' game on Civic Holiday. Meagher was back at his old position on second and gave a speedy fair account of his labours also.

x x x

For some time past we have advocated that new blood should be injected into the inner works of the Nationals. When Cy Barriger, of the B.A.A.A. juniors was absent one day yesterday the midget more than made good and demonstrated that the Belleville ball players will surely make good as the seniors, if ignored. Keith Smith also went well when he kept the ball out of the middle.

x x x

It is a long time since baseball's "gold standard" has been placed around these parts but Art Young's Crystalacs sneg it to an advantage yesterday afternoon when they caught Bob Greer flat-footed off first base in the ninth. The particular play was the turning point of the game. The win gives the Crystalacs first place in the junior loop with the Wellington kids battling the Moose juniors for play-off honors.

B. A. Fanning's Victorias pulled themselves back into first place in the Bay of Quinte loop when they eked out a rather fluky win over the Picton nine, yesterday afternoon. Fanning's ability to pitch his way out of a tight hole has been the talk of the league ever since he broke into baseball with the Victorias and without two extra frames having been played. Then on the other hand the visiting team seemed sorry a golden opportunity in the eighth, when they failed to score run on four hits and a free ticket.

NOT THEORIES

ALEX J. MORRISON

ALEX MORRISON says:

Nearly every player has experienced the feeling of hitting the ball too hard only to find that it stopped just before it reached the green. Yet he has failed to learn that he can do so on any shot only when he has this feeling of being too strong. With most shots you'll be short because your natural tendency is to under-do.

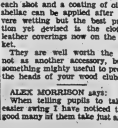
As you swing you think in terms of enough and this tendency deceives you, to offset your conservatism always try to send your shots a little beyond where it should stop. In time you'll find that this correct allowance will improve your game.

ALEX MORRISON says:

Fancy insets in the faces of wood clubs are an advantage only so long as they are kept clean.

Allowing the clubhead to get wet is generally the cause of loosening.

Your club may drag your ball through wet grass or you may see careless players make practice swings where there is moisture. This moisture will soon spoil the wood in your clubhead.

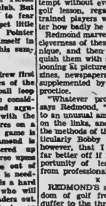


The heads can be dried after each shot and a coating of oil and shellac can be applied after a severe wetting. The latter protection yet devised is the cloth or leather coverings now on the market.

They are well worth the price, not as another accessory, but as something mighty useful to preserve the heads of your wood clubs.

ALEX MORRISON says:

When telling pupils to take an easier swing I have noticed that a good many of them take just as long a backswing as they do in making a hard swing.



Then they bring the club down with less force. This only results in the clubhead striking the ball or approaches the ball—something that is bound to spoil any shot.

It's always best to have the length of your backswing in keeping with the distance you want the ball to travel.

Golf Champion Never Took Lesson--But Wishes He Had

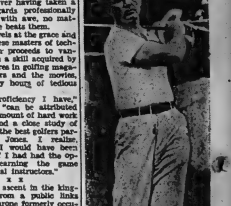
Ralph Redmond

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., July 26 — Ralph Redmond, local World war hero, who won the southern amateur championship on his first attempt without ever having taken a golf lesson, regards professionally trained players with awe, no matter how badly he beats them.

Redmond learned to golf at the grace and cleverness of these masters of technique, and he succeeds in vanquish them with a skill acquired by looking ki pictures in golfing magazines, newspapers and the movies, supplemented by hours of tedious practice.

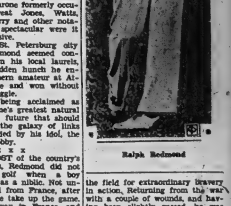
"Whatever proficiency I have," says Redmond, "can be attributed to an unusual amount of hard work on the links, and a close study of the methods of the best golfers particularly Bobby Jones. I realize, however, that I would have been far better off if I had had the opportunity of learning the game from professional instructors."

REDMOND'S ascent in the kingdom of golf from a public links duffer to the throne recently occupied by the great Jones, Watts, Dunn, Sam Perry and other notables would be spectacular were it not so unobtrusive.



Five times the Petersburg city champion Redmond seemed content to rest on his local laurels, until on a sudden hunch he entered the southern amateur at Atlanta last June and won without much of a struggle.

Now he is being acclaimed as one of the game's greatest natural golfers, with a future that should place him in the galaxy of links immortals headed by his idol, the magnificent Bobby.



x x x

UNLIKE MOST of the country's leading players, Redmond did not begin playing golf when a boy or about as high as a niblic. Not until he returned from France, after the war, did he take up the game.

Paying his way to France, and being been slightly gassed, he was joining the A. E. F. as a private, obliged to take things easy for a while, and he traveled as an officer on trying to play golf...

WARDEN DENIES 'PEN' PRISONERS RIOTING

Manhandling of Convict is Only Trouble at "Pen" Admitted by Meglaughlin

Defence Counsel Regan Protests Punishment of Witness

JUDGE'S VIEW

Duty of Penitentiary Authorities to Keep Discipline

Kingston, Ont., July 28—(CP)—Absolute denial that Portsmouth Penitentiary convicts are rioting was made this afternoon by Warden W. B. Meglaughlin. A fight Tuesday night in which three or six prisoners manhandled convict Powell was all the trouble experienced the Warden said, despite statements made by Judge E. Madden and Col. Keiller McKay.

Warden Meglaughlin is expected to take the witness stand this afternoon at the trial of convict Michael McDonald on a rioting charge, and it is probable he will be questioned regarding the reported outbreak.

Col. McKay Crown Counsel in the trial of McDonald, stated Saturday McDonald case, made the statement that "conditions at the penitentiary were 'out of hand' and Judge Madden said there had been plenty of trouble at the penitentiary within the past few days." Reports of the disorders were brought out when Frank Regan, defence counsel protested against the failure of prison authorities to produce convict Roberts, a witness.

Attack Planned

Col. Meglaughlin stated the only trouble at the penitentiary occurred Tuesday when five or six men at the end of the supper line in the new women's building attacked convict Powell. Powell rushed to Powell's assistance and succeeded in subduing the men with the help of guards. Powell's back was injured, the Warden said. He believed the attack had been planned.

Since Tuesday the men involved had been isolated and no trouble as they could, the Warden said and it had been necessary to order any convict Roberts balked.

Judge Madden's Words

Kingston, Ont., July 28—(CP)—Serious disorders among convicts at Portsmouth Penitentiary during the past few days came to light at the trial today of Michael McDonald when it was explained the absence of convict witness was due to the fact he had been lashed for his part in the trouble.

"There has been plenty of trouble at the penitentiary these last few days and your part has been connected with it," Judge E. Madden, K.C., told McDonald. Madden also said when Frank Regan, defence counsel, asked for the production of convict Roberts.

Prison authorities made no statement today regarding the difficulty they have experienced in keeping men held in the new women's prison, but admitted there had been a fight. Warden W. B. Meglaughlin said there was no way in which prison authorities could prevent this.

FORMULA TO CATCH CROOKS WORLD OBJECT

Criminologists Gather in Chicago to Plan Clearing House

NO "GANG" PROBLEM

Lack of Co-ordination and Co-operation of Authorities

Chicago, July 28—(AP)—A formula for an international clearing house for the apprehension of crooks was the objective of European, American and Canadian police and criminologists today.

Such an organization would deal with matters of extradition, white slavery, drug smuggling, and the tracing of confidence men, but it was indicated, would not deal with the kidnappings and gangs as they were considered by peculiarly "American institutions."

A preview of what may be undertaken by the criminologists was given last night by police commissioners James R. Bolan of New York, who told them that at present there is a lack of complete co-ordination and co-operation of the authorities in their attempt to run down criminals.

It was indicated prior to today's session that the international criminal police commission, with headquarters at Vienna may serve as the model of the European organization and the new anti-crime bureau of the department of justice at Washington as the western hemisphere headquarters.

Attorney General Cummings and Canadian presidents were suggested.

Members of the Ward Association of Detectives, composed of private agency men, planned to meet at the same time as the police executives and discuss the question of adopting the insignia of badge. One of the objects of this organization is to bring about greater co-operation with the police.

Expressing amazement at the Brutale of American criminals, the European police officers said such crimes as kidnapping couldn't be committed in Europe, Roderick Ross, Chief Constable at Edinburgh, Scotland, referred to kidnappings as the "most cowardly crimes" and declared that there be no mollycoddling of American convicts.

"If they want to shoot, let them shoot it out, but be sure they're the ones who get killed," he said.

CUTTER RACES TO AID ANYOX

Crippled Steamer 400 Miles From Rescue Ship

Vancouver, July 28—(CP)—Racing through the waters of the Alaska the United States cutter Northland was on its way today from Seward, Alaska, to the aid of the steamer Yukoner, which was reported to have sprung a leak in the Arctic ice pack 300 miles south of Point Barrow. The Northland has 400 or 500 miles of sea to traverse before it reaches the crippled steamer.

The arrow owned by the Pacific Salmon Company of Vancouver and under charter to the Hudson Bay Company is commanded by Captain D. H. Johnson and carries a crew of 21 men. It left Vancouver July 6 and replaced the ill-fated Baychimo lost on the same trip a year ago.

With ice to fight in the Bering Sea, the Northland, it was stated, might be two days in reaching the Anyox.

Hutton who is suing the Temple pastor, Aimee Semple McPherson for divorce, was not struck by any of the four eggs good egg, too—and the woman was arrested by a detective sitting near her.

At the police station, where she gave her name as Jane Jones, 27, Mrs. Jones declined on charges of disturbing peace. Police said she was not a member of the temple congregation.

Great War Still Goes on Mailed Fist Still Pens Headlines After 19 Years

By RAYMOND CROWLEY

New York, July 28—(AP)—Nineteen years ago today certain officials dipped their pens in ink and wrote the latest in many scrawls on parchment, gushed to a mighty torrent on the front pages of the world—heralding the outbreak of the Great War.

Those headlines, black as woe, told of Austria-Hungary declaring war on Serbia on July 28, 1914, of Russia ordering a mobilization the next day ,then of the others jumping in.

Today that ink still splashes on page one. A count shows that of all the headlines on front pages on New York morning dailies today 70 percent deal with subjects which have been traced—directly or indirectly, in whole or in part—to the savants or another—back to the war.

"Chicago holds Al Capone and 23 in war rackets"—how many times has the world been told that the war bred lawlessness, which fostered rackets in the United States.

"Gov. Lehman calls special state aiding a drive"—how many men have pointed to the Great War was the cause of the severity of the depression?

"Spain to recognize Soviet Russia." The traces of war ink on that story are plain. Would the Czar still be on his throne if ink hadn't trickled from his pen at parchment 19 years ago?

"Kidnapper doomed to death." Is that too, as grand would contend, a result of war-spawned crime?

"O'Ryan is chosen new Fusion Group to run for Mayor". That's fact. Gen. John F. O'Ryan of the 27th division, which helped smash the Hindenburg line.

World economic parley ended— Would it ever have had to begin, except for the World War?

Some say that, though the fighting has ceased, the Great War still goes on. Certainly the mailed fist is still penning headlines, not only on the front pages, but in the financial section.

Not all of them, though, one headline today says:

"Asia Rest continent sank below sea Asana says."

It sank, yet life went on, perhaps in philosopher would draw a lesson from that.

The two airmen took off early on the morning of July 15 from New York, successfully completing the ocean passage before they were killed in Germany at 7.31P.M. Miserly Woman and Wealthy Eats Discarded Poison Crust

Picks up Bread Man Committing Suicide Drops

By H. ALLEN SMITH

United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, July 28—(U.P.)—A New York woman, who, with $45,000 in the bank, lived on the meager pittance she could glean from the street some of them even rifling garbage cans for scraps, died in the arms of a stranger

Jellinek was 50, an automobile mechanic, in business for himself. Of late business had been at a standstill with Hitler and his boycott was poor. It was yesterday morning that he decided to kill himself. He left his home and business and rushed to Hudson Boulevard, intending to commit suicide by jumping from the George Washington bridge.

Jellinek carried a violent poison with him. He obtained bread and went to a lunch room. The restaurant where the buslis in not so great. During the poison on the bread the side part of it, then walked stoically to the bridge. He was determined, knowing that he would be dead in a few minutes.

Lillian Rosenfield, ill-dressed and haggard, was hovering nearby, looking for some customer to leave her half-eaten meal. She spied the discarded bread, ran down at the table and wolfed it. As she rose to go, her morning s success, the agony struck her. She whimpered, fell to the floor, and died an hour later in Knickerbocker Hospital. Jellinek already was dead by the time she reached the hospital.

Police and the medical examiner were deeply puzzled at first. They found the same poison in each of the stomachs, on learning that the eccentric woman held all men in contempt, they reached the conclusion that Jellinek had mistaken her for himself intentionally.

The bank books showing Lillian Rosenfield to be a wealthy woman, were found in the cellar room she occupied. There she slept on a dirty bed with no bed linen and that stood behind a window blocked by cardboard boxes.

50 MILLIONS RENEWED AT 3 7-8 PER CENT

Ottawa Borrows at Less Than 4 P. C. First Time in Years INTEREST DOWN

Reduction of Over Three Hundred Dollars in Interest

Ottawa, July 28—(CP)—The Dominion government has obtained a renewal of $50,000,000 loan from the Chartered Banks of Canada at 3 7-8 per cent interest. The old loan falls due on Aug. 1. This is said to be the first occasion in recent years that the Dominion has been able to borrow money at less than four per cent.

The new loan will run for one year from Aug. 1, when which is being renewed bears interest at 4 per cent. The renewal was secured from the banks last year. The reduction in interest rate from 4 1-2 per cent to 3 7-8 per cent will mean an annual saving of over $300,000.

On Aug. 1 the Government will redeem $60,000,000 four per cent bonds which fall due under terms dated Oct. 1, 1923 and are due Oct. 1, 1933, but have been called for redemption. This is under the terms of the issue. Provision was made in the 1933 estimates for these notes some weeks ago by the sale of Canadian National four per cent notes in the New York market.

The only other maturity for which the Dominion is required to provide in the current fiscal year is the unconverted amount of $ 1-2 per cent victory loan bonds due Nov. 1, 1933 totalling $189,771,650.

'In Mad Race to Perdition We Must See We're Not First"—Samuel

Liverpool, Eng., July 28 (C P Cable).—Sir Herbert Samuel, British Foreign Secretary, and other British delegates sailed today for Canada to attend the fifth biennial conference of the British Empire Association of Banff, Alta.

As he went aboard the steamer Duchess of Bedford, Sir Herbert, who will make numerous addresses in Canada, said of the conference in the Banff conference:

"I shall not strike a controversial note, nor shall I adopt a defeatist attitude. I am not one of those who think, because the World Economic Conference failed to give sustantial results and because national influences are at work in many countries, we must consider the situation hopeless and abandon any attempt to prevent wars, improvements or restore international trade."

Sir Herbert said he did not believe that the road ahead to perdition we must merely see if we extricate ourselves before it is running.

"On the contrary," he declared, "I shall try to express my belief I believe is the feeling predominant in this country—that we are determined first of all to restore our economic position as we have already received our financial position.

"We shall do this by efforts of our industrialists, agriculturists. Our working people and our tradesmen, assisted sooner or later by whatever action by the state may be found useful."

Forty-Two States Given Allotments Under Plan to Cover 2,233 Counties

Reductions to be Announced Within Ten Days

20 P. C. MAXIMUM

Each Country Producing Wheat is Given Share

By Ray F. Hendricksen

London, July 28 (AP)—County Wheat Production Control Associations, the mainspring of the voluntary domestic allotment plan, will be set up quickly in wheat producing states in the next three weeks by farm administrators, the next step in their campaign to cut down wheat production.

Meetings of extension workers and special representatives in counties without agricultural agents went forward today. Following up Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's announcement yesterday of state allotments for 42 states and 2,233 counties.

One other announcement is necessary before the campaign of administrators to obtain agreements from farmers to reduce their acreage for harvest next year will be in full swing.

Plans Forwarded

Wallace, determined to go ahead with his plans without any further wait for an international wheat acreage reduction agreement, said that within 10 days he will announce what percentage of reduction farmers will be required to agree to make in order to qualify for cash payments.

His announcement came after the decision of the London Wheat Conference to recess until August 21, without having reached agreement.

The maximum reduction which Wallace will require will be 20 per cent with prospects that because of this year's light production of grain that he may select a smaller figures.

Each country producing wheat has been given an allotment representing a share in the world export human domestic consumption of this grain for the coming year.

In some counties the allotments are small and reduction campaigns may not be undertaken very specifically.

If farmers there and in other counties growing small quantities of wheat wish to join the plan however, they will be permitted to form control associations with a larger area than a single county.

MARJORIE MOORE, NEWBURG IS ACQUITTED OF NEGLIGENCE IN DEATH OF MRS. A. KING

Judge However Orders That Her Driving Permit be Cancelled

NEAR WRONG SIDE

Believe Girl Became Excited on Seeing Other Car

Marjorie Moore, Newburg, was acquitted of a charge of criminal negligence, when she appeared in the County Court held before His Honor Judge McLean of Picton, this morning. The case arose following a motor car accident, which occurred between a car driven by Miss Moore and a car driven by William King of Consecon, Thursday night of May 27th last., during which time Alice King was instantly killed. The accident happened three miles north of Madoc on Highway Number Seven.

"I cannot say because this young lady became excited, that she committed an act of criminal negligence," stated His Honor after hearing the evidence, which took all of Friday morning to enter, though she has suffered sufficient enough through said following this unfortunate accident, but for the public's safety and for her own good I recommended that her driver's permit be cancelled," stated His Honor before discharging Miss Moore into custody.

William King, the driver of the ill-fated car in which Miz wife was killed, Dr. Dow Simmons, was called. Mr. King definitely assured the court, that he had been travelling on the right side of the road previous to the accident, which happened at the top of a slight incline, Mr. King swore that as he came to the top of the hill, Miss Moore-driven car swerved to the left directly in front of his, striking his car and throwing Mrs. King out of the car.

Charles Hamilton, a friend of King's and a passenger in the car corroborated the statements given by the former witness. Photographs were introduced to show the various angles of the surrounding highway immediately near the scene of the accident.

King on Right Side

John Moore, Queenboro, told the court, that he was proceeding in the same direction as at the time of the accident, only about 300 yards behind. He stated that King was on his right hand side of the road as he approached the hill, but did not see the actual collision but saw Mrs. King catapulted from the car door. Dr. Dow Simmons, police supervisor, gave testimony as to the condition of the road, which he claimed had just been repaired and in good condition. Walter Evans, local surveyor, produced sketches and plans of the road at the point of accident.

Provincial Ted Hill of Madoc, was the chief witness on behalf of the Crown as he had investigated the accident. Hill said he considered that upon measurements, the cars had not been over the two or three feet, following the impact. He claimed that Miss Moore car was on the wrong side of the road and that King car had apparently struck the Moore car broadside. Cross-examination in the case of Crown witness Hill failed to break down his statement in the least but was brought to a close to the point of impact.

J. Simpson, K.C., of Napanee, appeared for the accused, while B. Donnat K.C., local Crown Attorney ably handled the prosecution.

LAKE ERIE UNDERTOW CLAIMS THREE LIVES

Throngs See 3 Drown in Undertow at Port Stanley During Picnic

Youth Trying Rescue is Lost With Cousins

DIES A HERO

All Were Non Swimmers And Bodies Soon Recovered

Port Stanley, Ont., July 28—The invisible fingers of Lake Erie's undertow dragged three persons to their deaths Thursday afternoon during a community picnic at the beach here.

The same deadly grip from which last Summer Dr. Angus McEachin of the University of Western Ontario rescued seven bathers, Thursday pulled two sisters and their cousin to their deaths.

Nora, aged 19, and Vera Shoebottom, 21, all of London Township—to be wed in the community for some years.

In the afternoon some of the younger members of the group went into Lake Erie for a swim. They ventured a little beyond a low, swampy Smibert girl, Margaret, and two young men, None of the party could swim.

Several large waves beat down on the party as they walked out into deep water. They became exhausted and drew one another in terror as the waves fell over them, preventing them from recovering their breath.

Shoebottom grabbed the younger Smibert girl and took her part way into shore. She told him she was all right, and to go and help the other members of the party.

Shoebottom grabbed the younger older Smibert girls, who were clutched in each other's arms going under in the water. He reached them only to be locked in their drowning grasp. He was unable to stop their struggling and died with them.

The other members of the party called in alarm as they struggled to save themselves and a lifeguard, St. Thomas young men on the beach went to their assistance.

Bodies Recovered

The bodies were all taken from the water in less than 25 minutes and experts at resuscitation were called. Coroner Dr. Jackson, Chief Constable Gunson from St. Thomas, and other men rushed to the scene of the horror, assisted by Fire Chief Mifsela and the resuscitation apparatus from the city of St. Thomas. Their efforts proved unavailing however, and at 8 o'clock all hopes had been given up of reviving them.

TRAIN HELD UP BY FIRES

Many Forest Fires Are Raging in Rocky Mountains

Nelson, B.C., July 28.—(CP)—Forest fires were raging in the Rockies today, the conflagrations spreading over their timber growth industry, destroying farm buildings and driving families from their homes.

The eastbound Kettle Valley train bound for Nelson was held up several hours by a fire in the mountain section around Fife and Laferty. Canadian Pacific Railway crews numbering 150 men, were thrown into the fray to check the flames.

Ten miles in length, another conflagration was reported between Beaverdell and Carmi where a section of the C.P.R. right-of-way was endangered. It also was feared if the wind continued, the Beaverdell-and Wellington mines would be in precarious positions.

SPADE WORK ACCOMPLISHED IS BELIEVED

Next Conference Can Accomplish Something More Definite

MEET IN SEPTEMBER

Longer Time Needed to Attain Results Says MacDonald

LONDON, July 28.—(AP)—Confidence in the success of future International negotiations was expressed in several quarters today as remaining topics in the world economic conference packed up to go home.

The Times said the parley "succeeded in doing a good deal of spade work necessary to enable the next conference to accomplish something more definite" and the Herald asserted the "failure of the world economic conference is not proof of the need for more conferences."

A steering committee will determine when the Assembly is to be re-convened, but today, it is believed will meet in September.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Conference Chairman, made it plain that the recess was not an adjournment and that work would go forward in the interim preparatory to the next plenary session.

An agreement, by silver holding and silver using countries designed to improve the silver market was the most tangible result of the final secret gathering, and negotiations for a wheat restriction pact providing for the reduction of the final second is hoped for from a resumption of the deliberations here August 21st.

Feel Defeated

Said Mr. MacDonald, "we adjourn not because we are defeated, but because we feel more is needed to attain results."

In this connection the times declared it would be useless to reconvene "before the results of the great experiment now being made in America become sufficiently clear to enable President Roosevelt to adopt a definite policy regarding the exchange value of the dollar."

The Post, on the other hand, maintained that "the conference expired unwept and unlamented" but admitted that the ground had been charted and problems identified.

It, too, argued the News Chronicle, which added that, the conference compelled everybody to "examine how difficult the troubles really are."

"President Roosevelt has set the pace," the Herald said in urging the British Government to "use the utmost to achieve national recovery." His courage and energy are as applicable to the British as to the American problem".

HEN SICK FOR 3 DAYS AFTER LAYING EGG

Flemington, N. J., July 28 (AP). The hen that laid the first commercial egg has a rival in a white leghorn hen owned by W. P. Forner, a former State senator.

The hen recently laid an egg with three yolks, one contained within an outer shell and one in an egg with the egg. The latter measures inches through its greatest diameter. It was laid Wednesday, Forner said.

But the task of producing an egg of this size was too much for the hen and she was sick for three days.

BUSINESMEN GIVE PLEDGES

Washington, July 28 (AP)—Businessmen in the United States have begun recording official, definite pledges to do their part in the President Roosevelt's re-employment effort.

The first of the agreement blanks which are to go to 5,000,000 employers for signatures were being distributed, along with addressed envelope that will take back to Washington the individual promises to increase purchasing power by boosting pay and providing more jobs through shorter hours for those now employed.

Rainfall is measured regularly at about 35,000 stations in various parts of the world.

Dominions and Mother Country Declare for Staple Exchange Rates

Not Committed to Keep Pound at Any Fixed Ratio

RAISE PRICES

Agree to Lowering of Inter-Empire Trade Barriers

LONDON, July 28.—(AP)— The British Empire emerged from the world economic conference with an agreement in which the Dominions and the Mother Country declared for stability of inter-Empire exchange rates.

This was made known in a declaration by the Empire delegates to the conference in which it was established that the United Kingdom is not committed to any policy of keeping the Pound Sterling at any fixed ratio to the currency of another nation.

The declaration was signed by the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India. The Irish Free State did not sign but the Dublin representative referred the matter to his government.

The Empire delegates called for ultimate restoration of an international Gold Standard. The problem facing gold, they held, is to reconcile stability in exchange rates with a reasonable measure of stability in world trade prices, and not merely in the price level of a particular country.

The Empire delegations recognize the importance of the stability of inter-Empire Exchange rates in the present world crisis. The declaration said. "This is facilitated by a great measure of stability of the management of sterling and retains complete freedom action in this respect. We invite other governments outside to a similar policy would make a wider enjoyment of stability possible.

The Empire delegates declared for an increase in the level of wholesale prices by the lowering of inter-Empire trade barriers.

They provided for a confirming unified monetary policy by the members of the Empire by reconsultation with their governments consult periodically to that end.

FIRST STAGE ENDS

The first stage of the Economic World Conference is ended but though the early remarks were critical, the feeling eased with Roosevelt message and the MacDonald hope that the representatives of the nations would soon be together again in London.

What is clear now is that the nations do understand some of the difficulties which were not so self-evident to many in early stages. Knowledge of limitations will probably make the individual nations not only anxious for some real permanent action to come out of the month and a half session at London but will also spur them on to individual effort, to reach for the better way.

It must be clear to those who attend the conference that the selfish cutthroat way is doomed to failure. The message with which King George opened the Conference still holds—that men will come to see the importance and the justice of a brotherhood in world trade.

There will be regret that the parley so far has not produced the results which seemed possible some months ago, but there is probably more hope in the adjourned conference than in previous days sessions beyond the present time. The influence of conference delegates will from now on be at work.

ROBOT CONTROL IN AIR

Wiley Post, the one man who has flown twice about the globe, has a belief in robot control of planes and sees automatic devices as really holding the future of aviation in their grasp. The strain of flying without sleep is so terrific as to be a serious handicap to the development of long distance flying while the weariness to which fliers are susceptive is proven in the case of the Mollisons who were so tired that the captain himself scarcely knew what he was doing. Post believes that mechanical device can be developed so well, he predicts that the airliner of the future will be guided to her destination largely by automatic pilots.

Such would relieve the strain on those in charge of airships. Today the ocean hop is too great to be carried out by even such great pilots as the Mollisons, whose resources are seemingly endless.

The mechanical device may make the leap over the Pacific a possibility in the very near future.

CATS ARE SPHINXES

Science has determined that the cat is inscrutable. A doctor who has seen eighty thousand of them says that no one understands them." The poor confiding innocent dog anyone can understand but the cat never. "Call a dog and he comes running and happy," he says. "A cat is independent. Her mind is inscrutable. She tells you nothing about herself, or what's she is thinking or feeling. Speak to her and she is just as likely to snub you and walk off. But she is the most consistent of all animals. She will get her own way whether it is having the best chair to sit in or having her kittens where she wants to have them.

Why do cats refuse to come down out of trees and off poles? This is a problem which science is now examining finally. Dr. Philip Bard at Harvard Medical School declares the cat's trouble is psychological. She is in a state of mind. She will stay in a tree until her terror passes it off.

The Animal Rescue League in New York has developed a special apparatus for use in getting pussies out of trees—a noose at the end of a pole for pulling the animals within reach of the ladder.

Science has absolutely proven in the general view that a cat always falls on its feet. Experiments show that a cat will fall on its feet even if the fall is less than a foot.

The cat forms habits it is impossible for her to break. Often most trouble in cat hospitals is to cure the creatures of habits. Often owners have to be sent for and sometimes even her drinking dish has to be brought to her home.

Dr. W. A. Young says a cat generally recognizes safety in a human being.

The instinct to hide her kittens is natural for females are the greatest killers and will kill kittens even when almost half grown. Nature prompts the mother cat to hide her young.

Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life.—Charles Frohman.

Misfortune does not always wait on vice; nor is success the constant guest of virtue.—Havard.

And man may make a mistake but none but a fool will continue in it.—Cicero.

No man ever became great or good except through many and great mistakes.—Gladstone.

Perfection is attained by slow degrees; it requires the hand of time.—Voltaire.

SIDELIGHTS—GRAVE and GAY

O VIOLIN!

O, violin, sing them away,
The cares that vexed my heart today,
The hope that went unsatisfied,
The shining dream that was denied,
The long-sought goal I failed to win,
For these give solace, violin!

Deep, deep your throbbing tones can reach
And to my rebel spirit teach
The truths that were obscure for me,
O, violin, sing on, sing on,
Till all the bitterness is gone!

Lead me along the path to peace,
From pains hard bondage lend release.
With notes supremely clear and sweet
Free me of memories of defeat.
O, violin, sing on again,
Till life has not one fret of stain!

WILEY POST, round-the-world aviator, was given a civic reception in New York City Wednesday morning, and after he had listened to internal speeches in which he was told all about the exploits of Magellen, that ancient navigator, and other daring adventurers who tried to girdle the earth in the last century or two, with a side trip on Jules Verne's "Round the World in Eighty Days," he was given a medal signifying the approval of the sovereign city of New York and its Tammany bosses for having started from and returned to earth in that city. Wiley who is more of a flyer than a lyre and more of a walker than a talker, had just enough strength left to express his thanks in two sentences. Which single oratory is the long suit of Tammany politicians and they manage to mar most public functions by their interminable harangues which serve only to take the minds of the spectators from the real object of the gathering and make them wish they had not come.

Stick to the simple life Andy, old dear, and let the politicians worry about war debts and all that sort of thing don't you know—its safer. Although hysteria is distinctly a functional nerve disorder, and does not involve structural changes of any kind in the nerves themselves, it may simulate any known physical disease, no matter what its kind.

Hysterical states, therefore, may give rise to fever, or a rash, and lead to the assumption that an individual has contracted a contagion. Mental upsets in children society may be caused by hysteria. Pain may be present, and may be severe. Even so serious a condition as blindness or paralysis may not be organic at all, but only hysterical in character.

One must not assume, however, that hysteria is not serious, or that such patients do not suffer. Hysterical states may change the entire course of a person's life, rendering him or her, as the case may be, positively miserable. What's more, such a condition may readily become chronic and run on for years, and the longer hysteria has lasted the harder it is to cure.

Yet, whatever the hysterical manifestation may be, it is always due to the mind!

Probably this is the reason why the patient with hysteria receives so little understanding and even less sympathy. People are inclined to believe that a person who is mental the upset is more or less imaginary or "fake" anyway, and that the patient in question could overcome his symptoms if he really tried hard enough.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Mental disorders, no matter what their specific origin, are as devastating and as real as any "bona fide" organic disease. When a person is laid low with an hysterical paralysis, he is unable to walk, he cannot move a muscle, and the fact that the nerves and muscles in the affected limbs are sound can scarcely be considered a comforting thought.

During the Great War, I had occasion to diagnose a young man of twenty who was in the navy and who had contracted hysterical blindness. The cause of course, was mental. In summary this was the story:

Enlistments in the navy were voluntary, and he had joined up out of a sense of patriotism. This was his conscious reaction. On the other hand, deep down in his unconscious mind, his self-preservation instinct had caused him to be afraid.

A mental conflict arose. His ego instinct, which had prompted his patriotism, began to fight his self-preservation instinct. The result was the former was the victor, and he entered the war; but not before he was assigned to a submarine chaser, the self-preservation instinct—plus fear—got itself, would then point the finger of scorn and shout, "Coward!"

Although all cases of hysteria do not have as deep-seated mental mechanisms as a dramatic as this, there can be no question but what unconscious conflicts are always responsible.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Overeating is as bad as undereating. Just because we like a certain dish is no reason for overfeeding. Eat a little less than the appetite urges. It may also protect a mental effort by way of a "defence mechanism" to help the stomach out, a disgust in the future for that particular food. In fact, second helpings are often inadvisable.

IN ANSWER TO A LADY'S LETTER

A lady writes to say that she does not understand why an 8-cylinder car does not cost more to run than a car with fewer cylinders. She refers to my statement that our Ford V-8 develops more power on a gallon of gas than any car we have made.

The use of 8-cylinders does not mean the addition of two or four extra fuel consumers. It is not, for example, a 4-cylinder engine multiplied by two. Our 8-cylinder engine takes the fuel supply of an ordinary 4-cylinder engine and divides it eight ways. And why?

By reducing four larger explosions into eight smaller ones, we get engine smoothness and quietness. Eight-cylinders indicate the way the gas is used, not the amount. It is just the difference between going upstairs in four long jumps or in eight ordinary steps.

Two things use up gas—bad engine design and useless car weight. Besides having an engine that gets a high percentage of power out of the fuel, the Ford V-8 has a light, strong body and chassis so that no power is wasted in moving excess weight.

The only extravagance about the new Ford V-8 engine is in the building of it. The extravagance is ours—the economy is yours.

The whole question of car economy needs clearing up. An economical car gives economy all round. Price, operation, upkeep, all play their part. If what you save on gas you lose elsewhere, that is not economy.

As to upkeep, our dealers say that in recent years the improved quality of Ford cars has cut down their repair business 50 per cent.

As to price with quality,—judge for yourself.

As to economy, here is the record of a stock car three weeks out of the factory:

On a run of 10,054 miles at the rate of 1,000 miles a day—the Ford V-8 gave 22½ miles per Imperial gallon of gas. Not a drop of water was added to the radiator. The oil was changed once in 1,000 miles.

This should answer a lot of questions.

Henry Ford

This letter from Henry Ford describes so clearly and simply the reasons for the remarkable economy of the Ford V-8 that it is reprinted here by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling us about self sacrifice, saying, he spirit of self sacrifice is one of the noblest virtues a human bean can possess, without self sacrifice the world would be a mass of selfishness and a very sad place indeed to live in. But fortunately we all occasionally do oneseres something for the benefit of others. I'm sure that everybody in this room has often sacrificed his own intrists for the intrists of others. Perhaps some of you can remember an example of self sacrifice on your part. If so I want you to tell the class about it. Now who will be the first to say, said.

Which pritty soon Puds Simkins raised his hand and Miss Kitty said Well Charles? and Puds said, Once time I had a frame house and all nise long pritty neer and it woke me up as fast as I went to sleep, and the next morning as I started instead of complaining about it I never mentioned it.

That was very nice and considerate of you, I'm sure, said your parents feelings, didn't you? Miss Kitty said, and Puds said, Yes mam I guess so, and anyways I was pretty sure they'd make me go to the dentist if they found out.

In that case I'm afraid it wasn't quite the right sort of sacrifice, is there anyone else? Miss Kitty said.

Which there was, being one setting. Last week we had company for supper, and it was a lady and her little girl, and we had cake

Ah, but you didn't know she would, Miss Kitty said, and I said, Well I kind of thawt she would because her mother was there, and Miss Kitty said, Are afraid many cases of so called self sacrifice have selfishness at the root, we will pass on to the history lesson.

SENATORS WIN 1ST GAME IN BIG SERIES

Yanks Shoved Down Two Games From Top Rung

GIANTS WIN

Increase Lead in National League to Five Full Games

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

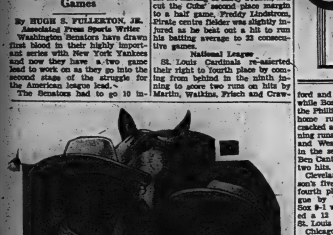
Washington Senators have drawn first blood in their highly important series with New York Yankees and now they have a two game lead to work on as they go into the second stage of the struggle for the American league pennant.

The Senators had to go 10 innings yesterday to gain their eighth victory in 11 meetings with the Yanks by a 3-2 decision and even then they might have lost but for once sloppy base running by Charley ruffing, the losing pitcher. But despite the close score it was clearly "the day" for the 12,000 fans who rooted them on until a pinch hit by Cliff Bolton, their starting catcher, drove in the deciding run in the 10th.

New York's other pennant contender, the Giants who lead the National League, maintained their lead to five games, with Carl Hubbell pitching four hit ball for his eighth shutout and the Giants's 17th and driving in the first run himself, the Giants beat Brooklyn Dodgers 2-0.

The Philadelphia Pittsburgh Pirates took their third straight fall out of Chicago Cubs 3-0 behind the sit hit hurling of Larry French, and cut the Cubs' second place margin to a half game, Freddy Lindstrom, Pirate centre fielder was slightly injured as he beat out a hit to raise his batting average to 23 consecutive games.

National League



St. Louis Cardinals re-asserted their right to fourth place by coming from behind in the ninth inning to score two runs on hits by Martin, Watkins, Frisch and Crawford and beat Cincinnati Reds 4-3 while Boston scraped two games to the Phillies. The Phils won both by home runs as Harry McCurdy cracked a pinch homer for the winning runs in the opening 4-3 victory and Wes Schinnerick socked one in the second game to win 2-1 as Ray Caldwell gave the winners only two hits.

Cleveland aided by Monie Pearson's five hit flinging, moved into fourth place in the American league by walloping Chicago White Sox 9-1 while Detroit Tigers dropped a 13 inning slugging match to St. Louis 10-9.

Chicago's defeat, the eighth straight, left the pale hose only 3 half game out of seventh place as Boston Red Sox defeated Philadelphia Athletics 6-2.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Ball players are always looking forward advancement from the minor league to a higher one, so why not deal in the same manner with baseball umpires? It is following the most successful work of O.B.A. umpires that there is beyond a question of a doubt something existing for the betterment of the present umpiring system in the senior loop in contrary before another season rolls around. First and foremost the senior umpires system which has been in vogue for years has proven a dismal failure. Second the junior member umpires in the C.O.B.L. is actually lower than that paid in intermediate circles. Both of these errors, or whatever they may be termed, must be rectified pronto.

To start with we have seen two arbiters working this present season in the local Bay of Quinte loop, who are not qualified to swing the senior ranks. The two arbiters in question are from the town of Picton and "Creep" Adams of Brighton. Both of these lads call a pretty good ball game from behind the bat or on the lines. Plus and foremost "call 'em as they see 'em" and they usually see them right. The honesty and integrity of both men have long been established and they would be the second additions to the C.O.B.L. in 1934.

We watched Young perform during the Picton at Belleville game on Wednesday and he did himself credit thereby. Also Adams has made a distinct hit with the fans here some weeks ago. When an arbiter can work through a hectic 11 inning game, as did Young and not be on the receiving end of the well known "Brass-Band" by this town's pet, well he's worth mentioning in any sport column. It is following the so-called siteages of umpiring by some of this years C.O.B.L. staff that we think that Ed Young and Adams should be added to the Central loop umpiring staff another year. "Honesty is the best policy even in umpiring circles."

Today the Picton Intermediate should pull out of the hard victories as they entertain the busy Brighton team. Of course the Brighton crew may pull the unexpected and trim the Prince Edward County crew as they did the Wes last Saturday, but this is not their predominate as the Picton club now have their backs to the wall and should be "in there" today.

Today's Bay of Quinte League standings shows Belleville and Picton leads but two full games behind Napanee who are playing with two games to play. On paper this would mean, that the Napanee crew must win their remaining two games while either Belleville or Picton must lose their two remaining contests. Of course the O.B.A.A. game will order the replay of the game between Picton and Napanee but, should Napanee win, Belleville defeat one of their remaining games, that protest game will not count into the league standings. We still are of the opinion, that the league leaders need Tommy Polzler in a pedestal play-off. On the other hand his absence on the second last game this season, warrants his being feared of by any intermediate club.

Now that Art Young's Crystalettes have returned themselves of the top rung in the Hastings County loop with a two game and percentage advantage over the Moose leaders battle it out with the second place Wellington club for the play-off honors. The Crystalettes are the present champs, staged a last week rally to win their league, and should about "take" the Junior chain in the immediate vicinity. Art Young has entered together a team of husky players who wield a mean bat in the league ranks. Their pitching has also been above average for local junior teams.

Manager Charlie Tribwith announced today that the Tribwith game between his College Hill Cubs and the Griffin Garage nine would be played on the Cakeman Flats diamond, with a win for the Cubs in the series while a win for the "Mechanics" eliminates the Cubbys' Hill lads.

While these play-offs are taking the attention of the fans the committees in charge of the staging of the "old timers game" are busily going about their business. E. A. Elliott of Dolsen Fuel Products of the O.B.A.A. is doing all in his power to assure the appearance of Lefty "Chief" Bender, undoubtedly all the other players referred to in this column will have signified their willingness to participate in the pastime. The game is to be staged by the local Kiwanis Club for charity purposes and one of the biggest days entertainment in years is assured. We understand that "Buddy" Kerr and his wise-cracking friend, Mr. North have been invited.

Safely out of the lair of Buffalo Bisons where they lost five games in a row,—Rochester Redwings have shared the first victory of an important series with Newark Bears and clipped the Bears' International league lead to a game and a half.

Rochester smacked Don Brennan soundly in the early innings to beat the Bears last night 6-4 although Newark was rallying threateningly in the last few frames. The Red-wings solved Brennan for seven hits and four runs in the seven frames he worked but scored what proved to be the deciding run off Johnny Murphy in the eighth.

Jersey City hung up its fourth victory in a row, beating Baltimore third place Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3 with an eighth inning rally that produced three runs, the last two on a single by Ray Pitzgerald. Roger Slaulin, young right hander, pitched brilliantly and received credit for his third victory although he went out for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. Home runs by Lu Blue in the seventh and Murray Howell in the eighth had given Toronto a 3-1 lead.

Baltimore advanced to within a game and a half of the Leafs by trouncing Montreal 10-4, battering Johnny Mitchell and Art Smith for 17 hits of which Buzz Arlett contributed a triple, double and two singles.

Buffalo stretched its winning streak to six in a row and drew to within two games of the fifth place Royals by whipping Albany 8-5. Stanley Hack's fumble on a double play bounder by Ollie Carnegie in the eighth was the break the Bisons were waiting for and they pushed over five runs.

VICTORIA, CONSECON PLAY NINE ALL TIE

One of the Best Games of Softball Played in Loop

Mountain View, July 28 (Special)—In one of the best played and most exciting games yet played in the Amalsburg Township Softball loop, the second place Victoria A.C. battled the Consecon nine to a nine all tie at Consecon before the largest crowd of the season last evening. At the completion of the seven regular innings the umpires were forced to terminate the game owing to darkness. A replay of the game is booked later in the week. The games affects the final standing of the league.

Snappy fielding on the part of both clubs featured the game that was played in record time. Each club completed two snappy double plays while Leonard Phillips scored the only home run of the game with a mighty smash to deep left centre. Buddy Crawford, with two doubles and Sammy Smith, with a two-ply hit to his credit led the Victoria swatsmiths. As the game does not enter into the league standing, the Victoria club are still leading the league by a substantial margin. Dolf Pointer hurled the complete game for the visitors.

The line-ups were as follows:
Victoria A.C.—H. Pointer, Cretney, Ivory, Cretney, Barber, Thompson, White, Crawford, Smith Montgomery.
Consecon—Parke, Phillips, James McConkey, Hayes, Cook, McConkey, Clarke, Phillips, Clarke.

Letter From India

MRS. B. M. Miller, who is visiting her son in India, has written another delightful letter of experiences in that country. To-day's copy is a continuation of the letter appearing in this paper on the 21st instant. She says:

Next day Miles came out here to see if the house-boat was all ready for us to come to and the following day we moved out. Our house-boat is a new one this year, is very large, in fact more like a one storey house than a boat. The Mangi, owner, is very well off and has furnished the house very nicely. A large drawing-room has two chesterfields, several tables and chairs and a very large screen, all beautifully carved, a writing desk, also carved, and on shelves on the walls are several very good pieces of pewter and brass. The dining-room, also large, is well furnished; a pantry, cosy nest and behind that are three large bedrooms, each with a separate bathroom. Stairs going up from the pantry lead to the deck, on which are several wicker chairs and tables, and overhead, a shamiana, with curtains. Then on Wazirbi Lake, which is really big enough to be called a lake, but is one of several large bays off of Dhal Lake. We, as a rule, have afternoon tea on deck. The house is moored to the shore and we have the use of two fields with several large shade trees. At present, these fields are full of wild poppies and feathery white flowers.

We are six miles from Srinagar and have two ways of getting into town, the big car or by shikara. The city is a fascinating place to paint, flat-bottomed but narrow, with long- pointed ends. The passengers sit on cushions in the centre of the boat, a shamiana over head and curtains on the sides, which protects, one from the sun. Watermoolies propel the boat at the back, using paddles with rather long handles. The blades of these paddles are artistically shaped like huge wooden hearts. It takes about an hour and a half to get into Srinagar, a very interesting trip. By car we can do it in forty-five minutes, but it is not as interesting. By Shikara we pass through several small native villages. The native houses are all made of mud. Nearly all are two or three stories high and in the poorer houses the first floor is usually occupied with the cows, sheep, etc., the second by the family and the third floor with hay and all sorts of rubbish. The better class houses have numerous window frames with latticed-cloudows but with paper pasted over where glass, usually is. Everyday dozens of natives come to our boat with all sorts of things to sell.

Kashmir is, as perhaps you know, noted for its wonderful embroideries, carved wood, brass and silver work, etc. One man, from whom we have bought several pieces of lingerie, is named "Butterfly". His work is really beautiful and not expensive considering. In one street in Srinagar a sign, "I am the world's worst wood-carver." Another man announces his name as Joyful Jacob. One man coming to the boat, said to me: "You will remember me, I am the man who has lost a tooth." Opening his mouth and showing a large cavity. These merchants are all very keen to have you visit their workshops. We went to one the other day. They send their shikara for you and take you through all sorts of curving canals. This one was an extra-good one; a three-storey factory or shop set in the middle of a pretty garden. The ground floor, as usual, seemed not to be in use; on the second floor in a large well-ventilated room, about thirty men and boys, sitting on cushions on the floor, were all busy, some doing fine embroidery silk, others coarse crewel work on sacking. It is marvellous how they shade their colours. On the third floor, finished articles were for sale, bed-spreads, curtains, table covers and coffee jackets, were some of the many things there were. According to custom, we were given afternoon tea. The tea was Persian, which is considered to be something extra. With it were sent champlis, a sort of biscuit made of flour and water, and some of the principal foods of the native.

Another place we went to was the Shanghai Bazaar. There are many Indians, not Chinese as one might expect. They have a wonderful collection of antiques. Some very wealthy Indian, who spends a hobby of collecting these things and who recently had lost his money, sent the collection to these people to forward to Christie's, in London, for sale. Many of the pieces were beautiful but many did not appeal to me in the least. Then also, we had tea, and are going next week to a Persian luncheon. The people who run this place are very well educated and gave us a lot of interesting history of India. I heard a very funny story about an Indian clerk in the country. A well-known man wanted to bring in some ready made cocktails but thought first he would find out what the duty would be, so wrote to the department. In reply he received the following:

"Dear Sir, your letter received, and we have the honour to inform you there is no duty whatever on fetishes." As the English say here, "Not that grand." Another man, when asked by an Indian custom officer if he had anything to declare, first said "no" then "oh yes! I've a bottle of milk's gin in the trunk." Much excited, the customs man insisted they should be opened. When he saw what the bottle contained, he said: "Put, my, Sir, cows are not the gres of the sacred bull." In certain parts of India, all white cows are sacred, but in Kashmir, all cows are sacred.

Spare Time for Mother

(By Constance Cameron)

A sensible little mother I know does everything in her power to give her child the chance to indulge in happy, carefree playing, which is but fair. The mother, though, has an active mind that craves after new thoughts. She enjoys reading and does so at every opportunity. This recreation was sadly interfered with, however, in that, each time she sat down for a minute with a coveted new book, little Jane appeared from somewhere, asking for play materials.

Being efficient the mother studied out a plan which I feel will help many mothers to gain spare moments for relaxation and rest.

Jane loved to sew. Jane and her young friends loved to "dress up", play theatre or play "house" in discarded clothing of mothers. And mother was always ready and willing to furnish their costumes. But she worked out a way in which they can indulge them to their heart's content, without taking precious minutes which should be hers.

Jane's Own Trunk

Into a big trunk set in a corner of the nursery, go all the old dresses, hats, scuffed evening shoes, masquerade costumes, party pants, hats, etc. This, Jane knows, is hers, to use whenever she and her friends feel the urge to dress up. Now, instead of her coming to haul out clothes, they may don and play in, mother has but to remind the little girl that there is a whole trunkful of them in her very own room. The child has even gotten to the point where she doesn't have to consult mother about it at all, simply opens the trunk and an afternoon's play is in progress.

This having designated place for certain play materials, is, I feel, an excellent one. Paints, crayons, pencils, tools for wood working, all these things can be put where the child can get them easily, and in so doing create many a spare moment for the busy mother.

VACATIONS and HEALTH

By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES
Technical Director and Chief Medical Director, New York Life Insurance Company

WHAT TO WEAR

Your vacation clothing should not sacrifice comfort and health for style although there is no good reason why they cannot be combined to good advantage. During the heat of the day, wear clothes that are light in both weight and color. Cotton and linen are suggested. Avoid getting chilled at night, and have a sweater handy for use after vigorous exercise, or in the evening. Where and how you spend your vacation will largely determine the kind of clothes to wear.

Clothing may get wet from rain or perspiration, and in drying on the body it draws heat from the body itself. Cotton, linen and silk dry more rapidly, and therefore cool the body more quickly than wool. People who take colds easily should change their underclothing promptly if it gets wet.

All garments should fit the body loosely and not be tight anywhere, especially around the neck or waist. Suspenders are preferable to belts for men, and women should likewise carry the weight of their clothes on their shoulders. In many respects, modern women are more sensible than men in that they are not so likely to wear tight collars, or bands around the abdomen.

Proper footwear is exceedingly important if you expect to do much walking on your vacation. Shoes should neither pinch the foot at any point, nor be so loose as to cause a blister. Heels should be broad and not too high. High heels throw the weight of the body forward on the toes and off proper balance. This may result in backache and other symptoms remote from the feet.

Socks and stockings should, of course, be changed and washed often during the summer months. Tight garters which cause a ring around the leg just above the knee tend to cause varicose veins. By blocking the upward flow of blood with tight garters the veins become dilated and later enlarged and unsightly.

Many people go bare-headed much of the time on their vacation. This practice is quite permissable, except during very hot weather when you may be exposed to the direct rays of the sun. Intense heat on the scalp may cause eye-strain or even sun-stroke. A straw hat or other light head covering is a good precaution. It should fit loosely enough to permit the air to circulate around the scalp.

This is the sixth of a series of 12 articles on Vacations and Health. The seventh, on Exercise and Rest, will answer the questions:

1. How long should a person sleep? 2. How much exercise is advisable? 3. When may exercise be dangerous?

N.Y. Stocks Soporific And Smallest Turnover Since Beginning of Latest Mull Market—Distillery Issues Came Back Trifle—Mining Shares Off Fractionally—Canadian Dollar Off 3-4 of Cent

NEW YORK FINANCIAL

New York, July 28—(AP)—Financial markets plodded today under the soporific influence of London's prime uncertainties and United States dollar jitters.

Stocks moved feebly, and generally lower, with the turnover the smallest since the beginning of the present market. Moderate declines and dented gave the list a spotty appearance throughout. A few of the "war" stocks came back a bit, as did some of the speculative. Bonds were irregular. Canadian stocks and bonds showed a tendency to drift somewhat lower. The mining shares of Dome and Hollinger issues came in for pressure at one time with losses of a point or more. Dundalk Pacific showed a fractional gain, while Dominion Steel, oftentimes declined moderately and the Canadian dollar lost 3-4 of a cent at $2.60 cents.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 28 (CP)— A slow dealing with trading light marked today's final session of the week on the Toronto Stock Exchange. The Exchange will take a holiday next Friday. The uncertain performance given in the New York Market's three-hour session helped to turn the Toronto market soft.

British, Imperial and Dominion Imperial 1-4 and McColl Frontenac a full point. Losses ranged from 1-4 to a point in the food group.

Smelters dropped 4 points, Nickel about $1, Hamilton 3-4, C.P.R. 1-4 and Ford of Canada 3-4 and in the distillery shares Gooderham and Worts weakened 1 to 35, Industrial Alcohol 1-2, Distillers Seagram 1-4 and Brewers and Distillers 1½ cents.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, July 28—(CP)— Today's pre-holiday market was a tame affair with volume small and the downgrade. A sell-drive in Eldorado broke the monotony.

McIntyre and Dome lost about 1½ each, Lake Shore $1 and Hollinger, York Knights and Wright Hargreaves about 25 cents each. From a $20 level Hollinger closed at $19.50. Noranda weakened 60 cents and Sudbury Basin 50 cents. Gains were chalked up for Hudson Bay, Falconbridge and Sherritt Gordon.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, July 28 (AP)—The governing committee of the New York stock exchange announced today that the regular hours of business from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. would be resumed beginning next Monday. It was also stated that the exchange would be closed on all Saturdays up to and including September 2.

Opera House on East Bridge Street was unsafe. A rumour was even circulated, without foundation, that the building had been "condemned." Yet, after an examination today of the material that is being removed from the structure, a local well known contractor gave it as his opinion that the building is still as sound as many a commercial structure built within the past few years. The massive baulks of timber being taken from the interior of the building are strong and solid; the floor underpinnings are sound, and the walls, extremely spaced, even the ordinary lumber appears free from buckling, after fifty years' service, is healthy and sound. So strong was the building put up for the first place that experienced wreckers of the York Wrecking Company are of the opinion that considerable difficulty is being experienced in tearing it down.

BUILD PLANT BY NEW YEARS

President W. J. Hume on Visit Here Tells of New U. S. Distillery

Mr. Wm. J. Hume, president and general manager of the Hiram Walker Gooderham and Worts Distillery, Ltd., of Walkerville, is a brief stop in the city today while on a report of this paper that he plans for the new distillery of that company, to be built, would be completed by the first of September next and the building of the plant would commence immediately. Construction will be pursued as rapidly as possible, and it is hoped the plant will be in full operation by the first of the following year.

Orders for the equipment of the new distillery are to be placed next week, and call for machinery to handle 20,000 of bushels of grain daily. The plant will supply 100,000 American gallons of liquor each working day or 30,000,000 gallons per year.

Mr. Hume is more than hopeful of the new venture and anticipates a remunerative and expanding business in the United States market.

JACK HULBERT NOW WHEELER-WOOLSEY NEXT AT CAPITOL

It's too bad about the man who wouldn't go to see "The Dark Horse" because he thought it was an animal picture, because when he sees "So This Is Africa" at the Capitol Theatre on Monday-Tuesday he's due for a lot more confusion. It is to open at the Capitol Theatre Saturday for 3 days.

For in this riotous, mirth-scintillating comedy it is hard to tell whether the animals are animals, birds, beasts, or Wheeler and Woolsey.

When the picture was produced Columbia Studios had to find a donkey would could lay down on his right forelegs like a human being, a huge six-inch fly to wouldn't mind being put in the back by Woolsey, a St. Bernard dog willing to have all his hair shaved off, a gorilla who liked to swing through the jungle, and six lions who had a much greater passion for chocolate than red meat.

And that's not all. One hundred Amazon women and 100 Tarzan men had also to be combined in the jungle where these strange beasts roam and where Wheeler and Woolsey's amazing clothes proceed to discover new sources of comedy for the already comedy-filled film.

Beautiful, dark Raquel Torres plays a stenographer who falls for a handsome woman with Esther Muir, Henry Armetta, Hobart Cavanaugh and others in the supporting cast. Eddie Cline directed "So This Is Africa" from a script by Norman Krasna.

A New Western

Buck Jones in his latest outdoor thriller, "Forbidden Trails" is showing on the same bill. Buck is a Texas Ranger, who runs down, during his duty, shoots his friend, Barney Ryan, who used to be a Ranger, too, but who has fallen into bad company. This is the theme of the play, playing Jeff Douglas, that he decides to quit ranging and find peace of mind by taking a job in a Bank in Arizona. But instead of finding true calm the time he hoped for Jeff has to pull out of worse holes than ever before, to say nothing of the charges including Janet Kenyon, a pretty Eastern girl who falls for Jeff and he for her love.

Monday and Tuesday are Dinner-Set Gift Days as usual.

Jack Hulbert Leading

ZANE GREY'S SUNSET PASS AND MELODY CRUISE NEXT AT BELLE

Randolph Scott, Tom Keene, Kathleen Burke, Noah Beery, Harry Carey and Kent Taylor play leading roles in Zane Grey's "Sunset Pass", coming to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday (Labor Day).

The picture gushes from beginning to end in the dramatic, central theme around a cattleman's association deputy who finds that the man he is tracking down is the brother of the girl he loves. Keene plays the role of the deputy and Miss Burke he is seeking, and Miss Burke, the latter's sister.

The picture's big clues to the fact that Scott is leader of a band of cattle rustlers and that he voluntarily goes to prison and makes friends with the convicts to get them to talk. Out of prison he goes to Scott's ranch and enters his employ. When he falls in love with Miss Burke he gives thanks that proof he has not found any real evidence against her brother. But it is at that very moment that he gets the evidence, and that he himself is revealed as a deputy. What follows brings the picture to a breathless conclusion.

Highlights of the film are a raging prairie fire and the consequent stampede of a tremendous herd of cattle, Miss Burke's rescue of handcuffed and shooting, all the way through.

"Melody Cruise" Funny

Tired of heavy sophisticated drama? Filled up with garrulous films of modern morals? Sick of ultra-smart, jaded? Then go again with "Melody Cruise," a spicy story, breezy with comedy situations which is the second feature movie which is the second feature on the same program. The tuneful story of a ship's cruise that the audiences everywhere with its scintillating rhythm and a colorful musical performance by Charlie Ruggles, Phil Harris Greta Nissen, Helen Mack and Brillante Mendoza of shapely dancing and vocalizing girls.

For music lovers, slow lovers, or those who like their stories set to melody, "Melody Cruise" will provide a thoroughly enjoyable picture. It is a delightfully different musical. Mechanical chorus girls do not interrupt the light and frivolous story with their dull dance times. Hankering crooners do not burst into romantic moments in the midst of the film. Gay little maidens do not interrupt with their rapid-fire diction with the ill-timed torch song.

Charlie Ruggles as the husband contributes a performance to be expected of a master of comedy—he is consistently amusing. Phil Harris as the playboy, is up with and coming player. Greta Nissen who has entertained radio fans for the past three years, has been chosen by Grove in Los Angeles belongs to Harris.

If you haven't heard the "Melody Cruise" musical numbers — "Love's You Worry" and "Marrying Kind," "Here Comes Love," "This is the Hour," "Isn't this a Night for Love?" you shortly will as they are becoming increasingly popular.

"Melody Cruise" is tuneful, mounted and brilliantly produced. A funny Mickey Mouse comedy and a new Pathe Sportsreel Souvenirs will also be exhibited.

ROYALTIES NOT LIABLE

London, July 27 (CP)—The judicial committee of the privy council today dismissed the appeal of the Canadian Minister of National Revenue in a case involving the question whether moneys received as royalties under an oil production agreement were liable to income tax.

The case, coming from the Supreme Court of Canada, involved the appeal of the Spooner Oils Limited from the Calgary judgment in favor of Turner Valley Gas Conservation Board in limiting the company's production.

The company originally failed in the Alberta courts in its effort to prove the Turner Valley Gas Conservation Act ultra vires the province of Alberta and that the board had not the legal right to reduce the company's gas production.

Following this the company carried the royalties of Canada from the reduced production were not liable to income tax, and the Canadian Court of Canada upheld this view.

THIS LITTLE LADY ENJOYS TRAVELLING

Seven Year Miss Travels With Only Doll Companion to West

Moncton, N. B., July 28. — All dressed up in her best clothes, little Miss Madeline Mazerolle Chebuktuk was a passenger on the Ocean Limited of the Canadian National Railways reaching Moncton recently on her way to her daddy who lives at Milford, Sask.

Entirely unaccompanied except for her dolly, the young lady was called to Halifax from Poland. At Halifax the matron at the immigration hall gave Madeline a bath and she was taken to the Ocean Limited by another car conductor took her in charge.

She cannot speak English but the conductor says she is very good to her enjoyment. When meal time came around the sleeping car conductor took her into the dining car and personally supervised her meal.

On arrival in Montreal, the seven year old traveller was taken in charge by a Canadian National representative and was placed on the train which took her to her destination.

by Alma Sioux Scarberry

"What's the matter with your callings, Mary?" he inquired.

"I wouldn't want to do that" Mary demurred.

Freckle grinned.

"That is Hollywood, infant. Be yourself!"

"I've never called a man in my life." Mary picked up the receiver. "But—here goes."

Curt got as the phone immediately when his secretary told him Miss Sawyer was calling.

"Good morning, little one." His voice was warm with greeting. He was a little surprised that she would call him. And he was not sorry.

"Listen you, Mr. Little," Mary said primly and Freckle grinned widely at her quaint, old-fashioned ways. "I'm so sorry to trouble you with a call, but I'm moving to Miss Bryan's house and I was afraid the Independent Club wouldn't give you the message."

"My dear," Curt assured her hastily, "hearing your sweet voice starts my day off with sunshine. Shall we dine—say about 7? I'll call for you around that time."

When she hung up, Freckle sat down beside her on a chair.

"Dinner tonight! Say, Belle of the South, you've struck oil. And believe me, if you play Curt Little right, you'll be the Belle of Hollywood."

"You look like a bride," Freckle told her that night. "Pink and white, and was a vision in snow white. "And maybe you still marry Curt. He's an ace promoter and settle down to live on cake and canary seed. You poor little wretch!"

"Take your temperature!" Mary came back saucily and added a little more rouge to her ruby mouth. The gown was another one Mary Shau made herself. A high-waisted semi-crushed affair, with a gold basque and long skirt. It was white organdie and Mary had sewed here and there a large white taffeta rose that she had cut out herself. It was simple—and fascinating. So much so though it had been bought at the most expensive shop.

Her hat was white, and round the crown she had draped small white flowers of the same cut. Mary's only jewels were a string of imitation pearls, which looked real. The white made her black hair shine like ebony—and just a little of it was permitted to show, straight and like a jet frame around her ivory face.

When Curt Little saw her, smiling up at him from the doorway, excitement dancing in her gray eyes, she was a vision of girlish innocence and heart-breaking charm. For a moment the breath left his body and run. He despised himself.

But again memories surged over him—and the good in him died. He took her hand with a fatherly gesture and led her to his car.

CHAPTER THREE

Curt Little had dispensed with his chauffeur for the evening and was driving himself. Mary stepped into the low foreign-built car with the air of a little girl going to her first party.

Her breath caught on a thrilled little sigh and Curt smiled down at her.

"How would you like to go to the Cinema Club and dine and dance and meet a whole group of movie stars?"

She clapped her hands.

"Oh—I'd love it."

There, now quickly away, Freckle watched from the window, jealousy gnawing at her and making her feel unlucky and abused. Then she laughed at herself for being so silly. She had given the wise in hooking up with a girl like Mary. With her endless and Mary's beauty—they should go far in feathering a nest for themselves in Hollywood.

The telephone rang and aroused her from her reverie. She was amazed when a purring Southern voice drawled in a deep baritone at the other end of the wire.

"Is Miss Mary Mansfield Sawyer in, please sir?"

"I'm sorry," Freckle said sedately. "She is out for the evening. She went out on a party with about five minutes ago. Is there any message?"

There was surprise in the man's voice when he replied.

"Out—on a party? Well—when do you expect her in?"

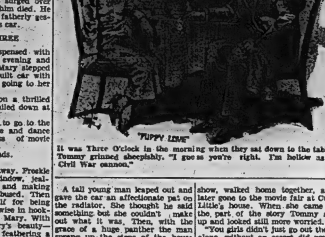
"I've no idea—probably very late. Who is this, please?"

The voice was worried, and his answer was somewhat of a shock to Freckle.

"This is Miss Sawyer's fiance. Tom Smith speaking. I just got in from Virginia and I'm right anxious to see her."

So that's Freckle was non-plussed. That was nrks. Her mind worked fast. Then she smiled.

"Do come over and wait for her, Mr. Tom Smith."



"So—Mary was engaged!"

Freckle was certain Mary didn't know her boy friend from Virginia was in Hollywood. Darn! Suppose she have to get those ideas of young romance underneath the bed—and stay there. Curt Little, just when he seemed to be so interested in her! And gaze up the chalice to get her hands on all those millions!

All these ideas ran through Freckle's head with lightning rapidity when she heard Tom Smith's lazy baritone at the other end of the wire. Well, at least she could get him over and take a good look at him and find out what she could before Mary got back.

She dashed into the bedroom and powdered her nose and stuffed her red hair excitedly. It was sort of hurtling—waiting a fiance down up and announce himself so unceremoniously. She hastily bent, close-mouthed about him.

Just as Freckle sat by the window, hoping to see Mr. Smith arrive in a limousine with chauffeur in livery, the street was smitten with a terrific noise. She craned her neck and leaned out the window expecting to see at least, a moving truck. But it was only an old car and as she gasped when it came to a halt with a terrific roar, and puff of smoke right in front of her apartment.

PUPPY LOVE

It was Three O'clock in the morning when they sat down to the table. Tommy Smith was sheepishly. "I goe so you're right. I'm hollow as a Civil War cannon.

A tall young man leaped out and gave the car a fond, affectionate pat on the radiator. She thought he said something but she couldn't make out what it was. Then, with the grace of a huge panther the man sprang up the steps of the house and she heard her doorbell clang.

Freckle jumped. That must be Mr. Smith! With a wide grin she went to open it.

"Don't you want to tie your flaming steed around in back? He looks dangerous to me."

Tommy looked surprised when he saw the flaming haired Freckle in wide beach pajamas grinning at him. Then he chuckled.

"No ma'am. She's quite harmless. I just bounced her a lump of sugar and she'd stand still and eat it and boppin' around while I was out dancin'."

"Come right in," Freckle said coyly, "and be introduced to all the folks. Did you drive 'way out here in that?"

"All the way out here in —that," Tommy grinned good naturedly. "Ha, I think the old gal thought I roughed her lass dyin' gasp right in front of your door. I ought to give her a right touchin' funeral with flowers and a little amin', don't you think? It's almost human how that old bus knew I was breakin' my neck to get to California.

Freckle wiped her eyes.

"You're an adventurer. Do something! Alone and dying in the caress of Hollywood. Poor old Bell!"

Tommy laughed. Then he sobered and seemed to slump in his chair. The light caught his hair and Freckle was fascinated with the gold lights that danced in it. Blond as a Nordic. She saw then that his eyes were dark brown. Now wonder you just know that a man would have that glorious combination of hair and eyes when a girl could win kingdoms with it!

He was so big he seemed to fill the room. His gray tweed suit fitted him with a careless abandon. Mr. Smith Freckle summed him up in her mind, was all a co-eds dream of a football hero could possibly be. If he went into pictures he would soon be the national menace.

Freckle knew she was sitting there worrying about Mary. So finally she broke the silence.

"I suppose you wonder how Mary happened to change her address from the Independent Club. And I haven't even told you who I am."

"Sure enough—we haven't been properly introduced." Tommy tried to sound flippant. But Freckle could see worry in the firm set of his handsome face.

Then Freckle told him the story from beginning to end. How she and Mary had met at the fashion show, walked home together, and later gone to the movie fair at Curt Little's house. When she came to the end of the story Tommy sat up and up and looked still more perplexed.

"You girls didn't just go out there and introduce yourself, I make out what it was. Then, with the grace of a huge panther the man sprang up the steps of the house and she heard her doorbell clang.

"Sure," Freckle laughed at the worry in his voice, "all the girls know around there. Curt, you know, don't have to have a man tagging after you everywhere you go."

"Mary not used to being with strangers and runnin' out nights like that."

Mary was white with rage. She slammed her foot wildly.

"Curt Little is a scoundrel! You're not my boss, I'll put all the powder puffs I own on it! I said, Mr. Smith, not all painted up—you—liar! You're a—a—" Mary was wind. "You have got an evil mind—"

Freckle was delighted, with the riot. Her plan was working. Time to intervene. They'd be raising their voices in a moment. Mary would soon if she knew anything about Tommy Smith. Poor old Bell! Seemingly and went over to Mary.

"Now honey, this is no way to when Mary's fiance, Tommy for so long. Kiss and make up."

Mary turned and Freckle though she was going to cry. But she didn't. Instead she glanced at the floor, then looked at Tommy Smith under her long lashes, letting in his brown eyes. His unruly tousled yellow hair stood up tousled as a little boy's and his mouth is miserably.

Mary turned. Miss Bryan. It's no use trying to fix Mary to see reason with Tommy. A bite she world could not budge her.

"Now—" he began apologetically. "I'm not casing any aspersions on you, Miss Bryan. Mary is old enough to know better, I mean—just a silly kid and I suppose she's blinded with the glitter of the gay life out here."

"Yes, Deacon Smith," Freckle said sweetly and grinned to take away the sting.

Tommy flushed and squirmed uncomfortably.

"Go on! I know I sound as though I ought to be over my head after all, she is going to be my wife."

"Don't send me," Freckle said with a touch of compuction at Tommy's grief. "I'm going home to my Willie to be running around with millionairesses at all hours of the morning."

"Who is Willie?" Tommy asked to make conversation.

"Willie is the only man who has ever asked me to marry him," Freckle confessed unashamedly, "and he is the handsomest plumbly in Brooklyn. I always kid myself or so off when I tell anyone about my Willie."

She rolled her eyes and sighed romantically. Tommy managed a good laugh. When conversation got so low in tone that there was only no chance to make him do any more talking or listening, Freckle jumped up.

"I'm starved. Let's fix something to eat, honey. Mary, I'll bet you're hungry, I'll cook some bacon and eggs."

"I couldn't eat a bite, Tommy shook his head despondently.

"Poor!" Freckle said airily, "I've seen men with broken hearts nixed up with a plate of beans and ham before."

She went into the kitchenette and Tommy sat with his head in his hands until the delicious odor of bacon and eggs assailed his nostrils. Then he knew he was hungry enough to eat under any circumstances. He had forgotten that he hadn't had a bite since breakfast.

Freckle set the gate-legged table tempting and Tommy fell to. Hungrily set she had. A gay yellow affair with napkins to match. She even set a tube of golden rod in water in it in the centre.

It was three o'clock in the morning when they sat down to the table, Tommy grinned sheepishly.

"I guess you're right. I'm hollow as a Civil War cannon.

That was the way Mary saw them —sitting tete-a-tete over the bacon and eggs when she had happily through the door.

Freckle watched the changing expressions chasing themselves over Mary's flushed face. Unbelievable—joy — annoyance Tommy leaped from his chair. Mary swung, too surprised to speak.

the doorway. But it was she who found her voice first.

"Why Tommy Smith. What—what in the world made you come following me this way out here to California?"

CHAPTER FOUR

Tommy ashed to take Mary in his arms. She backed and hurt at the scold in her voice when she asked him why he had followed her all the way to California, he put his hands deep into his pockets and stood glowering at her to hide his disappointment.

Freckle, speechless with thrill at the unexpected drama, sat in her chair and watched the two people like a cat eyeing a bowl of cream. She loved it.

Tommy's chin hardened before he affirmed Mary.

"I came out here because I thought you might kind o' need someone from home to look after you. And it looks as though I was right. You're surrounded by wolves around with old millionaires old enough to be your father!"

The color flamed in Mary's cheeks and she threw her head back and glared at him through gray eyes that suddenly snapped with anger until they were black.

"And what business is it of yours? I'm not married to you, Mr. Smith! Besides, I'm not a child. I'm a grown man. He's the handsomest man I've ever seen—and he's a gentleman, seriously, "the kindest —and the most perfect gentleman."

Tommy winced and turned pale. Then his color was in great eyes. For the first time in his life he knew what it was to be in a jealous rage. Mary had left hurt and insulted —like a small boy who has planned to surprise his mother with a present and seen it fall flat. He sat down in a chair and glowered.

"Well! So that's the thanks I get for all my trouble. Startin' out from Virginia and all that I'm going to New York, and travelin' cross country and all that I did it—nursin' it along trying to make it in the old bus. Fine!"

"And what does it get me? I come and you've only been here a month and you've already got admirers around with an old rich man. All Christmas tree! Where've you been all this time?"

Mary was white with rage. She stamped her foot wildly.

"Curt Little is a gentleman! You're not my boss, I'll put all the powder puffs I own on it! I said, Mr. Smith, not all painted up—you—liar! You're a—a—" Mary was wind. "You have got an evil mind—"

PUPPY LOVE

Curt Little heard himself saying to a little girl who looked at him wistfully, "We must see lots of each other while you are in Hollywood, little one."

Tommy so.

Mary was toying desperately to stare the car. She stood for several minutes watching him fuss with it. Such a familiar sight! How many nights had she watched from her own bedroom at home after saying good night to him on the porch—thinking the old car would never breathe again. Even in her misery and anger she could not suppress a little smile all to herself when Tommy got out and went around front to crank it.

He worked and worked feverishly —and suddenly with an asthmatic cough the old crock began to purr. It was something so homely and familiar in the gasping of Tommy's engine that Mary could stand it no longer. To hide her feelings she turned the window and banged it down until it must have awakened the neighborhood.

Then Freckle was amazed when she clenched her fists.

The old car! The nasty old, broken down, hateful thing! Wish it were dead!

It was so funny that Freckle had no control over her emotions. She laughed ringingly. But she was not prepared for what happened next. Mary put her face down into her arms and broke into heart-broken sobs.

The whole squabble seemed like a kid fight to Freckle. After all she was 22 and had been brought up much more sophisticated atmosphere than Tommy and Mary. Mary was a child and Tommy was not much more than a year older. Mary and Tommy had been brought Freckle scarcely knew how to handle the situation. She put her arm and sat down on the couch and put her hand on Mary's head. Tommy looked at her miserably, sat and brushed the hair from her face tenderly.

"Hey, listen," she said with a forced grin, "by-your eyes, dear! You're soaking up the couch. Go out and weep over the rain barrel and get it over with."

Mary was ashamed of herself, it seemed her that she could cry. Tears were by no means easy for her. She was always too stubborn to show her feelings. With grim determination she forced a smile through the tears.

"I'm sorry," she wiped her eyes. "I—I don't know what's come over my trip. I haven't had enough sleep. Going two nights in succession —after a whole week on the train."

"Of course," Freckle flibbed politely, "I was such a nervous wreck by the time we got to Chicago from Brooklyn that if you poked me I'd go off like a grenade and be poured."

Mary forced a weak little smile.

"Gosh—I feel better, I guess I needed that weep."

"You needed a week of sleep." Freckle went into the bathroom and wet Mary's washcloth and brought it cot to her. "Here, cool your face. Then feel fresh as a new bucket of shellac after this."

"You're sweet," Mary said gratefully and let Freckle wipe her face with the cold water.

"Let's go to bed." Freckle yawned sleepily. "Do you know it's four o'clock?"

"O—o—I had no idea it was so late."

"It was plenty late all right." Freckle dusted Mary's powder slippers. "Don't you get sick of high-heeled shoes after you've had em on so long?"

"They feel like stilts." Mary sat down on her bed and slipped into the slippers gratefully. "We danced hours and hours at the Cinema Club, Mr. Little is a marvelous dancer, and he doesn't seem a bit like an old man."

"Old!" Freckle laughed. "Why he isn't a day over forty, I'm sure. Besides, no man who has a million dollars ever gets old—the girls in Hollywood like to prance around with the old wrecks even if they have to pick them up and carry them under one arm."

"Well—I wouldn't be seen with'a really old man!" Mary declared earnestly "if he had Rockerbilt's billions, Mr. Little would be nice to go places with if he didn't have a taxi fare. He really is an awfully nice man. He treats me just like he would his own sister. We're going out again tonight."

"Good!" Freckle laughed. "Why he isn't a day over forty, I'm sure. Besides, no man who has a million dollars ever gets old—the girls in Hollywood like to prance around with the old wrecks even if they have to pick them up and carry them under one arm."

"Good!" Freckle laughed. "Why he isn't a bad old scout after all. He's a good friends of yours—trying to get next to him."

Bell be a lot more valuable to you than a young boy like Tommy. After all, a girl does have to look out for her future. I don't mean be a gold digger. Just be smart."

Mary said nothing, but looked thoughtful. Freckle continued judiciously:

"Say Belle of the South, you've struck oil. And believe me, if you play Curt Little right, you'll be the Belle of Hollywood."

"You look like a bride," Freckle told her that night. "Pink and white, and was a vision in snow white. "And maybe you still marry Curt. He's an ace promoter and settle down to live on cake and canary seed. You poor little wretch!"

"Take your temperature!" Mary came back saucily and added a little more rouge to her ruby mouth. The gown was another one Mary hau made herself. A high-waisted semi-crushed affair, with a gold basque and long skirt. It was white organdie and Mary had sewed here and there a large white taffeta rose that she had cut out herself. It was simple—and fascinating. So much so though it had been bought at the most expensive shop.

Her hat was white, and round the crown she had draped small white flowers of the same cut. Mary's only jewels were a string of imitation pearls, which looked real. The white made her black hair shine like ebony—and just a little of it was permitted to show, straight and like a jet frame around her ivory

Curt Little heard himself saying to a little girl who looked at him wistfully, "We must see lots of each other while you are in Hollywood, little one."

BRITISH NATIONS STAND BY OTTAWA PACTS

Ottawa Pacts Beneficial Affirm British Nations Persisting in Policy

Full Effects Not Yet Felt Says Statement To World Parley

RISE IN PRICES

Consultation in Monetary And Economic Policy Agreed on

New York, July 29 (CP) — The New York Times publishes today the text of the declaration issued on Thursday by delegates of the British Commonwealth of Nations to the World Economic Conference. It follows in part:

"Now that the world economic and monetary conference had adjourned, the undersigned delegations of the British commonwealth consider it appropriate to put on record their views on some of the more important matters of financial and monetary policy raised but not decided at the conference.

Conviction Re-Affirmed.

"The undersigned delegations are satisfied the Ottawa agreements have already had a beneficial effect on many branches of inter-Imperial trade and that this process is likely to continue as the purchasing power of the various countries concerned increases. While these have not been sufficient time to give full effect to the various agreements made, they are convinced the general principles agreed upon are sound.

"The undersigned delegations reaffirm their conviction that the lowering or the removal of barriers between countries of the empire, provided for in the Ottawa agreements, will not only facilitate the flow of goods between them but stimulate and increase the trade of the world.

Principles Involved.

"The delegations now desire to draw attention to the principles of monetary and financial policy which emerged from the work of both the Ottawa and world conferences and which are of utmost importance for the countries within the British Commonwealth. The following paragraphs embody their views regarding principles of policy which they consider desirable for their countries:

"At Ottawa the governments represented declared their view that a rise throughout the world in the general level of wholesale prices was in the highest degree desirable and stated that every endeavor to cooperate with other nations in any practicable measures for raising the wholesale level. They agreed that a rise in prices could not be effected by monetary action alone, and that various other factors which combined about the present depression must also be modified or removed before a remedy is assured.

International Action.

"It was indicated that international action would be needed to remove the various non-monetary factors which were responsible for low prices.

"In the monetary sphere the primary line of action toward a rise of prices was stated to be the creation of conditions, within the limits of sound finance, of such conditions as would assist the revival of enterprise and trade, including low rates of interest and an abundance of short term money.

"Inflationary creation of additional means of payment to finance pub-

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Shared, Pa., July 29—(AP)—Using the same cleat and the same ball, Tony Harmon in the last three days had made two holes-in-one on the same hole, No. 2 hole at the Yankee Run course.

Philadelphia, July 29—(CP)—If Hilda and Eleanor Heitmansperger, of Riverton, N.J., reach the finish in a four-thousand bathing bee by contact it is going to be hard for judges. The 16-year-old entrants are identical twins.

San Francisco, July 29—(CP)—"Take," said George C. W. Egan, Neh., on hearing of the rabbit which escaped a pursuing dog near Greeley, Neb., by jumping on the running board of a passing automobile.

Egan declared two jackrabbits recently hopped onto the running board of his car in northern California and without any apparent purpose than just to go for a ride. They rode several miles anyway.

DROPS "$25,000,000"

EDWARD A. CRAWFORD

This is Edward A. (Doc) Crawford of New York, "mystery man" of the grain trading pits, who has been suspended for insolvency by the Chicago board of trade. Less than two weeks ago Crawford boasted paper profits, estimated at $25,000,000. For one day he was complete master of the grain market.

lic expenditure was reprecated and an orderly monetary policy was demanded, with safeguards to limit the scope of violent speculative movements of commodities and securities.

"Then the policy of the British commonwealth has been directed to raising the level of prices. The undersigned delegations note with satisfaction that this policy has been attended with an encouraging measure of success.

Effect of U. S. Policy.

"In the last few months the persistent adherence of the United Kingdom to the policy of cheap and plentiful money had been checked for the time being by the change of policy of the United States and by the halt in the fall of gold prices.

"Taking the whole period from June 30, 1932, but before the assembly of the Ottawa conference, a rise in sterling wholesale prices has taken place of 13 per cent, according to the economist index figures.

"The undersigned delegations are of the opinion that the views they expressed at Ottawa regarding the necessity of a rise in the price level still hold good and that it is of the greatest importance that this rise, which has been checked continue. Regarding the ultimate level of be aimed at, they do not consider it practicable to state this in precise terms.

Policy Persisted In.

"They therefore consider that the governments of the British commonwealth should persist by all the means in their power, whether monetary or economic, within the limits of sound finance, in the policies of furthering the level of prices until there is evidence that substantial stability has established, and that, thereupon, they should take whatever measures are required to stabilize the position thus attained.

"With reference to the proposal which has been made from time to time for expansion of government expenditure of capital works the British commonwealth delegations are of opinion that such a policy must be dealt with by each government in the light of its own experience and its own conditions.

"The Ottawa conference declared that the ultimate aim of monetary policy must be the restoration of a satisfactory international monetary standard, having in mind not merely stable exchange rates between all countries but the efficient management of the international standard in such manner as to secure the smooth and efficient working of international exchanges.

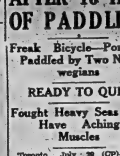
River is Called Good as 'Ole Swimmin' Hole' by Health Officer

"As long as the youngsters keep away from the lower end of the river, and the marshy spots on the west side, where a certain amount of sewage is bound to collect, and swim and bathe well above the bridge where sewage does not pollute the water, there is little danger connected with using the river as a swimming hole," stated Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, today.

One case of typhoid fever in the city at present could not be traced to the water in the river," he said, "consequently that one case the city has a clean bill or health. The fever may have been contracted in any one of a number of ways. We haven't found out just where it may have been contracted yet.



Bathing beaches in the Bay of Quinte, and even the water at the end of Victoria Park, where scores of swimmers gather daily, were all given a clean bill of health by Dr. Cronk.

CROSS LAKE AFTER 16 HRS OF PADDLING

Freak Bicycle—Pontoon Paddled by Two Norwegians

READY TO QUIT

Fought Heavy Seas And Have Aching Muscles

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Their faces burned by the wind and the muscles of their legs aching from 16 hours continuous paddling, Harry Holm and Henning Krogh, two intrepid young Danes, rested at the Toronto Island today following the conclusion of their freak bicycle pontoon craft.

Yesterday morning the two 26-year-old friends set out from Port Dalhousie equipped with only a few sandwiches and a small compass until late in the afternoon they made good progress with their novel conveyance, a two-pontoon affair propelled by a small paddle turned by bicycle gears.

Heavy seas arose in the evening however, and progress was slow and tedious, six-foot waves battled them and for three hours they struggled desperately without approaching any nearer their destination. Darkness fell and the pair had many misgivings, but ultimately the same waves that threatened many times to upset them finally threw their craft up on a deserted beach on the Toronto Island at midnight where they were taken in charge by island residents.

"I was ready to give up," declared Holm, constructor of the craft, when spoken to early this morning.

"Those waves were terrible. We were burned by the wind and sun and we forgot water. Yes, all we had to eat was a few sandwiches each. We could have eaten 16. We had to drink water from the lake. Sometimes we drank it when we didn't want it."

Shortly after they started out they were blown back and landed on the American side of the lake. At first they thought they were on Toronto but when they learned otherwise they pushed off once more.

DRIVES HIS FIERY CAR TO FIRE HALL

Taxi-Man Thinks He Makes Better Time Than by Calling

Chatham, Ont., July 29 (CP) Deciding it would be as quick to take his fire car to the scene as to wait to summon the brigade, W. Ryan, local taxi driver, jumped into his vehicle and made for the hall when he saw smoke issuing from the roof.

He arrived at the fire station just as the blaze and smoke was becoming increasingly heavier. A fire extinguisher was brought into play and the fire was extinguished. It was thought that some passer-by threw a lighted cigarette behind the window causing the blaze.

Perry, Ia., July 29 (AP)—Marvin Perry, gang leader, alleged leader of the "Bloody Barrow" gang of Texas desperadoes, died in a hospital here early today of wounds suffered in two gun fight battles, one a jail break, the last near Dexter, Ia., Monday.

The cause of death was infection in a head wound. Barrow lapsed into a coma early Thursday and did not regain consciousness.

Police are seeking other members of the gang.

QUEEN MARY SHORTENS HER DRESS

There were whisperings in English society when Queen Mary appeared at a garden party at Buckingham Palace, July 20, in a dress that stopped seven inches short of the ground. The innovation caused quite a feminine flutter, as most ladies present were attired that swept the grass. Her Majesty is shown in CENTRE, with parasol, at the function, talking with one of her guests. Three of her sons are at the extreme right, front. They are, from LEFT to RIGHT: Prince George, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Gloucester.

"Hard Bargain" Driven by Ontario in Respect to Hydro Says McCrea

Resents Attack on Premier For Holding O. P. S. Bonds

WILL CARRY COST

Reads Commission Report in Reply to Slaght Charges

Toronto, July 29—Smashing back at Hepburn-Slaght charges that Premier Hepburn had done nothing but a "swindle" and "colossal blunder," Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, Thursday night declared that in this transaction Premier Henry had driven such "a hard bargain" that instead of having to face annual carrying charges of some $230,000 for the 100,000 horsepower which Hydro originally contracted to take from the canyon development, the province now will pay yearly approximately $610,000.

He stated that Ontario will have an additional 175,000 horsepower for future power demands, and, furthermore, secures full rights of ownership to the northern project.

Some Backlog

Addressing a large audience in Shea's Hippodrome, Mr. McCrea was not allowed entirely smooth sailing, being subjected to some heckling when the Ahlfith bond deal was broached. The Minister of Mines weathered interruptions as they came without undue difficulty.

All that was required to place the province in the position of being able to meet the carrying charges on the development, out of its own energy, stated the mines minister, was the negotiation of contracts for the 20,000 horsepower Nipissing power. And these, he assured the audience, would soon be forthcoming.

FORD CO. HAS NOT SIGNED

Henry Ford, Hon. President of National Recovery Bd. in Dearborn

DETROIT, July 29—(AP)— The Ford Motor Co., has not yet signed the recovery code of the Automobile Industry, pending a further study of the code, but Henry Ford himself has consented to serve as honorary president of the National Recovery Committee in his home city, Dearborn.

This was accepted today as inspiration of the Ford attitude toward the N.R.A. programme and bore out the statement of General Hugh S. Johnson, National Administrator, that Henry Ford "has given his personal assurance of support."

PRUNE JUICE IN PEN PLOT

Warden Does Not Think Prisoners Kept it Hidden

Kingston, Ont., July 29 (CP)— Warden W. B. Meglaughlin today told the Canadian Press Kingston penitentiary was quiet despite allegations at yesterday's trial of convict Michael MacDonald that there was a plot to poison the guards.

The warden said "two or three fellows" during the past few days had attempted to make "home brew" from prune juice, an occurrence he described as minor. The prune juice, he added, had been found and seized. The guards before it had fermented, but he admitted "one or two" convicts "might have got the cold shot."

Guards watch constantly to prevent theft of prunes from dining halls, Col. Meglaughlin said, and sometimes find the convicts have taken them to their cells.

The warden denied with emphasis that "home brew" drinking had precipitated a fight between convicts a few days ago in which a prisoner named Powell was hurt.

That, he said, was "absolutely" a personal quarrel. Powell was rescued by guards after several other convicts attacked him.

Col. Meglaughlin said fights among prisoners were not uncommon and could not be prevented always.

ROOSEVELT PLANS TRADE WITH SOUTH

Secretary of State Hull is Likely to go to S. America

NEW MOLEY POST?

President's Advisor's Views in Conflict With Hull's

Washington, July 29—(AP)— President Roosevelt is considering sending Secretary of State Cordell Hull, to South America to cultivate relations with southern republics particularly in the commercial field.

The occasion would be the seventh pan-American conference in Montevideo, Uruguay, in December.

This is a matter the President is to take up with the Secretary when he arrives next week from the World Economic Conference in London.

Another thing which may come up is the status of Raymond Moley, and assistant secretary of state and advisor to the President.

Reports that Assistant Secretary Moley may be shifted to a new post. His views on economic questions have often clashed with those of Secretary Hull, his nominal chief, and Dept. chief at the London.

It was Moley who recommended approval of the St. Lawrence deep waterway which President Roosevelt later turned down.

PARENTS GIVEN ONE YEAR FOR CRUELTY

Hull, Que., July 29.—(CP)— Blinds covered in shame and visibly affected by the unsavoury revelation of their crime by Magistrate Gustave Lacroix Thursday, Mr. and his second wife, Yvonne Carpenay Chaput, were sentenced for one year in jail in Hull Police Court, Thursday afternoon, on charges of cruelty charges involving their two children, aged eight and nine. The case has been the talk of Hull since the details were first published. Judge Miller said in passing sentences, "I can understand the fury of the mother perhaps may not love her husband's children, but I cannot understand the attitude of a father who would allow such brutal treatment as these two children underwent."

GRAIN LOWER AT WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, July 29—(CP)— End of the week profit taking orders added proved a damper on the Winnipeg grain markets today and a half-way through the short session prices had slumped 1 to 1 1-4 cents. Winnipeg was the only one of the North American markets operating today, the Chicago and Minneapolis boards having closed Friday in observance of Labor Day.

July future held at 90 1-4; October 76 1-4; December at 84 3-4; and May at 87 1-4 cents at the close. Opening prices were fairly steady with the market showing a slight increase and extreme declines of 1-4 cent, but these were registered before buying entered the pit.

Reflecting weakness in North American markets, Winnipeg closed today 1 3-4d lower per 100 lbs.

TWO RESCUED IN SQUALL IN RIVER

Kingston, July 29 (CP)—Edward MacKenzie and George Funnell, Jr., were rescued by the crew of the St. Lawrence in an exhausted condition today after the craft in which they had been in had been swamped near the foot of Corn Island by a violent squall.

The two men were seen by the Thousand Island boat, the yacht "Patricia" which passed near the scene and came to their rescue. Both are thoroughly recovered.

Kingston, Ont., July 29—(CP)— William George Dafoe, 33, is dead today from injuries received when one of his legs was caught in the knives of a binder on his father's farm three miles west of Roblin. He died while being taken to hospital.

Dafoe was engaged in operating a binder with his father while cutting oats on the farm at the time of the accident. William got off to oil the machine which, it is believed was in gear. The team of horses drawing the machine suddenly bolted and the youth's leg became caught in the knives.

Dr. Bird of Marlbank was called and after dressing the wounds an ambulance was called to take the injured man to the hospital at Napanee. He died before the ambulance reached Napanee.

He is survived by his widow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hart of Roblin.

TWO SHOT IN WAR OF TONGS

Trouble in New York Chinatown Breaks Out

New York, July 29 (AP)— Two Chinese were shot before dawn today and police, fearing a countrywide Tong War, poured undercover agents into Chinatown to halt hostilities.

One Chinese, cornered in a dim hallway, died with seven bullets in his body. Another, a salesman in a chop suey house by gunmen, fled with a bullet in his shoulder.

The dead man was identified as Wing Oin, member of the On Leong Tong, whose ancient rivalry with the Hip Sings has at times burst into deadly warfare.

Hing Sing, owner in Chinatown and secretary of the On Leongs, was found in Philadelphia and is hospital.

"There is trouble in Chinatown," he said solemnly. He refused to talk further.

WHEAT VALUES DRIVEN DOWN

Cooler Weather Induces Fair Sized Selling Movement

Winnipeg, July 29 (CP) — Cooler weather in the wheat areas of the Canadian West, with the exception of rain in Alberta induced a fair sized selling movement on the Winnipeg grain exchange today and values scurrying downward after a steady opening.

The market was lacking in support and prices quickly slid off to 1 cents under yesterday's close at the low points. Good support developed and the pit at the bottom levels and values came back to show losses of only 3-4 cents.

Near mid-session July future stood per at 84 3-8 and May at 87 1-4, as at 84 3-8 and May at 87 1-4. Buying was credited to a prominent local interest, while selling pressure appeared to be continued liquidation of "long" accounts.

No export business of any account was reported worked overnight.

DOG PERCHED ON TOP OF CAR LOAD

A local citizen reports the strange sight observed Friday evening. Driving slowly along the Trenton Road during the early evening in his car, he was hooked out of the way with an imperious blast on the large horn of a machine following. A flashy roadster of expensive make, and bearing New York State license plates, thundered by with throttle wide open. Piled high in the tonneau seat of the machine was an assortment of suit cases, hampers and other luggage. A trunk was on the end of the assortment. Standing over the trunk, suspended by a leather head strap and apparently holding on was the body of a small dog, swaying to and fro with the motion of the machine. Unobserved by the occupants of the car, the dog had apparently jumped or been thrown from the open seat and had attained the local man attempted to attract the driver's attention by blowing his horn, but they merely increased their speed.

Lurking typhoid germs in water that appears clear and sparkling even, may shorten a happy holiday unless simple sanitary precautions are observed.

It is doubtful however if Trotzky will ever again be a power in the Kremlin where with Lenin once he held sway over Russia's 200 millions. WHAT IS YOUR LITTLE BABY'S LIFE WORTH?

House-Fly Menace Is Emphasized By Science.

Do you know that in the past, hundreds of babies have been needlessly sacrificed every year to the ravages of the common house fly? At the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto last year, it was proved conclusively, after months of intensive research that, "summer complaint" or infant diarrhoea is directly caused by the invisible poisons carried by flies from filth, garbage, food, everything with which they come in contact. If every mother knew this, steps would be made to realize this, tragic fact such a war waged against these house flies that they would soon become curiosities. In this connection some and care is all that is required to give the protection that will save your baby's little life. Here it is:

Cleaning up all unsightly and unsanitary places around the home, keeping food covered so that flies cannot settle on it, using screens on doors and windows, and the baby. But the most efficacious method of all, outside of screens, is to kill the flies themselves and this can be safely, quickly and economically effected by the use of Wilson's Fly Pads for an hour or two daily during the season. These pads are of a paper, absolutely free from those dangerous and disgusting baits. Just as war was waged against the mosquito to prevent malaria so must war be waged against the common house fly to eliminate infant mortality from "summer complaints".

JUST A 1907 DIME FOUND IN RUINS

Hand-Hewn Timbers Resist Wreckers' Tools on Mezzanine St.

Nothing more romantic nor interesting than a lost sweetheart and worn dime, with a date of 1907, was recently found in the ruins of one of the oldest structures in the city, the building at the MacAnnany store now being torn down by Alderman C. Brickman to make way for a modern structure. The dime was discovered from the debris under the ancient floor by Charles A. Metz, city engineer. Solidly built of hand hewn timbers, the old building put up a strong defense against the wreckers' tools.

Michael Bradley to Face Murder Charge in Death of 5 Members of Family

Coroner's Jury Hold Him Criminally Responsible For Crime

DID NOT TESTIFY

Evidence of Hired Girl Much Elaborated From Last Hearing

Chatsworth, Ont., July 29 —The arrest of Michael Bradley on a charge of murder culminated last night in the investigation into the startling tragedy of one week ago today, when five people, the family of Joseph Bradley were shot to death at Lamont Corner a mile and a half from Chatsworth.

While thunder and wind rocked the little community hall yesterday afternoon, and rain beat down on the roof so heavily that the voice of the witnesses could be but dimly heard, the 5th, a Coroner's inquest found Michael Bradley guilty of murder responsible for the deaths of his father, mother, sister, brother and uncle.

The accused man, who lives a mile and a half from the scene of the shooting, his father's farm, was called as a witness, on the advice of his counsel, refused to give evidence. He will be arraigned in Owen Sound, Ont., next Wednesday. Bradley has been in the custody of police at that point for several days as a material witness.

Evidence Varies

Muriel Marchildon, 14-year-old maid in the home of Michael Bradley, told a somewhat different story last night from that at the opening of the inquest last Saturday, Friday she said that after the shots she saw Michael on the morning of the tragedy it was "shortly after 7 o'clock." And he was coming from the direction of the stables on his farm.

"He told me someone was coming across the fields," she said, "and that if they asked me if he had been out to say 'no'."

The girl also stated that she had seen a "new gun" in the possession of the accused man.

Miss Marchildon said that Bradley had changed his clothes immediately after the discussion referred to above. The man coming across the field was Travis Vallancourt, a neighbour, bringing word of the tragedy.

Bradley Affected

Bradley, who showed little indication of feeling at the time of his detention, was visibly affected by the strain of the past week, and hardly looked like the man who gave evidence at the first sitting of the inquest. He has lost pounds in weight, his eyes are redrimmed and he wore a bandage about his head.

The most important evidence today was given by J. M. Brown, provincial medico-legal expert for the Quebec Government, who told Muriel Marchildon, 14-year-old maid employed at Michael Bradley's home.

Dr. Roussel, who had examined the rifle found in the bedroom of Michael Bradley and empty shells found on the floor, declared following the shooting, declared that those shells had been fired from the rifle.

He formed this opinion, he stated, from a microscopic examination of the deeds made on the shells by the rifle firing pin. Roussel had first completed his examination of the fragments of the bullets found in the bodies, stating that the bullets were badly deformed, making examination difficult.

Describing the wounds found on the five victims, Dr. Roussel stated that death in each case was caused by the bullet wounds.

Francois Cahoon, Crown Attorney for Portage du Fort, assisted the Coroner in the examination of witnesses, and J. E. Caherd of Hull was present to watch the proceedings in the interests of Bradley.

Provincial police officers at some time while some of the witnesses were being escorted to their home in the neighborhood. A heavy cloudburst poured down on the district, while windows were blown in and the lights flickered on and off. Breathing-to fail entirely.

Muriel Marchildon, 14-year-old maid in the home of Michael Bradley was the first witness called. She testified that on the morning of the shooting she first saw Michael Bradley walking from the direction of the barns.

Travis Recovering

Travis Jackson

His knee having been punctured and drained as result of an injury, Travis Vallancourt, 19-year-old neighbor of the Bradleys, is recovering satisfactorily from a shortstop, faces possibility of remaining out of side lines for the rest of the season.

coming across the fields," she said, "and that if they asked if he had been out to say 'o'."

Then she was carrying a parcel, the witness said, but she was not asked to describe it. There had been a gun hanging behind a door in the Bradley house, the witness said, several days before the slayings. At the first hearing of the inquest last Saturday she had testified differently, saying she had not seen a gun.

"Why have you changed your story?" a juror asked her.

She was told to say there had been no gun" the witness replied. "I am telling the truth now."

"Who told you to say there was no gun?" the Coroner asked her.

"I think it was Mrs. Bradley," the witness replied. On this point of the ground the prisoner might change his mind, Crown Attorney Cahoon suggested.

Mr. Regan won his point and the Judge consented to strike Roberts's ruling out.

Roberts told the court in reply to Mr. Regan's objection that Bradley had been seen after prison officials had declared he could be a witness for the defense of Mac-Donald.

Following the Roberts sensation the session dragged through a series of questions and answers until the evening adjournment.

TELLS COURT HE'S FRAMED

Convict States He Was Beaten by Guards in Penitentiary

Kingston, July 28—A hysterical convict started Judge E. Madden's court here this afternoon by shaking his finger at Warden W. B. Magloughlin of Kingston Penitentiary and shouting: "Last night you flogged me; flogged me like a dog."

The convict, Philip Roberts, defense witness in the trial of Michael MacDonald, charged with rioting in the prison last autumn, brought the second assault of the day for court spectators.

Further James Madden remarked to Defense Counsel Frank Regan there had been trouble in the penitentiary during the past few nights. Outside court later Colonel Magloughlin denied there had been any demonstrating against authority other than an isolated incident involved hunger strike Wednesday morning. Colonel Magloughlin said his only recent disturbance had been a fight among prisoners in which Convict Powell was manhandled and hurt.

Roberts, on the stand Colonel Magloughlin denied Roberts's story that he had been flogged on a "framed" charge.

"You ordered me to receive twenty-five lashes," Roberts said, "I got thirty days for remission. You framed me. You and the penitentiary disciplined officers."

Roberts turned to the Judge and said: "Your honor, I couldn't resist. I couldn't assault 150 officers."

Mr. Justice Madden smiled. His jaw was broken. Roberts said he had not done work, but his teeth were broken.

Judge Madden sought to get to the point of Roberts's evidence concerning himself, but Mr. Regan, counsel for MacDonald, said that on the ground the prisoner might change his mind about calling Roberts as a witness, Mr. Regan won his

HARD BARGAIN DRIVEN BY ONTARIO IN RESPECT TO HYDRO SAYS McCREA

"For", he summed up "Swayze, and Shining Tree, and Three Rivers, Lake, and Kapuskasing—all these new mining areas in our great north country—to-morrow. In the future their hope for cheap power in the days that are to come."

Cheap power, Mr. McCrea asserted, was the great cry of the mineral developers. "Give them cheap power," he said, "and well about half a low development in that north of ours—a new prosperity that will provide employment for thousands of workmen who want wages' bread and butter.

A few scattered years—typical of the shifting which Mr. McCrea at intervals got from isolated sections of his audience—greeted this declaration, as the Mines Minister. But the latter went on, unfaltering, confident, as he put it, in the wisdom of the Ashfield purchase, with his apologies to other Hydro Government's purchase, ground on the short haul principle. "Let them fit through", and expectant that his conviction would be shared by the Province at large, he added, now that the facts are known.

No Payment to Contractors

Referring point-blank to a northern Ontario charge in the speech of Mr. Hepburn that the Government had failed to pay the bills of the contractors working on the canyon at Ragged Chute, Mr. McCrea made a another of the type of statements which Mr. Hepburn has been using without bothering to look into the facts. "Let me tell you right now," he said, "that the contract, "that as yet we haven't paid one dollar because of the dispute in price, and that we are negotiating with the firm to get the matter with them on behalf of the province.

One particular incident at the Hepburn-Slaght Forestry Hall Liberal friends will not soon forget said the Mines Minister was the speech of Mr. Slaght, Liberal Liberal member for Nipissing, had been in charge of Liberal affairs in provincial Liberal chieftain, and heard him condemning Conservative "folly," and infer that development in the north was at a standstill.

"I was surprised that Dr. Huntington Slaght, K.C., M.P., should have put Mr. Hepburn right," he added. "I was surprised that he should not there will never be another Porcupine or another Kirkland Lake. I was surprised that he should have told Mr. Hepburn that up to now practically all the gold mines in Ontario have been supplied by private interests with capital from the United States and coming in from Quebec. As I said before, there is always interest in these mining areas and we'll show you another Kirkland Lake and another Porcupine.

Although Mr. McCrea in his twenty-minute address dealt at length with the field of Hydro activities, in connection with the Government's accusations of Provincial Liberal leader Hepburn, he left Dr. Slaght K.C. Liberal lieutenant, it was Abitibi—judging from the attitude of the audience—looking forward to the annual picnic which the crowd had come to attend.

"Let us hear about Abitibi," cried one voice, as Mr. McCrea in the evening had risen to demand of the Liberal party why Mr. Slaght and Mr. Hepburn in the announced debate in Foresters' Hall. "What about the Abitibi?"

"I have known George Henry for many years," Mr. Hepburn replied to Mr. McCrea, when the opportunity arrived, "and I have confidence when his hands are clean. I resent the Provincial Secretary's charge to that he may have endeavored to profit personally in his holding of stock of the Abitibi Company or of the people of the province."

Mr. Hepburn rose forth from the audience

Opposed the early history of Hydro in his defence of outside power purchases, Mr. McCrea recalled that due to Liberal procrastination on the Lawrence power project, Ontario had bought power from Quebec, and his success in getting the Province's share, also had to look to Quebec, to meet way back to the Province. There was no other way out of the situation, argued the mines minister.

Kept Money in Canada.

"Mr. Hepburn has criticized us," he said, for paying for the Ontario power in American funds. Just let me remind, Mr. Hepburn that in this transaction we were the buyers, not the sellers. I ask you which individual has the money to have done. We kept the money in Canada, instead of sending it to the States, and would have been required over across the border to buy coal with the funds we had retained."

(Applause).

In 1926, and 1929, the power demands were such, declared Mr. McCrea, that the Hydro Commission had to get more power. "What do the people expect of Hydro?" he asked. "When you want more, they You expect light to come on. Don't the manufacturers, whose wheels of enterprise turn on power, expect Hydro when they want it. Hydro officials did not take time by the fore-lock, to vision the future, to make commitments for power to take care of that future.

Replying direct to Mr. Hepburn's repeated claims that by 1937 Hydro would have $15,000,000 worth of surplus power it would be unable to use, Mr. McCrea called such claims "sheer twaddle."

"The records I now give you," he said, "are beyond dispute, notwithstanding Mr. Hepburn's argument. The fact is that even over the three years of the depression, 1930-1933, Hydro has not only decreased the cost of your power, and reduced the average retail cost, but has added $16,000,000 to its fixed revenue.

"Right here and now, I would like to compare its record with the great institution over in Chicago—the institution that was determined to show Hydro a few things—the institution that supplied some of our Liberal friends with literature with which to discredit, if it could, the Hydro energetics in the eyes of Ontario. I refer to the Insulls. Look what happened to them, while Hydro was going ahead.

Referring to the original challenge of Mr. Hepburn to debate the Georgian Bay canal charter bill, Mr. McCrea quoted from five different newspaper accounts to show that the challenge was confined to the Ashfield purchase, and that when redfaced that when he and Mr. Hepburn had met together to discuss the terms of the debate, Mr. Hepburn had said that he "need down to one thing; I want to discuss all the issues of Hydro criticism."

"They knew I wouldn't be at the meeting, but Mr. Slaght had not the temerity to say that had Mr. Hepburn been on hand he would not be taking part in the program, when at the very time he rose to speak—the most extensive copies of the speech were in the newspaper offices for printing."

Hepburn Claims.

Mr. Hepburn had claimed that he had voted for the principle of Sir Adam Beck's canal charter bill, because it was the only way in which the committee to which it referred could get data; a "screen" order-in-council passed by the previous Meighen administration. That order-in-council had, contended Mr. McCrea, given Hydro its first start in regard to Ottawa River powers, and the first thing the King administration in which Mr. Hepburn subscribed, after guiding into power, had been to cancel the order, and revert to its 'old policy of favoring the private interests.

It was difficult, said Mr. McCrea to reconcile Mr. Hepburn's claim of Liberal "fairness" in regard to the legislous' bill in committee, with his support of the Sifton St. Lawrence resolution at the Liberal convention which had made Mr. Hepburn leader. Reading this resolution, clause by clause to his audience, Mr. McCrea stated that it denied the use of power to pay the canalization costs of the proposed seaway.

"I wonder," said the minister, "if Mr. Hepburn's opposition to the seaway has to do with drawback in the old trick and the old blockade. I wonder if he would not be in favor of the King government back in power at Ottawa and himself at the helm in Ontario, so that together they could put in effect the old policy, that would make Ontario light and power shoulder the increased costs that would accrue from their canalization program."

Mr. McCrea chided Mr. Nixon for being a member of an administration, whose leader, E. C. Drury, had said, "we stand in vision" in behalf the Nipigon development "another

MARINE MONSTER IS HOOKED NEAR TACOMA

Tacoma, Wash., July 29—(AP)—Two Tacoma boys have caught a marine monster, that defies classification.

The strange creature has the head and body of a reptile and the shape and fins of a fish. Powerful jaws inclose fangs about three-quarters of an inch long.

Boy about 18 inches behind the head the body is large and muscular, then tapers off rapidly into a long, slender, reptile-like tail five feet in length. A dorsal fin runs the length of this tail.

TOURIST TRADE WORTH WHILE

The tourist trade must not be forgotten even in these days when retrenchment is so much to the fore, says the Honorable Leopold Macaulay in a statement issued from the Department of Highways. With this idea in mind a new official road map has been issued.

These maps indicate what roads are paved and what roads are gravelled. They show the steamship lines and ferry routes and locate the Summer vacation districts.

A new undertaking by this Department is the publication of a comprehensive guide book. This describes in detail the various summer resort districts, the best method of reaching them and hotels and camps available. A complete schedule of summer cruises, ferries and boat trips is one of the most valuable features. In addition, fishing and camping regulations, list of golf clubs, boys' and girls' camps, customs regulations are also included.

The Minister says: "Despite the necessity for rigid economy in all Departments of the Government, it has been felt that efforts to increase tourist traffic should not be neglected and it is certain to maintain the tourist business at the highest possible level. In addition to the wide distribution of our road maps and booklets through automobile clubs, etc., in the United States and individually from the Department, we have this year opened two additional travel bureaus, at Niagara Falls, stocked with maps and all kinds of descriptive literature, covering every part of the Province.

"Ontario leads in the tourist business as well as road building. During the past couple of years this tourist business has, of course, not been quite so large as in 1929, but still amounts to a very large sum. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates that during 132 there was approximately $235,420,088.83 spent in this Province by U. S. tourists, compared with the total of $212,000,000 for the whole of Canada, Ontario, therefore, with approximately one-half of the total tourist business of the Dominion.

"It has been estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics that the motor tourists expenditures in this Province alone for the past 10 years has amounted to the large sum of $874,533,333. In the same time the total investment made in highways since 1901. From this period to date, the Ontario Government has expended $235,420,088.83 . . . Provincial funds, added to this the municipalities have raised and expended $166,485,302.02 on rural roads, making a gross expenditure of $401,905,443.87 during the past thirty-two years.

"It is to the advantage of every citizen of Ontario that this tourist business should be fostered in every possible way."

80,000 MORE AT WORK

A report from Ottawa showing nearly eighty thousand persons at work in 8,128 industries reporting than a year ago, was the most encouraging sign following upon last week's market crash. It showed that whatever may be said of share markets the conditions are improving. Whatever stock markets do the people must not be forgetful of this fact.

Markets were trying to forestal the improvement and did it so magnificently that they went far in the wrong line of discovery. With unsettled conditions in the past to think of as possible indicators it was no wonder that on a sign of weakness thousands plunged in to unload.

No one is foolish enough to say things are going back to where they were in June 1932. Recovery seems actually to be on its way and the market like other forces will feel the effects of this betterment. Individual effort and the labor of small units have wrought a great deal—what even a congress of the world could not do. Part of the market improvement great as it was up to last week was due to general improvement.

The real work of the climb upwards is ahead. No cure-all legislation can do the work which individuals, and corporations must attempt and achieve. The recovery must largely come from within and it will be a happier state which will result than if it is all the product of legislation.

These Canadian figures of actual accomplishment issued by Ottawa are encouraging because they show an actual improvement.

Incidentally the people will find the markets indicating broadly along the same line more or less faithfully.

TO MAKE LIFE FAIR

A bronze worm, slowly feeding
Upon the camphor leaf;
How strange that nature should devise
For it, with life so brief,
A garb thus exquisite in hue,
And faultless in design,
Mauve dots set here, by two and two
And there a chalky line.
Perhaps a menace and a pest,
A threat to shrub and tree,
Yet nature clothes it, like the rest,
With matchless artistry.

What is the answer? Who can say
Why, of her creatures all,
None (though it live for but a day)
Is found too mean, too small
For her to lavish beauty on
And spend her skill and care?
With joy she toils since time's firm dawn
To make life ever fair!

JIMMY AND AMY MOLLISON cracked up Sunday night in a swamp near Bridgeport, Connecticut, and their picturesque flight in a hospital and views of the wrecked plane and scene were printed in the Ontario Intelligencer Tuesday. A New York picture paper dated Monday and received in Belleville Tuesday with pictures of the flyers and the statement that they descended safely at Floyd Bennett Field, New York, Sunday night. The foreign publication was just sixty miles out in the landing, and the "safe" landing was a smashed plane and hospital treatment. Hence it is again proved that you can't believe everything you read in the papers, excepting of course this g.f.j.

FROM THE OFFICE WINDOW we can see three boys on a raft, happy, healthy, care-free lads clad only in two-piece suits bringing memories of Tom Sawyer and the pirate expedition with the grand climax in the church attic where the boys held their funeral sermon preached and declaimed for the first time what grand lads they were and how much everybody thought of them. The raft of these Belleville lads, framed in the office window, has substantial hull of heavy boards with deck awash, while orange crates furnish deck cabins, castle and poop deck, if any, and all that sort of thing don'tya know—motive power consists of sail of sorts which looks suspiciously like a couple of Dad's fine shirts which have survived their usefulness as wearing apparel—also an auxiliary inside motor geared up to as many revolutions as the crew personally is equal to. It's a grand life, drifting lazily around, between the two bridges, and the daring longer voyages, under the railway bridge and away out on the limitless expanse fringed only by the green palmed tamarack trees and white breakers of Tahiti—or is it Prince Edward? EAST AFRICA is now reported to be the cradle of the human race—so say scientists gathered at the International College of Geologists, in Washington, D.C. Hitherto scientists have differed widely as to the site of the Garden of Eden, and it is not likely they will all agree on the new location. For ourselves we always thought the Garden of Eden was fixed in the Valley of the River Euphrates—why not leave it there, so as to be sure of a fixed starting point for the well-known human race. Scientists have also differed as to the date of man's origin, dating back from a couple of million years to a recent estimate of seventy million years, and even a hint that it might possibly be two hundred million years. When these learned gentlemen cannot agree on a comparatively simple problem of mathematics how can they expect the bright boys and girls of this generation to answer correctly in the questions propounded at them by cunning school examiners?

SIMON BOLIVAR, known as the great Latin American Liberator, was honored in New York City Monday last on the 150th anniversary of his birth. Spain ruled North and Central South America with a rod of iron four centuries, what is now Venezuela, Columbia, Panama, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia. Bolivar broke the Spanish rule and it is interesting to note that he won his decisive battles with the aid of a Foreign Legon, made up of English and Irish veterans of the Napoleonic years.

TIMID WOMEN ATTRACT MEN FACT OF LIFE

Even Strong Women Prefer Stronger Men

By Leola E. Bloch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

It's timed women who attract men, not those who are virile, go-ahead and physically fearless.

The reason for this preference is not far to seek. After all, the ego of man is one of his outstanding attributes. Without it he would scarcely be expected to fight the world, as it were, and to assert his way over the heads of others. His ego compels him into the front ranks as the next fellow; just a tiny step further, and he's sure he is better. Men's relationships with women, therefore, are bound to be colored by the same self-centered attitude that he bears in his relationships in the outside world. The thing he does, when he meets a new female acquaintance, is to tell her what a great fellow he is. The woman who listens most patiently and "sense" him the greatest admiration is the one he likes best.

Men find it comparatively easy to please such women, and to "make a hit" with them. Timid women, not being themselves self-assertive, do not come into contact with the ego that man likes to parade before them.

Women, by far and large, have known this psychological fact about men for a long time. Many of them have often allowed men to think that they, themselves, were nothing. Anything but subdued.

To be considered physically interesting, everyday, capable, superior, fearless, experienced, wise and large are the words that describe a man almost lives by. It a man believes that a woman thinks that the man she is interested in is all these very wonderful and such sterling masculine virtues, he falls half in love, at least, the moment he discovers it.

A timed woman flatters a man's vanity. Knowing that he is all she is willing to be directed by him, and even more particularly, is she true if she asks him for advice on this or that without seeming to be bothering her. Always a man responds with all the earnestness and enthusiasm of which he is capable.

A man calights to command, anywhere, even from children. He did so as a boy, when he took charge of his regiment of tin soldiers or was acclaiming the leader of his "gang" in a game of "cops and robbers." It's a thrill in being an executive and boasting other men about.

Being the high type of women women, however, delights him even more, although deep down he may not even realize it as highly. And the best of it is that timed women not only do not mind being lorded over by the masculine gender; they, too, actually glory in it.

Chivalrous conduct toward women is not being displayed as much as it used to be. This undoubtedly is due to the fact that women do not as timid as they were during the generation of their grandmothers. Economic freedom, sex liberties, and political responsibilities have played important roles here. Whether women will really gain in the long run by all this change in the status is perhaps open to question.

There are exceptions to all rules, of course, and timed men are to be found. These, as might be expected, prefer women who possess traits of character opposite to their themselves, lack. Such relationships are usually not especially satisfying although many women prefer even stronger men.

DIVORCE WITH OUT CONTEST

Aimee Says She is Not Inclined to Fight Proceedings

Chicago, July 29—(AP)— Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton has indicated her husband, David Hutton, may secure a divorce in Canada.

The evangelist said as much upon reaching Chicago yesterday to visit a Century Progress.

She said she was "not inclined to fight the suit" even though she believed Hutton was accompanying a group of chorus girls because such a charge is "not a bible reason."

Mrs. McPherson expressed regret that her husband's debut before the footlights of a Hollywood theatre Thursday night was marred somewhat by a woman in the audience who tossed a few eggs at him.

"Wasn't that too bad?" she asked. "Judas Iscariot" she said, "had his chance at dinner with David Hutton had his vaudeville contract."

MUSSOLINI IS 50 YEARS OLD

Plans Day With His Family at Bathing Beach

Rome, July 29—(AP)—Premier Mussolini was up early today but gave no sign that he was proud of it.

Newspapers took their cue from past indications that Il Duce disliked having personal attentions about himself published and avoided the long articles usually written about persons who pass the half-century mark.

At Riccione, an Adriatic resort, Mussolini planned a day with his family, in which they will bathe, the main diversion, and expected a small gift from his wife, Donna Rachele, the son of his daughter Edda and Count Ciano.

The boy has recently brought from Shanghai, where the Count served as Italian consul, that a time newspapers were forbidden to speak of Mussolini as a grandfather. He does not want to give the impression he is growing older.

PROJECTED HOP IS POSTPONED

Unfavorable Conditions at Sea Holds Fleet at Shoal Harbor

Shoal Harbor, Nfld., July 29 —(CP)—Fallenly waiting for reports of good weather from the Atlantic, General Italo Balbo and his men scanned the skies today. All was in readiness for the start of the early take-off. The planes had been refuelled and the pontoons adjusted to facilitate a getaway in formation, surplus gear was stowed away and they were shipshape. And then reports of unfavorable conditions at sea began to pile up. Reluctantly decided to postpone the projected hop to Ireland via the way of Italy from Chicago.

The squadron is observing special care on this jump. It is the longest of the 11 hops they have already made in the journey and it is known that the planes have covered between Chicago and Shoal Harbor longer by 300 miles than the hop down from Iceland to Labrador. The flyers waited a week at Reykjavik before starting on the trip. They have been here only since Wednesday.

The immediate objective is Valentia, Ireland, but it was indicated last night that alternatives were also being made in Bantry Bay, in the far south of Ireland, and even at the other port. On the westward passage, the planes landed on the river at Londonderry.

GULLS' APPETITE HARD ON GRASSHOPPERS

Half Grain Crop is Saved Through Timely Visit of Birds

Grande Pre, N.S. July 29— Forty years ago a grasshopper plague visited the fertile meadows of Grande Pre. Fearing a repetition of it the early Acadian settlers tilled the soil and Evangeline walked the pastoral lane with her lover Gabrille. Last year the grasshoppers appeared in force and did much damage to the hay and started in on the grain when nature stepped in and the people of Bay of Fundy guild, which descended in hundreds and polished up the grasshoppers, thus saving half the grain crop, stated the Agricultural Department of the Canadian National Railways. Gulls and blackbirds poppers are back but so are the gulls, so that the farmers are hoping the appetites of the gulls hold out long enough to finish off the grasshoppers.

HEPBURN SAYS SEDGEWICK 'REWARDED' WITH TARIFF POST

Salary of $12,000 a Year And Contract For Ten Years

Cobalt, Ont., July 29 (CP)—Appointment of Mr. Justice George H. Sedgewick to the chairmanship of the Tariff Board was a "reward" apparently for "whitewashing" the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission was the suggestion held out today by Mitchell F. Hepburn, M.P., Liberal leader.

"Justice Sedgewick is getting his reward for whitewashing the conduct of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission by being made chairman of the Tariff Board at $12,000 a year," declared the Liberal chieftain at the conclusion of a review of Hydro activities in a speech here last night.

In addition to an increase of $3,000 in salary the appointment carried the stipulation that Mr. Justice Sedgewick was to hold the position for ten years, "so it looks as though he thought he would never be able to dismiss him," Mr. Hepburn added.

While sympathizing with the spirit that prompts the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation in their to better economic conditions, he could not support some of their more radicalistic and "extreme" planks, the speaker said in another part of his address.

But it fell behoovred, the Conservative party to watch the Atlantic, M.P. leader of the C.C.F. as "a red and white Bolshevik", declared Mr. Hepburn, for it happened the Winnipeg member was a descendant of United Empire Loyalists.

GRILLS MEET THE BEARCATS

Defeat College Hill 10-5 in Second Game of Play off

Assuming the offensive in the initial frame Orillia Garage softball team qualified to meet the Delaney Bearcats in the final series of the local men's softball league when they defeated the College Hill Cubs for the second consecutive time this week by the score of 10 to 5 at the Coleman Flats diamond last evening.

The win proved rather costly to the "mechanics" as they lost the services of Vic White, their ace hurler, who, while sliding into first base in the fifth inning fractured his left hand just below the wrist. The loss of White will be felt to a considerable degree by the "mechanics" as he has proved a tower of strength to the Orillia outfit, especially in the present play-off series. White had been hurling a southern brand of ball previous to the accident and was supplanted by Earl Clarke who finished the pastime on the hillock for the winners.

Saying it was bats in the "mechanics" literally pounded many of Tolworth's pitching shells. "Jim" Miller, to every corner of the ball lot when they collected fourteen singles and one two-base blow by Bill Clarke who incidentally led all hitters of the day with a perfect average of four hits out of four tries. While Asst Gr Barrager was the other big hitters for the winners.

Errors were few on the part of the Cubs cost them the game, when no less than four base runners were turned into outs on unsuccessful attempts to pilfer bases. Two fast double plays were consummated each club completing one. Frank Murray with a three way catch of Matthews' line drive featured the defensive play of the Cubs, while Redd and Wilk supplied the sensational plays of the winners afield. Reese was flawless.

The long distance hitters were F. Murray with two doubles, Tommy Miller with a triple and two doubles and Clarke. Miller sent six "mechanics" back to the bench via the strike-out route while White whiffed but one while Redd went entering into the strike-out columns throughout. The box scores compiled by the Cubs also entered into the scoring and mitigated any interested spectators from the Cubs. With the score standing 6 to 3 in the "mechanics" favor affected their offensive qualities by blasting out five safe blows that resulted in four runs and sure victory in the first half of the final frame.

The game was witnessed by one of the largest crowds of softball fans yet to grace a softball game this season. The absence of "squabbling" and arguing between the rival aggregations was highly appreciated. Following the game Manager Tolworth of the Grills presided around the Grills' bench congratulating the teams on their victory.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

On Monday last it seems the Napanee Oldtimers phoned the Kingston Penies an exhibition game during which the latter club came down in front by the score of 5 to 4. Following this game it was the league executive's ears that the Penies' manager turned in order to endeavor to stay this game. In the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball League constitution it distinctly says that any club affiliated with the league must receive official permission from the president or secretary to play all exhibition games and if they do not comply with this rule they are liable to suspension from the league. That's exactly what the Penies are liable to.

[illegible]

BUT, to give the Pony executive a break, we, here in Orillia Newt, Thompson communicated with them and they informed him that permission to play this game had been granted by H. K. Gibbard of Napanee, through his power as O.B.A.A. representative in this district area, do the O.B.A.A. representatives have such power over league executives? On the outside it looks as though somebody erred in the case and we for granted. Secretary Thompson will probably look into the matter and there it.

[illegible]

On August 7th the C.O.B.L. terminates the regular 1933 schedule with the league mayors scrapping for the play-offs finished August 9th. Despite the tremendous hot weather and during a lengthy play-off series the teams have agreed on another try at the five game series. Although it has not been announced officially, suggestions have been heard regarding the appointing of Verona umpires for the series. In reality this is perhaps the best thing for the league, there is a sameness of neutral umpire [illegible] when the Penies of Kingston Penies will have to have the best of the umpires as they cannot hope to procure the services of two efficient Belleville baseball men at $3 or $20 each, while the Peterboro umpires are liable to be had for $40 on the line for the two Toronto officials. Then the Penies will be expending about $70 a game more for officials than will the Penies but, as we stated before maybe all concerned will benefit.

In full force the Belleville Victorias left at noon today for Napanee where they meet the Oldtimers there for the last time in the regular schedule this year. If the Vics come down in front they cannot be seated from a playoff position, while a loss for the home team means entering for 1933.

For nearly three solid hours last evening the Hastings County league moguls held sway at the Y.M.C.A. following a period lodged by the Wellington fellow relating to player Dean Ford of the Crystales club. The Prince Edward County moguls contended that Dean was not qualified to play in Belleville under the present residence rule. Manager Art Young showed that Ford was on the "up and up" and started to complete hole the status of Bob Greer of the Wellington club.

Well to make a long story short all players were declared eligible but Wednesday's game, when the Crystales were the previously crowned league champions was thrown out and will be replayed at Wellington on Monday afternoon, which is a mistake! means that Wellington and the Crystalcs will battle it out for the league leadership at Wellington on Monday. The winner of this game will await the play-off between the loser and the third place Moira Juniors. This game will be played on the grounds of the second place club on Aug. 2nd with the league finals being played on Aug. 8th, 9th, and 8th.

Following the meeting President Bob Redner made a pleading request to the clubs to endeavor during competent umpires for the league play-offs, with a feeling that umpires can either make or break a ball game. Percy Redner is open for applications for officials and a small fee has been set aside to remunerate the officials for their endeavors.

Wally Grills' pets—surely showed the supremacy at the Coleman Flats last evening when they made it "two straight" over Charlie Tolworth's College Hill Cubs, but not before the kiddies from the north had thrown quite a scare into the ranks of the second place Grills outfit. Give the Cubs their due, they lost the game rather than anything from the aggregation won it. The Cubs had many scoring chances but failed miserably in their base running attempts.

[illegible]

The league play-offs between the Bearcats and Grills and the Grills nine is scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday nights of next week. Both games will likely be played at the Coleman Flats diamond with Jim Cox of Vic White, who fractured his hand in the first game, pressed into service to fill the gap. While has not been definitely decided upon the other big hitters for the winners.

Saying it was bats in the "mechanics" literally pounded many of Tolworth's pitching shells. FRUIT GIRLS WIN BY 11-10

Defeat Maple Leafs in Last Scheduled Game of Season

In a rather wierd game the Belleville Fruit lassies won the final game in the local girls' loop when they downed the lowly Maple Leafs by the score of 11 to 10 at the Armouries Lawn diamond last evening. The loss was the eighth straight for the Leafs and proved to be the seventh win for the gentle maidens.

Following the game the league executive announced that the play-offs in the league, between the second place South End club and the league leading Belleville Fruit team would start next Monday evening in a five game series and continuing the next Tuesday, Friday, Monday and the following Wednesday if that date was necessary.

Owing to the fact, that the Maple Leafs were minus player, Captain Helen Smith of the Fruit team was drafted to play second for the Leafs. Vera Dey started on the hilltop for the winners but gave way to Del Morgan in the fifth. Milton Mcdonald and E. Haley hurled for the losers.

Two four base clouts were registered with Doris Blaind and Pete Leavey each hitting the fly circuit. M. Kelleher with two singles and a double hit well as did D. Blaind with her homer, double and two singles. H. Smith, White, Reid and Bradley proved the best offensively for the losing team.

Spying on Sports

BY William Ritt
Central Press Canadian

THE LEAN, white-flanneled figure of Ellsworth Vines, sprawling grotesquely face down in the red dust of Roland Garros centre court, forms a dramatic and tragic period to the long story of seven years' effort by the Davis Cup tennisdom's Holy Grail.

Vines' faint— the result, said cable dispatches, of exhaustion and dizziness from an injured ankle—was a little late. American tennis declares had faintly foreseen days before when the slightly-built, young Henry Wilmer Gunny Hunter slammed, hammered and all but ploughed our Ellsworth right off the court.

Somewhere in sport history's pages you may find a more crushing, astonishing defeat of American athletic might than Eddie Arcaro's in Paris—but I doubt it. Favored as having the best chance of any American Davis cup team of the last seven years to sweep aside the European challengers and then to crush the gallant Gauls defending the International Championship, 1933 Yankee net squad has tagen a classic licking.

x x x

No wonder McGraw liked him!

x x x

FROM A nationalistic viewpoint the year has been a bad one for international tennis is the most nationalistic of sports. Australia and the California clouter is not as disturbing as the display of undeniable skill by England's big six members of the net—Fred Perry and the aforesaid Austin. Even Australia can come back—and probably never again will he be forced through such an exhausting competitive schedule as was his lot this year.

What does the fate of the English team in the challenge round against the Frenchmen worry old England is back in the tennis picture and will stay there—for some years to come. Austin and Perry present a better pair of players than the British have had since Tilden and Richards.

Add to this the equally disturbing fact that the continental nationalists look the equal of any present possible grouping of American tennis and you have all you can ask for to believe that Uncle Sam can no longer look forward to easy and intensive preliminaries, something he has enjoyed for seven years save one—1931.

FROM AN international viewpoint, the defeat of the United States entry by England, may react to a more equal struggle for the Davis cup. Even after showing in the recent matches and against Australia, the English were far better equipped for the struggle with the French than the American team could have been.

Defeat, more likely now that they face the United British, would return the French to international zone play and cause France to develop new blood.

The Australians should be strongher next year, now that Vivian McGrath has had international experience. Jack Crawford today is the equal of any player.

The United States, with its vast resources of tennis material from which to pick new men if the present crew won't do, is still very much in the international net scene.

Nast restrictions have, at least temporarily, stopped the Germans but Canada for several years has been just short of the front rank and should soon be about ready for her place in the tennis sun.

FRANK FRISCH, at last, manager of a National league team —but it isn't the team which at one time he appeared destined to lead.

Marked early in his career as managerial material when his playing days were to be over, because of his complete grasp of the game, his shrewdness and his ability to get along with other men —there was a time when Frankie Frisch was regarded as the heir apparent of the New York Giants.

Old John McGraw thought a lot of Frisch, did with good reason. Extracted from the campus of Fordham university in 1919 Frank almost overnight vindicated McGraw' judgment. The youth played any position in the infield with effortless ease and after one season as a regular, he found his batting eye.

x x x

FRISCH was McGraw's most dependable hitter in the great days of the Giants. Never spectacular, never leading the league, he clouted a steady .320 to .350 year after year, and in the field played at second or third, alternately, and sometimes at short.

Frank was an outstanding factor in the great Giant drive which swept four straight National league pennants into the Polo Grounds. And he was one of the few players who maintained his champion-ship spirit when the powerful Giant machine began to puff and wheeze and fall apart.

The Giants won the world series of 1921 and 1922. Frisch starred in those games. The Giants lost the world series of 1923 and 1924, but Frisch, no fault to Frank, in both, was brilliant in each of those two losing series.

No wonder McGraw liked him!

x x x

NEW YORKERS read with glee the morning of Dec. 30, 1926, the astounding news that the St. Louis Cardinals had traded the great Rogers Hornsby to the Giants. What a Christmas present! Rogers was the big noise of the old circuit that year.

And then—in the next paragraph of the announcement—they read that for this wonderful prize package the Giants were handing the Cards Pitcher Jimmy Ring and — and FRANK FRISCH! There wasn't any Santa Claus.

Folks had sort of taken it for granted that because of everybody's admiration for Frank, he would be with the Giants as a player until Old Man McGraw decided to call it quits and hand over the reins to Frisch. And now Frisch, unless some miracle happened, was never to be a Giant again.

x x x

IF FRANK was greatly disappointed at the change in his fortunes—he was a native New Yorker and St. Louis is 1,000 miles away from the cool breezes of the Harlem ship canal—he did not show it. He played as well as ever and became as big a hero in Missouri as he was in Manhattan.

Other sporting events I have shown, it was really a grand break for Frank. He became the spark plug of the Cards and rode with them to three pennants in their early three, and to one world title. And now he has been rewarded with the managership.

Given every chance to make good Frisch should prove a capable manager. He may not get better baseball out of the current Cards crew because Gabby Street, his predecessor, surely must have gotten the best results obtainable—being the capable man he is. But Frisch may prove a surprise next spring when he builds for better things.

Beauty . . . .

By Helen Jameson

Creaming And Bl eaching The Neck

Of the good things of the beauty feast, the face gets plenty. Cooling astringents, everday or special creams, powders that flatter, all the little side dishes that go with them. But the neck, poor thing, stares for cosmetic attention. It gets a quick lathering and is told to go about its business. Its desperation it folds into box pleats, shows up irrigating chokes, takes on a dingy surface.

Why, may we ask, do we see many a face that has gotten a color difference from the neck? Complexion powder shades lighter, texture of skin entirely different. You would think that they were worlds apart at times removed. It is only that the beauty coddling stops dramatically south of the chin, which is just where it should begin with careful oiling and quick finger frisking will build a bond of friendship between face and neck, and they'll look as if they were on speaking terms.

Another thing, the neck has a horrid way of grasping a woman by its throat. The neck many times of shows age lines before the face starts to crinkle. In the mean minded, you know it. Since women have used nourishing creams freely, taken to exercising their facial muscles by means of massage, they have stayed younger, prettier.

After the nightly scrubbing, begin the cleansing treatment at the line of the collar bone; there won't be any neck neglect then. Go down or sing up, to the chin with the knuckles. Or slap with the back of the hand that fits in better and more closely than the palm.

Start at the shoulders and beat on up to the ears. Just in front of the earlobes do some rotary motions with the finger tips. The very first tissue sinking that comes along strikes them particular points. Glimpse into your mirror. If flesh in front of the ears has taken a turn for the half thin, you can know that you're in for portrait remodelling and rejuvenation.

There's no reason why the back of the neck shouldn't get a film of cream. What goes on there, nobody bothers to find out. After the sun gymasters' rights, the skin surfaces, roughens, darkens. Doesn't look pretty.

A simple bleaching lotion is made by mixing equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide; apply with a bit of cotton pad. Let dry. After an hour get busy with the heavy massage emollient.

Those who are sagging use a tonic pack made by adding a few drops of lemon juice to the white of an egg, beaten slightly. Remove with tepid water. Then in fifteen minutes slap on an ice cold compress—a wash cloth wrung out of cold water—and leave on with a dry towel, go to bed.

The cold compress is for the purpose of stimulating circulation. It is the warm glowing reaction that does the beautifying.

And carry your head like a queen. That habit helps to firm the tissues and muscles of the neck.

Manicuring, S tep by Step

There's no use saying that the home manicure can come up to the high art of the professional operator. It can't. No amateur worker cannot attain a certain amount of polish in this matter of preparing her finger tip petals, but because the left hand is bound to be awkward. It gets all it can't give. If one were ambidextrous possessed of the faculty of using both hands equally well, one could desire the manicure from the beauty budget, do the nails in the old arm chair at home. But there are few who have clear eyes aren't up to standard and there's no opportunity to rush out for repairs. Just tell them to have the manicure kit complete know how to manipulate the implements, what cosmetics to use. So here are the skinny directions. They're not complicated or difficult.

Prominent consists of long flexible nail file that cuts quickly, an orange wood stick, needle point scissors, bevelling files of emery. A small bottle of peroxide a jar of powdered pumice stone, cuticle cream, and polish.

Begin with the filling before the hands are scrubbed. Moisture soften the nails that they cannot be filed conveniently.

File from side to centre—not too far down at the sides, else you will form painful abrasions—forming an oval outline. Run the orange-wood stick under the nail save to reveal shreds of the nail lining, remove them with the emery board.

Then is the time for the soapy manicure with the nail brush. Spend time for several minutes to soften the cuticle that it can be worked up easily. Dry.

Dip the orangewood stick in peroxide, then work the cuticle back from the nail base, working it up with the orangewood stick. Be gentle, especially when coming close to the matrix, strip off hangnails with the scissors. Do not cut the cuticle as the base of the nail. If left free, this hard substance will gradually disappear.

A simple habit which does much to keep nail cuticle in a state of good behavior, is to wipe it carefully, pushing it gently away from the nail, whenever the hands are washed. This practice gradually wears away the heavy growth.

About nail polish — well, that's your business. Miss Beauty Question. Of course, the nails should shine have luster. There are old-fashioned gals among us who still believe that the natural tint is the prettiest. But we're in the minority. The universal sisterhood is bent on having finger nails look as if they had been dipped in rose. Nothing can be done about it.

HIS FAULT CHILD IS ALOOF

(By Constance Cameron)

"Father!" snorted the lass. "I'll not their father. I'm just the guy who signs the checks. Just the fellow they remember when they want extra money for a new bauble or a new evening coat."

Remembering the man's two children, I agreed that he was right in figuring out the picture which his children saw him. But I think it was a little further than he had, and tried to discover why they had no respect for him, why, to them, he wasn't an individual, just the 'guy who signed the checks'.

That father has never seen his children except at meals, except when he was doling out money. That's a fact. When the father wanted recreation, he sought it with his men friends, or alone with his wife and other married couples. Never a moment has he given to being a pal to his own flesh. How can he expect them to think of him as such, then?

Children Worth Knowing

It shouldn't be a duty for a father to pursue some hobby with his children, or to go on family excursion, or trips with the children along once in a while. After all, they are worth knowing, and it's only when we find children or adults by merely eating and sleeping in the same house with them.

Start out of a picture do you want to inspect your child's nails? Not that father? Not that of being just a fellow who eats and sleeps in the same house with them.

The father memory can be one of great help, great inspiration, great affection, if the father will but take time to be a pal.

Remember your own father with the memory does not thoughts of good times, affection, understanding, then you, of course, don't want to be that kind of a father. If it does awaken happy memories, surely you have the intuition duplicated in the heart of your child.

Father as Pal

Some of my sweetest memories are of my father, a supremely impractical but always ready to take time to pal with a chubby small girl. He told stories about Cid the baby elephant, on a circus to get his kids into a corner alongside out into the country and stop at the pickle factory, to sit on a stone and watch men making up pretty. No one else has ever quite filled the bill. He's never left in going on.

Don't you want to leave such a memory with your child?

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Where are you going for your vacation, the question that is bound to the Fair? Wherever it may be we are sure that you'll find use for the new sweeping cut of taffeta. It has a broad shoulder and puffed sleeve that can be worn with a wrap or as a normal length. It comes in all colors.

Already the popular velvet hat is making its appearance. A wearable model is a hat of sapphire blue velvet with a close fitting crown, brim and turned up back cuff. It has white satin facing underneath.

Net remains in being one of the major fabrics this summer. One shop is showing black net dinner and evening frocks combined with panties, slips and brassiers all of black net. Lovelace neckline and ruffles mark the newest net frocks.

It may be warm but the sale barrier shops are already attending to stock for next autumn and winter model that will be popular next winter is the fur trimmed coat. Pleated shoulders to give width to the sleeves are also being made and has ties as the centre front of the capacal fur.

Another note, that of formality, is beginning to be heard. It is designed for late Summer wear, with and suggestion of the mid-Victorian modes. Thus a large brimmed hat with white straw and a wide white crate white ostrich feather fancy posed at the centre front of the crown.

Don't days in town call for navy and white. With a blue and white ensemble, one can accessorize with blue kid pumps with white pipings and a bake grosgrain bow. This type of shoe is most popular just now.

VACATIONS and HEALTH

By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES

Medical Authority and Chief Medical Director, New York Life Insurance Company

Vacation time is a period when many people whose daily work does not call for physical effort try to catch up on exercise. Some of them go about it in such a way that they do themselves more harm than good.

Choose some exercise that will keep you out in the open air and sunshine. Golf, tennis, swimming, baseball and hiking, are beneficial in moderation. Don't try to play thirty-six holes of golf or go on a ten-mile hike the first few days of your vacation.

If unaccustomed to strenuous exercise, do not begin too vigorously. Exercise should leave one refreshed, not exhausted. Persons who take little exercise during the winter, especially adults over forty, should be extremely careful to exercise only moderately.

Don't force yourself to the golf course or to the tennis court every day if you do not feel like playing it. Many of the sudden deaths of middle-aged men apparently in good health, during or immediately following a game of golf, show the danger of this. Exercise should be a recreation and a pleasure, not a duty to be performed irrespective of the condition of the body at the time. Avoid overexertion during the heat of the day.

"Early to bed and early to rise" is still good advice. Get plenty of rest, and especially on your vacation. Eat at regular hours, and preferably nine hours sleep every night.

Loveless Marriage for Sake of Another is Never Right

(By Beatrice Fairfax)

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

This is the first time ever had a question like this put to you before. But the trap in which I find myself makes me desperately unhappy. I feel I must have a little advice from you.

My brother-in-law wants to marry me. I am not in the least in love with him. On the contrary, he repels me. However, I believe his desire for social standing, and perhaps his money, blurs my judgment.

Please don't think of marrying this man, even if you feel a tender regard for him. It would be wicked. No consideration, however appealing, should influence a woman to marry a man who is repulsive to her.

A girl making the supreme sacrifice and marrying a man she did not love, would find these old yesterday's writers. Women don't do that sort of thing any more, they're utterly mercenary and marry for money. No novelist could arouse sympathy today for a woman married to a man she did not love, to save her father from dishonor, or any other similar reason. Your temptation to do this comes from your own selfishness. You want the boy of you not to yield to your own goodness of heart, or your finer instincts.

From what you tell me of your brother-in-law's second choice, that lady will be kind enough to shift the responsibility of a loveless marriage she plays contract or gazes at her self-sacrifice.

To this end, keep on the best of terms with him. But let her know you think she's flighty or disapprove of her in any way. Just tell her she's wrong not to park the baby and its more than likely she'll prefer to spend her time with you, rather than with you indefinitely. Especially if you are clever enough to keep cordial.

And now let's look at the other side. Suppose you were to marry this man. He repels you. You think his lack of consideration hastened your sister's death. That unspoken verdict would always be there between you two, preventing sympathy, understanding, affection. Your duties of him would manifest itself in innumerable ways, even if you employed all your woman's wiles to conceal your actual feeling.

It would be a marriage shorned from the beginning. It would be unfair to you, unfair to the man, unfair to the child. Because children, to develop properly, should have normal home life. Back-section, respect, consideration... A home without any sort of appreciation as you state would be a ghastly affair. And the child would suffer. Don't!

Wooing Too Humbly is no Way to Win

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For three years I've been devoted to Betty yet I don't know where I stand with her. I call on her three times a week; we see each other; the boy has the exclusive privilege of a radio from me, and I have supplied her with candy from time to time. I ask her to act the day, she always accepts and has a thrilling time. I'm twenty-eight and feel it's time for me to settle down. I have a good position and am getting ahead to provide; yet this girl is as slippery as an eel when it comes to acknowledging our engagement. I love her dearly, think I should find a girl who is less vague about her intentions.

Bert B.

Give her a brief "sales talk" when you're alone together one evening. Tell her, as you have me, that you love her, and that if she isn't willing to help you 50-50, you hope she'll be happy with someone else.

Then drop out of the picture and let her make all the overtures at reconciliation. If the inelegance of the day, I think I'd become a-cumbing."

Don't be afraid, dear man, there are people of both sexes who never realize their blessedness till they've lost their flight. They will subject a faithful pal to every species of torture and then wonder why the pal isn't a pal any more. Don't be one of them. Don't be a doormat. Don't be a fool. Don't be a quitter. Don't be a weakling. Don't be a coward. Don't be a sissy. Don't be a mollycoddle. Don't be a milksop. Don't be a namby-pamby. Don't be a pantywaist

Gold Standard

"The undersigned delegations now reaffirm their view that the utilization of monetary policy should be the restoration of a satisfactory international gold standard, under which international co-operation would be secured and maintained with a view to avoiding so far as may be found practicable undue fluctuations in the purchasing power of gold.

"The problem with which the world is faced is to promote the stability of exchange rates with a reasonable measure of stability not merely in the price level of a particular country but in world prices Effective action in this matter must largely depend on international co-operation, and to any further discussions of the world conference this subject must have special prominence.

"In the meantime the undersigned delegations recognize the importance of the stability of exchange rates between countries of the Empire in the interest of trade. This objective will constantly be kept in mind in determining their monetary policy and its achievement will be aided by pursuit of a common policy of raising price levels.

Consultation With One Another

"In the interim, imperial stability of exchange rates is facilitated by the fact that the United Kingdom's government has no commitments to the currencies comprising the future management of sterling and retains complete freedom of action in this respect.

"The undersigned delegations have agreed that they will recommend to their governments to consult with one another from time to time on their monetary and economic policy with a view of establishing their common purpose and to framing such measures as may conduce to that end.

MORE MEN GOING BACK TO WORK, more material added to the great army of buyers needed to restore prosperity to the level it should be.

RETURNING CONFIDENCE in the present and future of Canada is reflected in the steadily increasing demand for all kinds of goods, and for service. Home owners are improving their properties and giving work to painters, carpenters, plumbers, etc.

INCREASING DEMAND naturally stiffens price, and the low prices of the past few years will soon be but a memory. Fall deliveries of wholesale goods and materials will be priced considerably higher, which means that retail prices will follow suit. Just now there is an inclination among business men to turn goods and services into cash to get ready for the beginning of The New Deal in the fall with higher prices all round.

DO YOU EVER RAID THE REFRIGERATOR BEFORE GOING TO BED?—Mighty nice, isn't it, when you feel like a little something' to make you dream, to find some tempting food and a cold bottle of milk or some other drink in the refrigerator—mighty nice it certainly is and you may be thankful that you have a refrigerator to raid. Refrigerators are a great invention and especially so is the electric refrigerator—it is the acme of perfection—ABSOLUTELY—say those persons who are fortunate to have one. In Belleville and the surrounding towns a large number of electric refrigerators are now in use and many of them have been installed by Albert E. Miles, proprietor of the General Electric Shop, 192 Front Street, Belleville. Mr. Miles is the district agent for the electric refrigerator made by the General Electric Company and if you would like to inspect one at 1 act as it operates you may do so without obligation in any way at Mr. Miles' place of business.

Campbellford residents were thrilled on Wednesday when a young fawn wandered from the woods along the West River near Fred Smith's cottages, and calmly proceeded to take a drink in the running water of the river. TOOZE'S GREAT KICKING TOE SCORED SEVENTEEN-POINT WIN

Beat His Former Teammates Single-Handed by 17 to 0

WAS GOOD GOALIE

By BEN COLDBERG

Speaks to the Ontario Intelligencer Toronto, July 28—Out of the dim and distant sporting shadows comes a former outstanding Canadian figure in the person of Mark Toone.

Mark Toone.

In a period extending from the late nineties to the beginning of the war, the name of Mark Toone was synonymous with the athletic greats of that time. An athlete of all-round ability, Mark played football, baseball and hockey.

His hockey exploits have given him a place between the goal posts on many a team, which included St. George's Intermediates of O. H. A., Parkda's junior semi-finalists of O.H.A., Bramley Intermediates, Wellsley Intermediates, Excelsior, junior city champions, and Brandon.

These were some of the teams for whom he played during his amateur days until joining the professional ranks in 1907. He became a member of Toronto's first pro hockey team and guarded the nets in the first game against the Canadian Soo.

The following year he was sold to Pittsburgh, with whom he played a full season, thence going to Guelph in the old Ontario pro hockey league. In the next two successive years he played for Trenton and St. Catharines. About this time he gave up his hockey career and devoted most of his time to hockey refereeing around Kingston. Shortly after his retirement the war broke out and sporting activity was badly disorganized.

Though Mark was considered a goalie of considerable repute, perhaps his greatest athletic achievements were seen on the gridiron, where he made a name for himself as one of the most reliable kicking halfs. His football career began with the Toronto Parkdale city championships in 1901. The next year Mark joined Trenton, which probably still stands today. It was as a member of the Wellsley O.R.F.U. city champs when they went to Kingston to play Limestones for the title that he established a kicking record by booting the pigskin over touch from the sixty-yard line.

By some strange happening Mark opposed his old teammates the next year as a member of the Victorias and strangely to say he beat them single handed. He went on a kicking spree and kicked seventeen points himself to score all his team's points. A night before that game Mark was an interested spectator at the Victoria practice. The manager asked him if he was going to play tomorrow and he said that he wasn't going to be used because of his fractured arm, which he couldn't straighten out. The Victoria manager readily consented to play him and he accepted. So you can well imagine the surprised faces of his former teammates when he appeared in a Victoria uniform. The game proved an advantageous one in every way. He won the game himself and had his arm straightened in a tackle.

During Mark's day baseball was not very well organized, but he recalls having played with the late Bill Crisp around the sandlots.

When you ask Mark his opinion of modern football as compared with that of yesterday, he will tell you that the game of his day was better. "It was just as fast then as it is now as good. "Nowadays," says Mark "a player doesn't really get a chance to show his true worth because he's pulled out every five minutes. In my time players were thirty and sixty-minute men.

Mark has much the same opinion of hockey, although he admits that teams have more substitutes today because of playing facilities and training. Years ago they played seven man hockey on a smaller rink.

"I don't think present day players grow up to the class shown by men like Cyclone Taylor, Tommy Phillips, Jeremy Lalonde, Lester and Frank Patrick, Hod and Bruce Stewart, Petrie or Laviolette. Why, if those old-timers were given a rest no one would ever catch them."

The hardest things in those days were the playing conditions" recalled Mark. "I remember one game in 1898 at Richmond Hill when coal oil lamps were used to light up the rink. Another thing," he went on, "the fans took sports very seriously. In fact I was compelled to staff my cars with cotton batting. The spectators behind the goal would razz you all through the game."

In his colorful and varied career as athletics Mark recalls one incident particularly, that gives him one of his biggest thrills. While playing for Victorias against Peterboro in 1903 there arrived an occasion when Jean Hurchibles, champion wrestler of Canada at that time broke through the entire team and had but one nslp to beat for a touchdown. That man was Mark Toone. He stood back waiting, waiting, then coming down the field at full speed wondering what to do and was much lighter than the agile wrestler. There was little he could do about it now, so as the runner approached Mark threw himself in front of his man as if to tackle, but he didn't. He fell in front of him and knocked him over and thereby prevented a sure touchdown for victory. Victorias went on to win the game and it was Peterboro's first defeat on their own grounds.

Mark's recollections is the time he was standing between the nets for the Toronto pros, leaning down the ice for the puck. The oncoming player shot the puck between the defencemen and it landed on Mark's upper lip, knocking him cold.

Another incident that will probably always give Mark a thrill is the mere thought of the day he kicked seventeen points to whitewash his former teammates 17-0, of which Lou Marsh was a member.

Today Mark Toone is taking things rather easy, though he is doing a little photography business. He is still as fleet and slender as any man in his prime and could probably play a respectable day kicking the art of booting 'em. He is a keen sportsman and takes an intelligent spectator at many events.

A Big Fellow from West Coast Beefing Because Lake's Too Warm

There is in Toronto a marathon swimmer who thinks Lake Ontario is too warm.

Can you imagine that!

After all these years of listening to the marathoners complain about how chilly our beautiful lake is, it sure sounds funny.

But, funny or not, Stan Willy of Victoria, B.C., starts in his article on that he would like the water to be a lot colder when the day of the big splash and paddle derby arrives.

This big boy was battling it out with the best for 12 miles last year and with a little cooler water, mebbe he thinks he can go the route this time. He has been training out on the coast for several months in water cold enough to give an Eskimo chills, and is in the pink of condition.

Stan arrived in Toronto via the box-cars and is looking for a job so he can buy grub until the day of the race. When that date arrives, Stan thinks he will have a slice of the prize money and is already planning how to spend it.

You can't beat these marathon swimmers for confidence.

He says the jump across the continent was pretty tough. Stan made pretty fair connections and didn't lose much time getting here, but he has had enough of playing the Knight of the road role and wants to go back to the parlor car and sleeper.

A very thrifty gent this Willy fellow. He left Victoria with $5 and had $1 left when he hit town. Four dollars for a Vancouver to Toronto trip is economic travelling in any man's land.

"Big Boy" claims that he has done ten miles on several occasions this year and could have gone the C.N.E. marathon distance with little difficulty. He trained at Langford Lake and Crystal Pool out on the coast and says the water in both places is very cold.

In fact on one occasion he says he swam five miles in water at a temperature of 25 degrees. We think Willy might be related to the polar bear. It might be a good suggestion that he take along a block of ice in the race, and have his trainer go ahead and cool a path for him to be swum after.

All kidding aside, this lad looks and acts and looks like a real swimmer, and don't be surprised if he is up there fighting it out with the Cambis and Spondors at the finish.

Geologists at the Smithsonian Institute have quite a collection on specimens that look deceptively like human bones, fossil bones's nests and other things that they are not.

It has been estimated that fishing glass causes 50 per cent of injuries to persons in automobiles involved in accidents.

The ice blanketed regions of the Antarctic were at one time much warmer than now, and there was little or no ice.

NEW CANADIAN STAR

Bill Gardner, 20-year-old swimmer of the Moose Jaw Aquatic Club, established himself as one of Canada's foremost swimming stars by winning the Wrigley mile swim for men stared at Moose Jaw recently, defeating a field of eleven starters. He succeeds Percy Reynolds, club-mate, who held the trophy in 1931 and 1932. Gardner was third in the same time-trials of the old record set by Reynolds last year. Reynolds did not compete in the 1933 race.

WHEELER AND WOOLSEY AT THE CAPITOL IN "SO THIS IS AFRICA"

Deep into the animal infested jungles of the darkest of the dark belts in Africa, tread the famous comedians, Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey, in their latest film comedy, "So This Is Africa" opening today at the Capitol theatre.

Not since the days when one hundred iron-muscled Tarzans, garbed in the characteristic lion skins, give these comedians a run for their money and many ridiculous incidents as the story of "So This Is Africa" unfolds.

And not one, but one hundred beautiful stalwart and blonde Amazon women are evidence of the power of their breed and their deep and strong-feeling passionate instincts match to the embarrassment and suffering of the intrepid explorers, Wheeler and Woolsey, when they brave the terrors of the undiscovered interior of the darkest of continents.

Not a Laugh Missed

Not one stone was left unturned by Wheeler, Woolsey, Columbia or Eddie Cline, the director, to discover anything that might be concealing a laugh, or an incident that would contribute to making "So This Is Africa" the finest and most hilarious comedy that Wheeler and Woolsey have ever made.

From the small-time theatre in which Wheeler and Woolsey appear presenting a dull lion act that does because the lions need a vacation and the admiration of their African habitant, "So This Is Africa" follows the speed of imagination to a mons-bung, animal-populated jungle in Africa. Lions, tigers, gorillas, hippopotami, panthers, lemurs and hundreds of other wild animals mingle with the Amazons and the Tarzans in plaguing Wheeler and Woolsey with more trouble than Marco Polo ever had in selling ice cream in the world.

Raquel Torres Leading Woman

Raquel Torres, the dark-haired queen of the Amazons in "White Shadows of the South Seas" and "The Sea Bat" and Esther Muir, who came to Hollywood from many Broadway musical hits like "My Girl Friday" and "Queen High," are personally charged with pursuing Wheeler and Woolsey through the jungle and making their life miserable by making comedy there to the comedians.

AFRAID TO MARRY

Jeannette MacDonald, movie beauty, back from France, says epidemic of divorces in Hollywood has made her afraid to wed Robert Ritchie (inset), who is to be her fiance for three years. Ritchie is her business manager. Photo taken on her arrival in New York shows a new coiffure she is making popular.

PUPPY LOVE

by Alma Sioux Scarberry

"Tommy looks like a sweet thing, but he hasn't any money," has he?"

"No," Mary said quietly, then added swiftly, "not a nickel. His mother is a widow and she's been an invalid ever since Tommy was born. He's sold papers and shined shoes and done everything he can to help support her and himself. While he was in high school he worked in a garage."

"Poor kid" Freckie said sympathetically and switched out the light. "How long have you been engaged to him?"

"Oh—we've had sort of a puppy love engagement ever since we were in our freshman year in high school," Mary shrugged in the darkness. "But I don't suppose anything will ever come of it."

Freckie was not certain, that Mary was quite so indifferent to Tommy as she tried to sound. She lay awake thoughtfully, a long time listening to Mary sighing and turning in her bed.

CHAPTER FIVE

Freckie stayed at home the next day because she hoped to get a call from a casting office about a small bit in a picture. It had been promised to her weeks before.

She knew Mary had planned to go to a matinee. When it came lunch time and Mary made no attempt to get dressed she called to her from the bathroom where she sat on the floor cleaning a pair of white shoes.

"Mary you better get dressed or you'll be late for the show."

Mary's voice sounded tired and listless when she answered her.

"I've changed my mind. I'm not going."

Just then the telephone jingled. But before Freckie could reach over to get it, Mary had bounced in from the living room and answered it eagerly. In a moment she handed it over.

"It's for you."

It was from the casting office. Freckie was thrilled when Mr. Markowitz told her she was to sing a number in the carbaret scene of the new picture.

"I'm so glad—" Mary said in a small voice when Freckie had hung up.

Suddenly Freckie saw the light. Mary was hanging for a call from Tommy. She had thought it might be he when the phone rang. And that was why she was staying home from the matinee. Evidently Mary must care a little more for the boy from home than she would admit.

The day dragged on slowly for Mary. The phone rang several times, but the calls were always for Freckie. Every time it rang Mary jumped—and looked disappointed when she learned it was for Freckie. She was so pale when evening came that Freckie noticed she borrowed a little of her rouge to put color into her cheeks. And she colored her eyelids with a little misty grey and topped the faint black lines under her lids with a shadow. She even added a little lipstick.

Freckie marveled at the way Mary had copied the latest Paris fashions. No one would have guessed everything she wore but the shoes had her own two little hands. She must get Mary to help her fix up some of the unbecoming clothes. Then red evening gown looked as though it had possibilities.

When Mary saw Curt Little, impassioned in his adoration, her heart leaped with pride. She thought he was the handsomest man she had ever seen. And for some reason her heart went out to him in sympathy. He looked as worried when he took her hand as had her to the door.

"I've a nice quiet little place I want to take you to tonight," he said as he gave her his enigmatical, and she thought, rather sad smile.

"Maybe," Mary spooned her French fry through catsup thoughtfully. "I've never got anywhere with all my ambition, though. Freckie thinks it's a—tough racket out here to try to break into."

He reached over and patted her hand.

"Never you mind, little one. Something may happen—soon. I've a very good friend in the designing business and she may be able to do something about it. I'll speak to her and let you know."

Mary's ruby lips opened in delighted surprise. He knew then that she hadn't been angling for help from him. Again he was seized with a fit of conscience. But he downed it immediately—and forced a smile of reassurance. Mary trembled with joy and excitement. "Oh Mr. Little, you're the most mean I've ever known in my life." She looked as though she were going to lean over and kiss him with gratitude.

That was that! At least he had made the evening count—and found out something that would help her in Hollywood. Further than that he had no plans. He was saving for times. Waiting for a plan that could be the final crowning of his revenge. It might take time. But he had waited 30 years and he still had a little patience left.

"I think we had better go. I'm taking you out too late for one of your tender years."

Mary was anxious to get home—more anxious than he realized. Perhaps there would be a telephone call from Tommy.

Freckie was surprised when Mary came in at 10 o'clock. She was radiant with the news that Curt Little had promised—maybe—to help her find a job.

"This is your lucky day" Freckie grinned widely and reached into her apron pocket. "Open your hand and shut your eyes."

Mary obeyed and Freckie thrust a letter at her.

It was postmarked Hollywood. And there was no mistaking that chicken scratch. It was from Tommy.

Mary ran into the bedroom.

"I'm sure you're satisfied your hunger sufficiently to tell me why you came to Hollywood. Or is it a secret? Perhaps you have a secret passion for one of your celluloid charms?"

"Never—in a million years," Mary denied laughingly. "I'm always so interested in what that brother has on that I never notice the hero. I want to be a designer."

In a moment Mary was deeply engrossed in pouring out to Curt Little her plans for the future. He listened quietly and his mind was busy with plans, making plans. She looked across the table naively:

"Do you think my clothes look as though I made them myself?"

He was almore to his surprised exclamation.

"Why—I did." Mary nodded emphatically. "Every stitch of them even my hats. This dress cost me less than three dollars. And my hat less than a dollar."

He said it truthfully, "more attractively dressed than any woman we've met in our three evenings together in Hollywood. I thought as much from the beginning."

Mary flushed with pleasure at the thrilling compliment, coming from such a source.

"It makes me very happy to have you say I look all right," she leaned close to him, "because you really are a judge of such things. I have a dream whether I'd come up here and look like a homespun orphan or not."

THE MUNKEY AND HIS DINNERGUBBS

Act One

Scene, in the midst of the jungles.

Dinnersoria, Hay, who dropped that coconut, on my toe? Some fresh munkey, I bet.

Munkey up in tree. Excuse me, Mr. Dinnersoria, I didn't do it. Oh person, it slipped out of my hands.

Dinnersoria, O it did hah! Well if I wasn't so comfortable laying here I'd reach up there and slap you somethin' that would make you see as many stars you'd think they was playin' leap frog.

Munkey. Hani you take an apology?

Dinnersoria. I wont take anything of of you, you little shrimp.

Munkey. Shee aint everything.

You're intirely too big for your own health, if you want to know something. If lighting was to strike you now you'd probably be the first thing to get hit, and look at all the room you got for germs in and as soon as mice invest spears they'll kill you easy because you're too big to miss. Just talk about a million years and you'll see how many dinnersaurians als left outside of glass cases in museums.

Dinnersoria. Well, you're looking pritty pale.

Act Two

Scene the same a million years laier.

Head Munkey. Have you saw any dinnersaurians lately?

2nd munkey. Is that sipposs to be funny?

VISITORS' DAY AT C.G.I.T. CAMP

Madoc, July 28—Wednesday, July 26th, was visitor's day in the annals of the C.G.I.T. Camp, girls in Training camp and Camp Community, Lake of Bays, where fifty-six girls are enjoying a ten days' holiday under the capable leadership of Miss Margaret Johnson and her efficient staff, all of whom are doing their utmost to have the girls enjoy their holiday and also carry back with them fragrant memories of Moira Lake and of the friendships formed there and the things they have learned during the pleasant days of July 1933.

The staff is composed of Miss Margaret Johnson of Belleville, Madoc who is camp director; Miss E. Tett and Miss N. Hudson of Belleville are boating managers; Mrs. S. Hayton is camp mother, with Miss Joyce as assistant, and Miss H. Fowler is land sports director with Miss D. Wilson as assistant, the water sports are supervised by Miss E. Findlay and Miss M. McLean of Belleville.

The Bible Study groups are under the direction of Miss Ruby Pale of Trenton, Miss Tett of Belleville, Miss F. McPherson of Belleville, and Miss B. Fillingham of Huntingdon.

The interest groups are handled this year under the guidance of Miss Grace Kennedy of Belleville, nature study; Miss E. Tett of Belleville; music by Miss E. Reddick of Belleville; dramatics by Miss Helen Wrylock, Madoc.

Miss L. Robson of Trenton.

The camp nurse is Miss Jas. R. McIntosh of Belleville.

Visitors began to appear early in the afternoon, and water sports were soon in full swing when the following interesting schedule list was completed for:

Five girls dash—Betty Nicol, J. Crosier, Ida Stillman.

Strokes—Helen Wry-lock, Jean Crosier, Betty Nicol.

Back race—Jean Noble, Helen Wrylock, Vera Drinkwater.

Lighted canoe—Nora Henderson, Madeline Hamm, Irene Vandervater.

Steamboat race—Jean Nickle, B. Nicol, Helen Wrylock.

After a short rest, and time to dress, the land sports consisted of several stunts. Five relay races were divided into their several categories of Teams, Campers, Staff and Hunters, the results being that the Runners were first, Hunters and Tagers second and Kneetas third.

In these relay races each team is given its driving nails, bear walk, match box races and Indian walk, etc., relay. Singing games, crackers and whistle races, baby bottle, etc. Good Night Song, in which several girls won high honors, being almost in their own heights before being defeated.

Camp supper followed a short intermission, and was enjoyed by many picnic parties on the grounds as well as in the camp dining room and singing of rounds of ditties in the comfortable dining hall.

A game of volley ball and presentation of awards for proficiency and camp fire followed all too soon, and as the whistle blew for camp our small boy visitor was heard to say, "How daddy can't make mistakes and talk after the whistle blows."

Camp fire was lighted with all solemn ritual, and many camp songs were sung after which each group distinguished themselves by putting on a vital lively bit of Pirate Treasure hunt. Another group gave a very realistic play which served to show very plainly that much dramatic talent exists among those who range from thirteen to seventeen years.

The campers have rendered several beautiful selections.

The tuck-in, evening supper and camp fire was devoted to games and the exploring of the familiar haunts of the girls by parents and friends. Pictures were taken in numerous groups for future display of the entire camp and staff, a host of several other groups as of the staff the various cabins and camp groups.

Shortly after the play and some more rounds of singing came "Good-bye" and "Good-night" were sung and the Friendship circle was formed, with its "All is well."

Much appreciation was expressed when the camp director announced that cabin parties would be allowed for this one night, and morning call would be sounded at 7.30 to allow permit of longer rest to follow the strenuous day.

The next weekly Invitation will be on the lawn bowling green, when a keen competition of many of the players. The winners of the prize will be announced by Mrs. Dupont and Mr. Chas. Clasmont.

GRAIN PRICE DECLINE BLAMED ON STATEMENT

Farmers' Union Official Says Six Hundred Millions Dollars Lost to Farmers

Release of Agricultural Secretary's Message Precedes Drop

COST OF FARMING

Recent Market Trend Blamed on Gov't. Report

Kankakee, Ill., July 31 (AP)—E. R. Kennedy, Secretary of the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America, today made public an open letter addressed to United States Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace in which Kennedy charges recent market declines in grains were a result of a statement issued by Wallace's department.

Kennedy referred to a release issued by the Federal Department of Agriculture on July 12 in which it was said that the cost of farm production in Iowa and Illinois is 34 cents a bushel for corn, 20 cents a bushel for oats and 86 cents a bushel for wheat.

The government statement, Kennedy declared "farmers are now receiving more than the most of farm production for both corn and oats."

"Immediately following within a few days of the release," Kennedy's letter said, "the grain markets of the country went crashing down so sharply that they were ordered closed. The actual shrinkage values to American farmers on crop and storage values exceeded $600,000,000."

FIVE DAYS ARE BLANK

Jimmie Mattern Says He is Lucky to be Home

New York, July 31—(AP)—Grinning Jimmie Mattern did not look today like a man back from the dead but he was still a bit scared (he was brave enough to say so himself) and more than a bit puzzled.

Puzzled over those five 'lost days,' that dropped right out of his life without a trace—scared over a little book he is carrying—secure in his pocket.

The book is a diary, recording what happened to him, when he lost 19 days in the Siberian wilds after the plane in which he was trying to break the 'round-the-world record smashed itself into bits June 14.

"I get scared," he said, "every time I read some of the notes I put down in that diary. I haven't the slightest notion of my life about my experiences."

As for those lost days, he guesses they never will be recovered. Nineteen days he was lost in the wilderness, injured and in desperation, while the world believed him dead. His legs notes startled, but when Eskimos rescued him only 14 days were recorded in the diary.

"I don't know what happened to those other five days," he said. "Perhaps, the sun beat down on my head around your head and you never know where you are."

Perhaps he "passed out," he said, but he couldn't be sure.

Mattern, who set out to fly the world in less than eight days, came down yesterday, 21 days after the takeoff but glad to be back.

Mrs. Lovejoy, an elderly woman, was reported subject to fainting spells.

FOUR DEATHS IN HOT WAVE AT CHICAGO

Some Relief Promised From Hot Wave Over East

SHOWERS TONIGHT?

Sunday's Reading at 'Lab' at Belleville 98, Other is 101

By The Canadian Press

The heat wave continued today with no relief in sight, at least so far as Central Canada is concerned. Forecasts for the Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence Valley promised continued fair and warm weather with prospects of thunderstorms some time Tuesday that might break the spell. Thunderstorms Tuesday were also promised Northern Ontario, Quebec and the Lower St. Lawrence Valley, while the head of the lakes region might get relief earlier.

Toronto and district remained the hottest spot in Canada, with Central Ontario reporting shortage of water for cattle and the countryside scorched by continuous drought in a dangerous condition.

Temperature in Hamilton

Temperature reached 96 degrees in the shade at Hamilton Sunday and was mounting into the high eighties on Tuesday by mid-afternoon but the weatherman prophesied it would be heavier again Wednesday.

At Galt the mercury passed 99 and farmers were having trouble finding adequate water supplies. In the Brantford district motorists were warned to be careful that discarded cigarette butts do not set dried grass or grain on fire. Hamilton farmers and gardeners were becoming alarmed at the lack of rain. The peaceful crop was greatly cut down by the dry weather and labor crews were laid off early unless a break comes soon.

Crops were like dried up, with food scarce in the Peterborough district and up in Algoma there was a threat crops would begin to suffer seriously if rain is not forthcoming soon.

Harry Nightingale, of Cayuga, near Hamilton, owned an old thermometer when it went to 131 degrees in the sun.

Heat Wave at Chicago

Chicago, July 31—(AP)—Cooling breezes promised by the weatherman today to drive out the scorching heat wave that held Chicago and vicinity in its grip over the week-end when thermometers read the 90's.

Four deaths were reported yesterday as the mercury soared to the 98 degree mark.

On Monday some relief from the insistent heat which developed the city and district over the hazy week end was felt. Temperatures at Belleville fell far short of the record high registered on Sunday, namely 101 degrees with the highest for Monday 86 degrees, set at 86. Logs for the DAY was marked at 70. Sunday's scorcher was recorded by the west accounted for the heartening drop in temperature.

Official registrations at the Canadian National Exhibition laboratory for Sunday were given as 98 high on Sunday with a low of 78.

BUILDS NEST IN HORN

New Dundee, Ont., July 31 (CP) — H. D. Schmidt, New Dundee bandmaster, arrived very late for a town celebration. He explained the delay when he finally arrived. His band instrument, it seems, had been stored away for three years. When he started to play he found a starling, with its nest built in the horn. Considerable brass work was necessary before the band "struck up."

MARSH HAY IS BEING HARVESTED

With pastures so badly dried up by the protracted drought, farmers of the district at present are faced with a serious condition, and at present in many cases have been forced to feed they live stock hay and grain. Dairy farmers report milk production almost cut in half in some sections, owing to the scarcity of feed. Marsh hay often overlooked as a valuable food for their stock is this year being carefully harvested, and is in great demand.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock a run was made to Reid street, where blazing grass alarmed residents, and at 4 o'clock another run was made to Dufferin avenue where another patch of grass had been fired.

GARDENS WITHER UNDER HEAT WAVE

Not least of those who have been affected by the past weeks of drought are the unemployed gardeners of the city, who had hopefully counted on the profits of their gardens to assist them through the winter months. A canvass of a number of gardens among many of those willed and brown, burned by the excessive heat and drought. A few of the unemployed, discouraged by conditions, have allowed the gardens to go wild. Others are still cheerfully fighting the drought by carrying the water in pails during the evening to water their thirsty crops.

TEMPERATURE RULES AT 96 IN TRENTON

Picton Golfers Outclassed by Trenton Club Players

TRENTON, July 31.—(Special)—Old Sol again ran the thermometer to 96 degrees yesterday to raise the mark of last Sunday, driving all that could get away to cooler spots near the lake and bay. A nice breeze blew most of the day, but his was not terrific.

Farmers in the district are almost ready to give up hope. Grain is mostly all headed with only a short straw. The rain must come in abundance soon or the root crop will be burned up. Over two months have past with practically no rain at all.

Believe it or not Trenton pumped less water yesterday than any other day, summer or winter, according to Mr. E. Smithrim, manager of the Public Utilities Commission this morning. The only reason that could be given was the many users that were out of town for the day trying to keep cool near the waters of Lake Ontario and the Bay.

Most lawns have burned up and their owners have given up hope. Only metered homes can use lawn service, while non-metered homes must not at any hour with a penalty of having their water supply cut off immediately if they do.

There are nearly 1,100 consumers in Trenton with but a little over 300 being metered at present. Most all heavy users are metered but the latter consumer use six times as much water as the consumer with the meter. Eventually all homes will be metered according to Mr. Smithrim.

No word of a motor car owned by Mr. R. Perry of Cuthin and Perry local brokers, has been received since it was stolen last Tuesday, near midnight. The car was gightest Osborg and the police of that town gave chase firing three shots when their trip blew out, so they had to give up the chase.

Mr. A. C. Twiddy, local jeweller has offered $25.00 reward for information on the burglary of his store sometime early Thursday morning when thieves departed with fifty watches and fifty rings valued at $600.

Members of the Order of the Eastern Star, No. 118, and their families enjoyed their annual picnic at Presqu'Ile Point, last week. FIRST NIGHT IN FILMLAND

Wheeler and Woolsey in "Africa"

Take Audiences on Expedition of Wit

"So This is Africa" with the Johnsmiths Wheeler and Woolsey pleased two huge crowds at the Capitol Theatre on Saturday with their novelty scenes and their witty efforts. The plot was a new one for this pair of antics as it led them and a troupe of tame lions to the wilds of Africa to create a super-film of the Dark Continent. Their scenes at the studio which before they are sent to Africa was an excellent preamble to the comic situations which developed in Africa. Their meeting with a beautiful native woman, with the tame lions, and even swears" with the warrior chieftain, known as the Amazons, was the finale, the round up of the Amazons by the male warriors who capture with them the heads of the wild men and the bewildered Wheelers. Wheeler and Woolsey.

These two comedians put on a class by themselves and in this effort of theirs they do not allow the interest to lag for one moment. They carried the audience with them from start to finish.

To tell the masterpiece of funning would be unfair to those who have not seen it. Suffice to say that the expedition of civilized wits and wild animals is a success.

Buck Jones appears in what seems to many to be the best of his starring pictures since he first played in. "Hello Trouble". It is the story of an army officer on the discharge of his duty has had to leave the service on account of ill health and who at last kills a friend. He leaves the service to retire to the quiet life of a ranch boy, finds his courage tested to the full as he is called upon to right a great wrong which has been perpetrated and is being perpetrated by a rancher's hetra, a girl, and himself, and to another rancher who is being blamed for a killing and a series of outrages in the effort to secure from the owners the land containing evidences of rich silver. How one is saved from the gallows he had worn so heroically. The film ends with a right round up of the plotters and a suggestion of marriage.

Captain Black was an original officer of the 31st, joining in formation at Kingston in 1914, as a sub-altern in 70th Battalion, and was Battalion Adjutant at the front where he also was awarded the M.C.

Major E. A. Geen, M.C., is granted the Regiment: Major E. A. Geen, 27th March, 1933.

The host of friends of Colonel Geen extend congratulations on his promotion to command of the unit. The new Officer Commanding Argyll Light Infantry is a Belleville man through and through. He was born and has lived here practically all his life, and has been Collector of Customs for this port since 1918, succeeding the late Colonel Ponton Ponton to that important post.

On October 1st, he moved to Kingston and was an original member of the 70th Battalion, mobilized there early in November. He served with that unit as an N.C.O. and received his commission in Shorncliffe early in 1917 after serving in Flanders and Picardy until September, 1918, by the end of 1918. In 1917 he returned to Canada and was attached to the 155th Battalion for duty overseas.

On the organization of the Argyll Light Infantry in the fall of 1919, Colonel Geen was made a Captain in D Company, commanded by the late Major John Downey, and on the death of Major Downey succeeded or received his majority and took over that company. On promotion of Lt.-Col. Keeler to command the Battalion, Colonel Geen stepped up to 2nd in command of the unit.

Since March last Col. Geen has been in command of the regiment as the date of his appointment in the "Gazette" signifies.

So little wonder we see Jean Chatburn, one of the dancing lines, enthusiastically perusing an outline of literature between scenes of "Too Much Harmony", starring Bing Crosby.

EXPECT SWIFT ACTION IN KIDNAPPING CASE

Solution of Kidnapping Promised in Short Order as O'Connell Liberated

Ransom of $40,000 in Marked Bills is Paid

KEPT IN N. Y.

Well Treated, Shaved Twice And Had Good Food

Albany, N.Y., July 31 (AP)—A solution of the O'Connell kidnapping was promised "in short order" today.

John J. O'Connell, Jr., 34-year-old National Guard Lieutenant, was released by his abductors early Sunday after the payment of a $40,000 ransom. He was kidnapped July 7, and the original ransom demand was $200,000.

With the youth safely home, swift action was ensured by the offer of Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., of executives at work on the case. Two Albany men whose names are withheld, already are being detained for questioning.

Young O'Connell, the nephew of Edward J. and Daniel F. O'Connell, political leaders in up state Democratic circles, was thrust from the darkness into the spotlight at the 226th street (the Bronx) about one o'clock Sunday morning. Blind-folded, he had been driven around several blocks, before he was turned out of the car. A few minutes later O'Connell was picked up by Louis Harper, an Albany attorney, who had been drawn into the negotiations by Manny Strwel, the intermediary in the case.

Exhausted and Nervous

O'Connell arrived at the Helderberg mountain camp of Dan O'Connell, 30 miles from Albany at 6 a.m. exhausted and nervous. He tumbled into the arms of his mother and his brother, Daniel, Jr. (Sully). His anguished mother did not reach the camp until midnight. She left the city by time had shaved off a week's growth of beard and had slept for a couple of hours. A physician found the youth in good health but suffering from shock and nervous exhaustion. O'Connell said he was well treated by his captors and secreted him in a well-furnished apartment.

The ransom money which Dan O'Connell turned over to Strvel after receiving had been cunningly marked. The kidnappers, however, suspicious that such a ruse would be attempted demanded new money. The result was that Strvel had to bank it before the ransom money was returned to the gang. Officials are hopeful that the bills in such denominations can be traced.

Originally the gang demanded a ransom of $250,000. They recced $175,000 and $100,000. Two that $175,000 seemed the family notes last week seemed the family that unless the demand was met the boy would be slain. Some of the notes carried O'Connell's signature. Then Edmund Lamb, one of the family could raise only $40,000.

Attack Made Secretly

As federal and state governments sharpened their knives to attack the "snatch racket", Dan O'Connell had the impression that the gang was working. Then the death and the "ransom for" the kidnaper of Mary McElroy at Kansas City. Shortly after the negotiations were completed and the $40,000 was accepted.

Then came the boy's uncle, related stretchy details of the kidnapping.

"As Johnny stepped out of his automobile in the morning of July 7, he was hit over the head with a blackjack," he related. "He thought he saw four or five men and believed he received a blow in the face. When he came to he was in a furnished room at the flat of Donald Lee in New York City. He said he didn't recognize any of his captors.

He was not taken from the room until the ransom money was collected. The boy was not chained, or bound, and was well treated. He was given meals twice and sometimes three times and gave him good food."

TRIP UP BAY IS LAID OVER FOR WEEK

Rolling whitecaps on the bay of Quinte on Sunday, whipped by a stiff west wind, kept the fleet of punts and motor powered craft, which assembled at the end of the month at nine o'clock in the morning, to deter their intended visit to the summer home of Judge J. W. Fills. On the advice of the pilot or sailors, it was decided out for the trip up the bay, the visit to Judge Wills was laid over until the following Sunday, next. It was reported that Judge Wills is fond of the sailing craft to negotiate the rough water.

Bodyguard of Mrs. "Legs" Diamond Shot in Back after Making Threats

(By Dale Harrison)

New York, July 31 (AP)—James J. Dolan can't make good that promise now.

When Mrs. Alice Shiffer Diamond, widow of the notorious "Legs" Diamond was murdered a few weeks ago, Jimmy Dolan said:

"I'll get the guy who did this. I'll get 'em."

But he never will. They got him first—got him through the back last night in a Brooklyn apartment house, and ran away into the night. Dolan, mortally wounded, staggered in pursuit, rumbling for his gun. As the curb he fell. When police arrived he was dead.

A year ago he was struck down by gunfire behind. That time the weapon was a knife. He was in a hospital for weeks.

Dolan didn't do much talking about that. A fellow in his business doesn't. He was a bodyguard to Mrs. Diamond up to the time of her murder—has got to expect that kind of thing. Maybe he'll be back, but head in the spine.

Mrs. Diamond was found murdered in her apartment a short time after she had reminded a friend that she might start talking to the police which apparently meant that she might start talking to the police which apparently meant that she might start talking to the gang that had killed her husband.

Dolan got her first; and Dolan swore his oath of vengeance; and they got him.

He was seated with another man in the beer garden, when two cabmen entered. Dolan appeared to know them, for he spoke. The man stopped at Dolan's table and a conversation started. It was short-lived. The two men suddenly backed away from the Dolan table. Dolan's back was turned.

SWEEPING GRASS FIRE AT ROSSMORE IS THREATENING

Villagers and Others Help Battle Flames For Three Hours

Menaced by a sweeping grass fire which roared out of control in the tall tinder-dry grass on the concession of Rossmore, east of the village, late Sunday afternoon, scores of villagers and volunteers from the city who had been attracted to the scene, turned out en masse shortly after five o'clock to battle the worst open fire in the history of the district.

Believed to have been started by a smouldering spark from perverted smaller fires of last week, the blaze which gained rapid headway before the alarm could be spread over the village, threatened several homes in its steady advance. Residents, alarmed by the rapidity of the leaping fire formed pitiful household effects alongside the road, and prepared to evacuate their homes. Only through the heroic efforts of the blackened and begrimed fire fighters were the flames turned sufficiently at each point to prevent considerable property damage. Up until dark on Sunday evening residents still carried pails of water from nearby wells in an effort to extinguish the smouldering sparks which glowed in the charred fields.

Many At Scene.

A thick, curling pall of smoke, visible for miles, which rolled upward from the blazing commons, attracted hundreds of cars to the scene. Pitched battles on the adjoining roads were packed with the parked machines containing hundreds of sightseers. Many from the city lent a hand in an effort to save the homes from nearby homes. Fanned east by a steady west wind, the fire was kept partly under control near the highway. Some damage to fence posts and minor outbuildings resulted as the fire burned itself out along the road. A grove of trees on the east side of the village escaped the flames at the last minute when a small band of workers managed to cut off the flames which had been advancing through a small strip of dried grass. Although the commons east of the village today presented a picture of desolation and stock owners find themselves short of pasture, because of the fire, property damage, fortunately, was light.

From the bay bridge almost half way to Massassaga Road the land has been burned over.

4 DROWNINGS 3 ACCIDENTS OVER WEEKEND

Despite Intense Heat Wave Fatalities Kept at Minimum

MAN BREAKS BACK

Toronto Lawyer Drowns When Car Upsets Into River

Toronto, July 31 (CP) — Despite the fact that a breath-taking heat of almost record intensity gripped the province over the week-end, fewer drownings were reported than for any other week-end since July set in. Of the seven sudden deaths by Ontario, three were caused by drownings, three by motor-car accidents and one by a diving accident.

A well-known Toronto lawyer, Joseph Patrick Walsh, was killed on Saturday when his car struck the railing of a bridge three miles south of the village of Wyevale, near Midland and overturned in the Wye River. It was believed he had been dead for some four hours before he was noticed.

A second automobile fatality occurred at Hamilton Sunday evening when Nora Henrietta Parry, 20-year-old daughter of Dr. R. Y. and Mrs. Parry of Hamilton, suffered a fractured skull when her car overturned after colliding with another vehicle.

Matthew Henderson, 55-year-old Toronto resident, suffered fatal injuries when struck by a truck on the streets of that city Saturday evening.

Another diving accident over the week-end occurred at Port Credit when Alec Cowan, 17-year-old lad, struck his head on a half-ton anchor in the Credit river Saturday evening and broke his neck and back. Harrison, prominent professional golfer, died in hospital early Sunday.

Walter Pearce, 21-year-old cotton spinner of Cornwall, lost his balance while riding on the stern of a 16-foot motor launch, toppled back into the St. Lawrence river and was drowned. The accident occurred on Sunday about 12 miles east of Cornwall.

A 360-year-old boy, Mervin Rousseau, son of Mr. Albert Peter Rousseau of Sault Ste. Marie, was drowned Saturday evening at Kawa Bay. He stepped off into deep water.

The Ottawa River claimed another victim when Angele Santrase, 21, slipped on a rock submerged and dropped into 25 feet of water yesterday. Santrase, Italian-born resident of Ottawa, was unable to swim and drowned.

55 Years in Newspaper Work, "Phil" Harrison at 75 Still at Desk

Born in England, Coming to Canada as a Boy of Eleven

WELL KNOWN

Apprenticed by Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Has Reported Many Events

Fifty-five years actively engaged in the realm of Belleville newspaperdom, "Phil" Harrison of the Ontario Intelligencer staff will observe (August 1st) commemorate the 75th anniversary of his natal day.

"Phil" was born at Cobham in the County of Surrey, England, Aug. 1st, 1858, and in his very young days both father and mother were taken from him by death. He lived at place of his birth on the Kingstead Road, London, until his 11th year when, with relatives, he came to Canada, and for 7 or 8 years resided at Cannifton, which was a busy and flourishing village at that time. His first ride in a horse-drawn vehicle in this country occurred there, and proved an exciting and never-forgotten event, in his life—an event that might have resulted in serious injury to the then young Harrison. Just south of Cannifton the horse became frightened and ran away, the cart was overturned in a ditch with Phil beneath. However when rescuers reached the spot they found the boy little injured.

To Belleville in 1877

Phil Harrison came to make his way in the world, at the age of 19, with the exception of a year spent in Rochester, N.Y., he remained in Canada.

In 1877 he was apprenticed to the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell in the old Intelligencer, and with that newspaper he was connected for over a half century, many years of which he spent as editor and assistant newspapers and reporters. In this capacity he had two notable, and by no means congenial assignments, the witnessing of two executions by hanging in the old jail yard at the County buildings here. Phil was called on in his journalistic duties to be in attendance at the hangings of Peter Davis and William Kane.

He has served the city as a member of the Board of Education, and in that body for some years, and in 1925 he was an alderman. He was once married and is at present a widower; one daughter Miss Mabel is his only child.

Phil has made the piscatorial art his hobby, and for years he has been a regular visitor to the Bay of Quinte and the fishing grounds of the Bay of Quinte, and the inland lakes and streams. He is ever willing to lend a helping hand, and his ardent sportsman is always worthwhile and welcome member of any party.

Some years ago he was made, by the late Governor of the Argyll Light Infantry, an honorary member of their mess and is a welcome guest of any event to transpire there. In the meetings and get-togethers and the members of the mess enjoy his presence.

Actively Engaged

Seventy-five years youthful, Phil is still actively engaged in the newspaper game, and has been so keen for the past 54 years, very rarely missing a day. He joins the families of this and adjoining communities in the hope of long continuation regarding present day and long-ago happenings. Many are the friends in this city, in the country and throughout Bay of Quinte district, who join with The Intelligencer in wishing Phil Harrison a most happy anniversary and a long period at the three-quarter of a century mark. Mr. Irwin has been engaged in the mileage of existence for him may continue to be held there in health and happiness, with many more years to come and go, before he is withdrawn from the reporter's desk of life.

Malibu Beach Movie Colony Closely Guarded After Kidnap Plot Known

Los Angeles, July 31 (AP) A movie star kidnapping plot attributed to Charles Arthur Floyd, Oklahoma bandit recently slain by police, had resulted today in the placing of guards about the Malibu Beach and movie colony while Southern California officers kept close watch for

More than a week ago the machine gunner was reported traced to California by federal officers. Later it was believed he had crossed into Mexico with two companions.

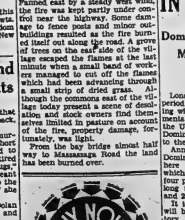
Saturday, a Texas aviator, whose name authorities refused to disclose, came to the Department of Justice here and told a story of meeting Floyd and two other men in San Diego and agreeing to fly them to Agua Prieta, Mexico, for $250 each.

The flier said he was to have met Floyd and his men near Malibu Beach and gone over the arrangements in detail.

Department of Justice investigators under Joseph Dunn, head of the local office, and Los Angeles police accompanied the Texan to the supposed rendezvous last night but Floyd did not appear.

101 DEGREES REGISTERED

Residents of City Swelter in Hottest Day of Year



Sweltering and perspiring in the grip of the hottest Sunday on local record, residents of the city bore up today in the swelling temperatures, which reached an all time high of 101 degrees above just before midday on Sunday. No heat prostrations were recorded in the city, although minor casualties such as sunburn and slight accidents were reported from local beaches. Only the saving grace of a comparatively cool west wind kept local temperatures from approaching the hara-like registrations. A blazing sun from clear skies, which ushered in the day relentlessly drove local thermometers to the highest mark of the season. Only during the earlier evening hours did a return of the cooling breeze from the nearby lake bring relief to the city, which, crowded with throngs of swimmers. On the highways long processions of cars bearing the residents attempted to combat the heat.

HARRY EVES ON WAY TO RECOVERY

Harry Eves, 9 Ridley street, is recovering this (Monday) morning at the Belleville General Hospital from the effects of iodine taken, according to his statement to the attending physician, by mistake, Saturday evening. Eves was found in the bath room of his home by members of his family about 6:30 p.m. Saturday. The police were notified and his physician, Dr. A. A. Faulkner, called. The police on arrival found the man in a semi-conscious condition face downward on the floor of the bath room. To the attending doctor Eves initially restored he is alleged to have said he had mistaken the iodine for Epsom Salts. Eves, who answered the call with the ambulance, conveyed Eves to the Belleville General Hospital where further restorative measures saved his life.

The post of magistrate is one of the greatest positions any man can fill. He is in a peculiar way identified with the people of the territory over which he presides as magistrate. Mr. Jarrett may well be proud that his service to the community, and that public appreciation of that service have been such as to bring about his appointment to the magisterial office.

Mr. T. A. O'Rourke, who remains as magistrate, has been one of the most colorful figures among the police magistrates of Ontario. His countless friends will wish him many years to enjoy the fruits of his active and well-spent life.

MUSSOLINI AT FIFTY

Mussolini on Saturday passed the half century of his life, and he thought either so much of it that he spent the day at a quiet summer home or so little of it that he did not wish to be reminded of the anniversary.

Mussolini is one of that great band of men who feel that the year is not the proper yardstick to measure them. He can take a look around him and see the elderly Hindenburg in Germany. He can find George Bernard Shaw who though twenty-seven years older than Il Duce was annoyed when he was reminded that he was seventy-seven years old last week. In England he can see Dean Inge who at 73 is one of the most brilliant wits in the modern world and is still writing.

The Italian can start many things yet if he pleases. He can learn languages at seventy as Gladstone did.

Had Mussolini done little or nothing he would doubtless have been worn out at fifty. He has achieved much and regrets that time's passage is just shortening the number of years he would like to live. Mussolini's attitude is the common attitude and undoubtedly it is in nature that he should regret that years are rolling by. But whatever is said of his accomplishments, it must be admitted that he is a tyrant to himself where work is to be done, that if he wastes his time work he is the first of his people to go to work.

It may be that Mussolini may be thinking of the short life of Napoleon whose titanic energy his own restless activity resembles. Napoleon at forty-five years of age passed off the active scene with the Battle of Waterloo and died in his fifty-second year. But Mussolini's is a work which is not bottled up at a St. Helena, for he can continue to serve his people..

NEED PLAIN SPEAKING

There was too much diplomacy and not enough plain speaking at the World Economic Conference. The speeches and statements that were made were notable not for what they said but only for what could be read into them. Many of them were so equivocal that nothing could be read into them at the time they were delivered.

Statesmen said one thing and practised another. Or in some cases the heads of delegations voiced highly moral sentiments as a smokescreen for baser intrigue by juniior members of their delegations.

It may be that behind closed doors some plain speaking was done once in a while between representatives of different countries. But when they got together in public it was usually for the purpose of beguiling the patient citizens of the world with equivocal promises, pious toonyrot and insincere protestations of good intentions.

More plain speaking was done by Litvinoff, of Russia, and Bennett, of Canada, than by the other 200 delegates put together. Mr. Bennett will not forgive us for bracketing him with the foreign minister of the communistic state but when Litvinoff said that the world's troubles were due to capitalism and when Mr. Bennett drily forecast that countries would continue to use tariffs for national purposes each was indulging in realistic plain speaking of his own views. There was not enough of that at the conference.—Financial Post.

SIDELIGHTS
GRAVE and GAY

THE LITTLE HOUSES

We have builded many things, fashioned many wonders,
Scythe and plough and saddle-tree and hunting knife and spear;
We have wrought for glory and for beauty and for pleasure,
And have builded little houses for the women we hold dear.

All along the highway there are little houses,
Pleasant in the sunlight, peaceful in the rain;
You may see the folk go forth early in the morning
And at dusk returning home along the lane.

We have fashioned Zeppelins and bayonets and cannon,
Launched our dreadnoughts on the sea, a terror to the deep;
Yet, God be our witness, we have builded little houses—
Little peaceful homes where the little children sleep.

Some are set in gardens, lawns and trees about them,
Some are crowded wall to wall along the city street;
But in town and country God has blessed the little houses
With the laughing eyes of women and children's romping feet.

We have molded for ourselves telegraphs and tunnels;
Builded bridge and barrack-room, derrick, dock and gun;
But for love of women we have builded little houses,
Pleasant in the shadow and peaceful in the sun.

All the world over there are little houses,
Silent as the starlight, shining in the dew;
There, with children's laughter and the loving hearts of women,
God, the Mighty Builder, builds this world anew.

POLLY MORAN, screen comedian, who was side-kick of Marie Dressler in some of that lady's most amusing screen productions, passed through Belleville recently in her expensive limousine, complete with chauffeur, 'neverything. Polly stopped at Coboung to pay tribute to the birthplace of her friend and co-worker, Marie Dressler. She visited the local post office and sent Marie picture postcards of Coboung. The post office staff claimed that they recognized Polly Moran from her smile, her figure and her general get-up, but Polly has a suspicion that the picture postcards had something to do with the instantaneous discovery of her identity. Polly also visited the Thousand Islands and expressed a wish to have a summer home on every island. Don't be so piggish, Polly.

WILLIE HEARST came home from college and his father gave him a bankrupt newspaper, taken for a bad debt, to play with. Willie's father made a fortune out of a few newspapers and couldn't afford to have Willie playing round without something to keep him busy. So he gave Willie a sheet called the Examiner, and Willie assembled a gang of real newspaper folks to help him, including Mark Twain, Gertrude Atherton, Joaquin Miller, and astonished his father by getting the Examiner out of the red. He called it "The Monarch of the Dailies" and his watchword was "Gee Whiz". Willie Hearst obtained a seven and a half million dollar slice on his fabulous patrimony when his father died in 1891. For $180,000 he bought the doddering New York Journal, hired Pulitzer's best brains from the World, including Arthur Brisbane, whose income from writing is now in the neighborhood of $100,000 a year, thanks to the syndicate idea, and in ten months increased the circulation of the Journal from 20,000 to 400,000 copies daily. Hearst put pep with a big P into the Journal, and smashed all polite newspaper standards — now he has a ring of newspapers across the continent with a Hearst paper in nearly every important city of the United States. From his 240,000 acre ranch home in California "The Emperor of America" as Hearst is called rules his great newspaper kingdom and although in his seventies has no intention of retiring until the great Managing Editor calls Thirty on him.

ALBUMEN NOT ALWAYS TAKEN AS SERIOUS

Authorities Claim That Temporary Extra-Duty May Cause it

By Louis R. Block, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

There was a time when the presence of even a trace of albumen in the urine was considered to be of serious moment. "Kidney trouble" was the unfailing diagnosis.

Nowadays, however, although albumen is by no means to be belittled, it is known that albumen may appear in the urine for a short time only, and that often it is of purely functional origin and does not indicate a diseased condition of the kidneys.

As you probably already know, the kidneys take from the blood certain chemical waste products, which are continually forming, and these are later eliminated via the bladder. The kidneys' function is so delicate and complicated that it is a wonder the human kidneys is not upset more often than it is.

At any rate, when albuminous substances are allowed to pass through the kidneys—technically this condition is known as "albuminuria"—suspicion is at once aroused as to whether one or both kidneys may not be diseased.

High blood pressure states as well as heart disorders, boils, and the classical abnormal conditions which are likely to follow in the diabetes, even if organic, may be acute or chronic; and it is a well-known fact that children may suffer from kidney disturbances the same as adults.

Whether violent emotion, unusual mental stress and strain, or temporary abundance of food rich in albumen, or other similar conditions, may cause albumen to appear in the urine is a disputed point. There are authorities who claim that such temporary extra-duty for the kidneys may lower their efficiency sufficiently for albuminuria to result.

Albumen in the urine may surely occur, however, in a transient case of fever, in certain neurotic states, in goiter, after an alcoholic debauch or after a physical injury and the like.

A form of albuminuria of special interest in this connection is one known as "orthostatic albuminuria." This may appear in young persons, and they are more commonly affected by it than girls. It may last but a few weeks, and sometimes only a few days in a whole life. It is not a dangerous condition.

Every man, woman and child should have an examination of the urine made at least once a year. If a diseased kidney condition is suspected, more frequent examinations are indicated.

For this is not necessary to consult a physician. A sample of the urine—preferably from a twenty-four hour collection, or the first voiding after arising—is taken to a drug store, and for the payment of a small fee a report is returned from a laboratory within a few days.

Dr. Block's Daily Diet Hint

The way a dish looks when placed on the table—what might be called its "appeal"—is considered important for digestion than is generally recognized. Certainly the sight of appetizing food starts the flow of saliva and gastric juice, in consequence of which digestion is aided and absorption hastened. In fact, if a dish looks tempting and attractive it had better not be eaten.

IF IN DOUBT DON'T PASS!

LOVE, LAUGHS, THRILLS IN CIRCUS PICTURE—AT BELLE THEATRE

Actual thrills of danger, rather than those of dramatic situations penned for the writers of motion picture stories, feature "The Big Shakedown," the Universal Circus picture which is coming to the Belle tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday, matinee daily.

This remarkable picture presents in the leading role the dare-devil Clyde Beatty, youngest and greatest of the world's animal trainers, who is seen in hair-raising performances with 43 jungle-bred lions and Tigers.

Beatty is the only man who ever combined lions and tigers in a circus "act". In this story, written by himself and Edward Anthony, based on his own life, he is seen putting his big the performance which has made him the greatest attraction of the tented-show world. It was just such an act as this that he made so its capacity in the worst show days in history.

The major part of "The Big Cage" is told against the little known background of a circus' winter quarters, and its action finds Beatty as the owner of a small show fighting financial difficulties in which he actually takes his life in his hands. The climax of the picture takes place in a mammoth circus tent during a performance, with several lions and tigers escaping from the arena and creating pandemonium in the big circus crowds.

Supporting Beatty in this spine-tingling screen play of circus life are Mickey Rooney, Wallace Ford, Tito Barnett, Andy Devine, Anita Page and Raymond Hatton and other screen favorites. There is behind the scenes a love story that is so vitally a part of the picture, that it suggests the dual quality that made of "Variety" such a great picture of its day.

Don't fail to see "The Big Cage". In fact, you've got a picture ever has before. It is not in any sense a jungle picture.

"I Love That Man"

"I Love That Man" is the glamorous title of the swiftly paced drama of a woman's attention which is the second feature attraction on the same program, featuring Edmund Lowe, Nancy Carroll, Robert Armstrong, Lew Cody, Warren Hymer and Dorothy Burgess, with Charles R. Rogers's latest production for Paramount.

Lowe has the best job he's done since "The Cock-Eyed World" and despite the fact he's dancing at your pocket-book, you'll be cheering for the underdog side of the fence. But crime doesn't pay, even to this insolent stroller who talks himself out of trouble, and in the end, there's a daring climax that whips the story to a touchdown that is in accord with its exceptionally fast action. You'll adore Nancy Carroll in this role and get what she wants and get it. For she wants the 99% of the most handsome specimen of manhood has yet portrayed—and you'll be right with her all the way.

Gibbards Stay in Running for Loop Title Defeating Victorias by 8-4 Count

Wilkins Proves No Mystery to The Napanee Team

POINTER WHIFFS 14

Wildness, However Nearly Causes Loss of Game

Napanee Gibbards stayed in the running of the Bay of Quinte League when they defeated the Belleville Victorias by the score of 8 to 4 at Napanee on Saturday afternoon. The game lowers the Victorias' standing to a position where by they now occupy a tie for eight game margin over the third place Gibbard crew and are a full game and one half behind the league leading Picton club. Napanee will now finish the season's schedule at Belleville on Wednesday afternoon.

Coach Walter Alexander sent Tommy Pointer, his elongated left hander to subdue the hard hitting Victorias and between spasms of wildness he succeeded. Pointer rose to heights to set down the local sweat-smiths. Pointer whiffed 14 local batters, while on the block but mitigated his own chances at times by walking no less than eight. Victoria hitters and hitting one batter with a pitched ball. Luring up to his old name of "all left handers", regarding their wildness on the mound. Pointer with men in scoring position turned on the well known work and the local's one dozen scoreless time after time, when runs seemed inevitable.

Ted Wilkins was Manager Fanning's choice for pitching duties and from the beginning he plentiful right hander had little or nothing on the ball. Slithery but hard-pitched eleven innings game of Wednesday afternoon last. Although Wilkins was far from himself and pitched rather poor ball it was quite evident, that the locals should have been'asked to assume the burning duties on the mound somewhat tired from the out-set. Once more Ralph Ivey was called to the rescue to stem the tide of Napanee hits and again the local pest-slider rose to the occasion to be out-pitched Pointer and stopped the home town rally while he was on the mound.

Errors of commission and errors of omission coupled with poor base running cost the Victorias a win, even after they had equalled the Ersis Gibbard crew's six run lead in the first two innings. On three singles and an error the homesters knotted two runs in the initial frame only to add four more juicy runs in the second frame on one home run drive, a double, a hit batter and a walk were squeezed in to put the seven in scoring position. On three singles and a walk the Gibbard lads added another to the fourth and two more scoring in the eighth on five singles, for which they counted but seven hits.

The locals opened their scoring in the fourth, when Wilkins tripled, scoring on an infield out. Green walked and on an out was sent to second and scored on a subsequent hit. The locals made their final stand in the seventh when on four hits they scored two runs. The misplaced fly to Green which happened in this frame, when Haslett tried in vain to stretch a triple into a four base clout. He was out at the plate, sliding.

ORIOLES CLIMB

Bears Retain Margin of 3 1-2 Game Lead in Loop

(By Herbert W. Barker Associated Press Sports Writer).

Victoria, Jul. 31 (AP)—Over last 12 games, the Baltimore Orioles had crashing into fifth place in the International League today, displacing the Toronto Leafs over the week end.

The Orioles spotted the Rochester Red Wings a two-run lead in the first inning of each game of a double-header here today, then came back each time to win, 12-7 and 8-6. The Orioles scored 11 runs in the fifth inning to win the first and bunched hits for all their runs in the second and third frames of the nightcap.

Rochester's double act back enabled the Newark Bears to increase their lead to 3 1-2 games for last bears beat Buffalo twice, 12-3 and 3-1. Although he failed to finish Jim Weaver was credited with his 18th victory in the first game. Johnny Broaca made his first defeat but in the nightcap and limited the Bisons to four hits.

Albany drew up to a virtual tie with Buffalo for sixth place by by beating Toronto in a double bill, 7-2 and 4-3. Ray Prim outpitched Ralph Birtcher in the first game in which Paul Thompson, Albany right fielder had 10 putouts. Paddy Mahon's triple and two singles helped him the second game.

Jersey City outpointed the Montreal Royals twice, 8-3 in 13 innings and 1-0. Max Rosenfeld's double with the bases filled in the fifth enabled the Skeeters to tie up the first game which they eventually won on Gil English's Texas leaguer with the bases filled. Ray Fitzgerald's single with Bud Watkins on second in the eighth broke up the second fray. A great pitcher's duel between Ed. Pipgras and John Pomonski. Pipgras gave up only four hits and Pomonski five.

TWELVE TITLES TO U. S.

Fort Dalhousie, Ont., July 21 (CP) Twelve of Canada's twenty-five rowing titles were in United States hands today despite a final day spurt by Toronto and Hamilton oarsmen Saturday that retained the two jacket morsels of Royal Canadian Henley's fifty-first regatta for the Dominion.

It was far too late when Russ Mcmillan and his tutor, Joe Wright Jr., of Argonauts and Hamilton's Leander eight, with six 1932 Olympians aboard, came along to sweep up a trio of championships on the last day of competition. Buffalo Westsides had already sailed away the club honors.

DIZZY DEAN SHATTERS 40 YEAR RECORD

Whiffs Seventeen Chicago Batters in Regulation Game

CARDS ADVANCE

Senators Retain Lead Over Yanks Splitting Twin Bill

By HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

It was a busy week-end in baseball—perhaps the most eventful and exciting the major leagues have gone through this year.

Dizzy Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals shattered the modern major league strikeout record with the greatest feat in that line recorded in more than forty years, of the Chicago Cubs as he won the opener of yesterday's double header 3 to 2.

The New York Yankees and Washington battled to a stalemate in two games of their series for the American league lead, which ended today Pittsburgh's Pirates tore past the Chicago Cubs into second place in the National Saturday, then went on to redress the New York Giants lead to 1-2 games. The Cardinals, by winning both games yesterday, have passed the Cubs taking third by one point.

Rogers Hornsby's active charge as manager of the St. Louis Browns ang saw his team run into the end of the New York Yankees' long streak and take a double drubbing, 11 to 2 and 6 to 5, after seven straight games, broke loose with a 24 hit attack in the first game, with 10 innings then blasted out a 15-2 victory in the nightcap.

Outstanding Feat

Dean's feat was by far the outstanding individual feat of the past two days. Not only did he record seventeen strikeouts in a major league game for the first time since Tom Zachary turned the trick in 1918, but he helped his catcher, Jimmy Wilson establish a new major league mark of 18 shutouts. The second game of the twin bill with the Cubs was indicative of how the Cards edged out a 5-5 victory to go a point ahead of the Cubs in the battle for sixth straight game.

Washington, after winning Saturday to go three games ahead of the Yankees, found the southpaw pitching of Emerald Van Atta a bit too much and went down 7 to 2, but Alvin Crowder's timely hits, while the Yanks hit Earl Whitehill and Johnny Allen with a fourrun rally against Jack Russell and two successors in the eighth.

The Pirates, after a couple of narrow escapes against Cincinnati but seven innings, broke loose in the tenth inning rallies to extend their winning streak to seven games.

They scored four runs in the ninth to take the opener of a double over the Cubs and then a 5-5 victory in the second game after the Bucs had been held to a single run.

Lead Cut Down

The Boston Braves, meanwhile, cut down the league leading New York Giants by a 1-3 count as Wes Ferrell pitched the Boston club sixth place, which they took Saturday, as two Chicago victories put the White Sox in fifth place.

The A's remained in a third place tie with the Cleveland Indians, whose hitting streak was checked by Tommy Bridges after five victories. With Bridges pitching eight-hit ball, the Detroit Tigers handcuffed a 6 to 0 victory when homers by Hank Greenberg and Pete Fox drove in four tallies.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Last Friday at noon the Belleville Victorias were perched well on the top rung of the Bay of Quinte loop ladder along with the Picton club. Today, however, Mr. Fanning's charges are in an altogether embarrassing position sitting in second position, one and one-half games behind the league leading Picton club and with a full game ahead of the third place Napanee outfit, so fast and furious of the pace being set in the Bay of Quinte loop these days.

Wilkins, who pitched but an innings and a third on Saturday, should be signed early to stop the league leading Picton-ites and put his club "over". Wednesday afternoon at the local ball yard, Most likely big Ron Church will get the pitching assignment for the league leaders and the battle of the season in inimmerable circles, is slated for the Belleville Fair Grounds. Both clubs will be in full strength and the best interested-ite game of the season is assured fans.

After procuring permission to play their games on the Armories Lawn the local girls are vaunting that park to play the first game of the local Inter-city softball leg at the Coleman Flats this evening. The champion Belleville Fruit team meet the second place South End Club, next on a five game series. Just where the other ten games will be played was not announced by President Deacon this morning, but it is thought that the feminine ballsters will return to the Armories Lawn for the second and third games. Either Bessie Bonsillo or Lois Carter will start on the hilltop for the B.E. A. this evening, being opposed by "Babe" Lewis, the sole hurler from Trenton, or Molly Cove.

On Tuesday and Thursday evening the fligt two games in the Senior Men's Softball loop takes place between the Delaney Bearcats and Wally Cliff's "Shenkers." On paper the Bearcats should about take the Cheese Boxers—cognomen, but as the Bearcats have been idle for the past ten days most anything may happen and the dope may be upset tomorrow night at the Coleman Flats park.

:-:-:

Whether the softball moguls intend continuing with their idea of using four umpires in three games or not we cannot say, but if the latter prove superiorous to think that two or possibly three umpires can't work those softball games. On such a small space a softball diamond the umpire stationed at second base is very much in the way and interferes, inadvertently, mitigates the chances of infielders.

:-:-:

Unless something unforeseen happens the "Old Timer's" baseball game will be played civic holiday.

GOOD OLD DAYS are back again—for National league fans for we don't mean 23 either.

The "good old days" in the senior circuit mean a renewal of the ancient, historic Pittsburgh rivalry of New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh.

From 1903 to 1913, inclusive these three cities, and the National league pennant fight virtually to themselves. Following Pittsburgh's great championship drive in 1901 and 1902, the season of 1903 saw Chicago and New York move in as the Pirates' greatest rivals and the three-way fight did not end until the Boston Braves won the 1914 title.

Eight times in that glamorous period these teams finished one-two-three. Only three times did outsiders barge into the picture — the Reds finishing last over Pittsburgh in 1904, the Phils nosing out New York for third in 1907 and winding up second behind New York in 1913.

And now Giant, Cub and Pirate are at it again, in another grand fling fight. Yep, the good old days are back again.

IN ALL, New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh have been pennant contenders together in 14 campaigns. Those fights drew a lot of these struggles with the ancient enemies, Chicago five and Pittsburgh three. Only one slitter in National league headliners today as Giant, Cub and Pirate dug in out for the big prize—THEY—Warneke, Hubbell and Wasdell, Traynor, Oz Lindstrom and Grimm.

However, they hardly compare with the heroes of that 11-year three-team series of flag fights. Those battles offered such stars as Hans Wagner, Frank Chance, Christy Mathewson, Babe Adams, Three-Finger Brown, John J. McGraw, Fred Clarke, Deacon Phillippe, Ned Scanlon, Mike Donlin, Iron Man McGinnity, Rube Marquard, Buck Herzog, Larry Doyle, Jeff Tesreau, Johnny Evers, Fred Merkle, Perdie Sahoo, Orvie Overall, Heinie Zimmerman, Big Ed Reulbach, Hans Lobert and scores of others.

No wonder the old-timers are steamed up over this renewal of fight!

HERE ARE National league finishes from 1903 to 1913 inclusive:

1903—Pirates, Giants, Cubs.
1904—Giants, Cubs, Reds, Pirates.
1905—Giants, Pirates, Cubs.
1906—Cubs, Giants, Pirates.
1907—Cubs, Pirates, Phils, Giants.
1908—Cubs, Pirates (tied for second).
1909—Pirates, Cubs, Giants.
1910—Cubs, Giants, Pirates.
1911—Giants, Cubs, Pirates.
1912—Giants, Pirates, Cubs.
1913—Giants, Phils, Cubs, Pirates.

FOUR YEARS PASSED, following the Giants' win in 1913, before the three old rivals fought it out for another pennant. Then, in 1918, the National league wound up its abbreviated season, cut short by war edict, this way—Chicago, New York, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh.

In 1922 all three old-rivals were scrapping again for the flag with New York winning, Pittsburgh being nosed out for second by Cincinnati and Chicago just behind the Reds.

In 1927 Pirate, Giant and Cub were at it again with the Cards aiding the merriment. That windup was — Pittsburgh, St. Louis, New York, Chicago.

The Cubs' triumph in 1929 saw the final clash, until this year, of the ancient foes. Chicago won, Pittsburgh was second, and New York third.

Yesterdays Stars

Dizzy Dean, Cardinals, held Cubs to six hits and struck seventeen for new major league record.

Mule Haas, White Sox, rapped Browns' pitching for eight hits in double-header.

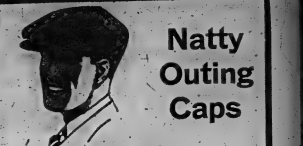
Pinky Whitney, Braves, drove in four of Braves' five runs against the Giants.

John Stone, Tigers, led attack on Indians with three hits.

Flint Rhem, Phillies, limited the Dodgers to seven hits.

Lou Gehrig, Yankees, headed Yankee attack on Senators with three singles.

Tony Piet, Pirates, made five hits, driving in four runs against Reds.



Johnny Hodapp, Red Sox, clouted triple and single against Athletics.

THE BIG SIX

Ike Boone and Julius Solters, two of the International League's biggest guns, provided most of the action in the big six over the week-end. The Toronto slugger widened his leading margin by collecting seven hits in eleven times up while a conversion in the effort averages further contributed to boost his mark nine points to .372. Solters gained three points and went up to .363 taking second place over Tommy Thompson of Albany who fell to .361.

Score Nine Runs in 16-6 Victory in First Tweed, July 31 (Special)—Tweed and Havelock met in the latter town for the fourth and last league game of baseball of the present season. Again on the occasion of the last meeting of their two teams in Havelock, Tweed completely overwhelmed their opponents by the one sided score of 16-6. In a vain effort to bring the visiting batters into submission, Havelock used three pitchers but they all looked much alike. The first innings netted nine runs for Tweed and from then on they just coasted on to victory. D. Smith pitched the full game for Tweed and had complete control of the situation except for a momentary splurge in the third when Havelock scored their runs.

When the bathing season comes, there's a wild scramble to reduce sandships. The abbreviated suit of the mermaid is revealing, and the svelte shape is worth working for, heaven's sake, why? Try walking that way. Then work on the stitch you'liest in your back. Nature never meant that the human frame should be so distorted. And of course when lovely mannequins do it, the high school girls have to try it. It's a lot of hooey.

The body should be carried with verve and elegance. To do that, it must be well balanced, weight properly distributed. Ease is a quality of beauty, cultivate it.

Throw the abdomen forward and the torso folds down on itself. The lungs at all times, sitting and standing, should be stretched full length. The head should be thrown neither forward nor back, but carried on it straightline with the spinal column.

Unless posture is perfect there is muscle strain and the circulatory system is impeded in its work. The nervous system suffers, internal organs are displaced, stomach and intestines dragged down.

A simple rule is; keep the back straight with the natural inward curve at the waistline—you can't help but have a flat tummy when you do that—and see that the chest is expanded. Get over the habit of being a shallow breather. Feel your vitality. Keep the idea of posture in your mind.

Good appearance and grace of the human frame are produced by a combination of mental and physical powers.

Beauty .... By Helen Jameson

"Grace was in all her steps," wrote the poet. Ah, those were the days! "She walked in beauty like the night", sang another bard. If a poet were looking for inspiration these days he'd be hard put to find a lady who seems to float through the air, so light in her step, so beautiful is her body carried. The queenly pose was checked into the dust along with the doniestorrated, steel riveted corset. No doubt about it.

Too much and too easy transportation has robbed the American woman of graceful movement. She hasdone up in motor cars, buddies in over chairs. Unless she is keyed up about some special outdoor sport, she doesn't get enough exercise to keep the muscles of her back strong. She's flabby and slender, but there is lacking that specialty of carriage that imparts distinction.

Count 1,000 women as they pass you on the street and we don't expect you to do it—and you may find one who moves something about body balance, who has acquired graceful, beautiful movement. She is a rare bird. You won't find many of her. And she's seldom a member of the young fry. She is middle aged, got the habit of carrying herself upright early in her youth, when physical culture was a frenzy.

Watch the lovely girls at the fashion show, displaying smart frocks. Mummy plumped forward, head back, hips swaying. Very modern, oh, yes. But why? For

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

WEDDING RECEPTION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1 Please tell me whether it is very correct to have a Roman church wedding ceremony without a reception given either before or after the wedding?

2. Should all the invited guests have a formal invitation to the reception, or could just intimate friends be invited to the reception?

3. Should a member of the wedding party entertain the other members of the party?

4. If the husband is a member of the wedding party and the wedding party is entertained, is it correct for the wife to be invited also?

Ann.

1 Yes, it is entirely correct to have a formal church wedding ceremony without having a reception. As a matter of fact, many brides insist on doing this, insteas of having only the relished part of the occasion with no entry of the sandwich. And this, I must admit, is a pleasantly independent point of view about it. There is no reason in the world why a bride should feel that she must stretch her budget to the limit in order to include a reception, unless she really wishes to do so. It is obligatory.

2 Very often a small reception is given, and id it there may be invited only a very few guests, close relatives and a very few close friends.

3. This is often done, but it isn't taken for granted.

4. Yes, if the husband is a member of the wedding party, it isn't necessary that the wife also be invited to be a member of the party. But always, for the festivities that are attendant upon the wedding, the wife should always be included. Not to include her would be a serious breach of etiquette. The same thing is of course, true when the wife is a member of the wedding party and the husband isn't.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you please tell me the correct form and type of birth-announcements to send and how soon after the baby's birth they should be sent?

2. Is it correct for the family to send announcements to all the members of a club to which the father belongs?

O.

1. Birth-announcements are of two kinds, formal and informal. The formal kind are always correct, and always in the third person. For instance Mr. and Mrs. card, with the names engraved, and usually the address in the right hand lower corner. But it is not necessary, of course, to have the address on these cards. To this large card is attached the small baby-card, attached with a narrow white ribbon-bow. The name on the small card is the baby engraved, but may be written, if you wish. On the lower left corner of the card is the date of the birth. If the baby hasn't been named when the cards are sent out, you may write "Son" or "Daughter" on the card.

Informal cards are of great variety. The point to keep in mind when you are choosing one, is not to get a bizarre one, or a "stunt" one. The all-white card is considered far better taste than the "blue for boys, and pink for girls". Also try to get one with not too many spaces to be filled out. The only two facts about the baby that should be on the card are the name, and the date of birth. Don't get one with a space for the name of the hospital, and the weight of the baby. Have the card incline toward formality, rather than toward informality—it will show far better taste and social judgment.

2. If your father knows very well all of the members of the club, it will be quite proper to send these announcements to all the members. The cards sent to the married ladies should be addressed both to husband and wife.

SIDNEY B.Y.P.U. HOLDS MEETING

The meeting of Sidney B.Y.P.U. was held in the church with Doris Carter in charge. It opened with hymn 256. Mr. McNabb led in prayer. The secretary read the minutes and called the roll with 16 present. The business was discussed. Ralph Smith the treasurer took up the collection after which hymn 230 was sung.

The Scripture lesson taken from the 3rd chapter of Philippians, 1-15 verses was read by Ralph Smith. Mrs. Frederick gave a talk on her experience in the Christian life which the young people all appreciated. Dorothy Reid gave a reading. Gerald Irvin gave the topic. Hymn 358 was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. A contest was held group No. 3 winning.

Squinting isn't always due to glaring lights or defective vision; often it is nothing more than a bad habit. Eye shutters gradually close, horrid little creases appear, in course of time they develop into crowsfeet that are difficult to erase. Tissues are delicate around the eye crimp easily.

At first, the high lift will be a hard strain on the muscles, but if the exercise is done persistently day by day, the upswing and the slow lowering of the lights will be done with no frantic or breathless effort.

VACATIONS and HEALTH

By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES
Medical Authority and Chief Medical Director

EXERCISE AND REST

Swimming is excellent exercise for developing the body. Most people spend their holidays near some lake or stream, or the seashore, where they can indulge in this invigorating sport, which has been given added impetus by the interest taken in it by President Roosevelt.

Generally speaking, swimming is an art that must be acquired. It should be learned by everyone as early an age as possible. The ability to swim only a few strokes may be enough to save your life some day. Seldom do beginners know any ability to swim when suddenly immersed in deep water.. It is very dangerous, therefore, to push a person who may not be able to swim into deep water. If you do happen to be the victim of such a foolish "prank" and can't swim, don't get panicky and struggle and gulp a great quantity of water, but hold your breath and by gentle movements, keep the head above water.

Many swimming accidents could have been avoided if people had taken certain precautions before entering the water. For one thing, learn about the currents and tide. Never dive in unknown, shallow or rocky waters. Even in clear waters remember that a deep dive is often a dangerous dive.

Avoid weeds and undercurrents when swimming in the open. If you are swimming in a river and accidentally get into a bed of weeds, stop kicking and work with your hands. The current will usually let you through. If you are carried away by the current of a river, reject a spot down-stream on either bank and swim diagonally towards it. Never mind where you have left your clothes. Your life is more important.

If you are swimming in a rough sea, do not attempt to breast the waves. As each wave rises, swim through it and thus save yourself the buffeting that might cause insensibility.

When swimming in either pools or open water, investigate the cleanliness of the water. Many diseases are water-borne.,

Cramps

Cramps are spasmodic contractions of the muscles that are beyond the control of the individual and come without warning. They are a common cause of drownings. Don't swim at all less two hours after eating, never drink any cold beverages immediately before swimming, and never swim beyond your depth in very cold waters. Severe indigestion or cramps may result. Cramps also occur when the muscles are exhausted, and no person who may be tired or suffering from debility of any sort should go beyond his depth, or out of reach of assistance.

Over sixty per cent. of drownings occur in the four months from May to August, and nearly half of these fatalities are among men and boys under twenty-five years of age.

This is the eighth of a series of 13 articles on Vacations and Health. The ninth, on First Aid, will answer the question:

"What is a wise precaution before starting on your vacation? 2. How can bleeding from a cut injury be stopped? 3. What should be done for burns, dog bites, fractures and electric shock?

Don't overestimate your strength and swim far; unless you are accustomed by a long and a level-headed person who has been trained in life saving. It is also dangerous to go swimming alone or at night. Contrary to popular belief, a large percentage of drowning cases occur among people who are considered good swimmers.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

A new coiffure trick is to clip a little short bang along either side of the side parting, have it arranged in flat small shell curls.

The smartest coiffures make the head look small. They hug tightly to the skull, do not extend beyond the hair lines at the back, and reveal the ears.

A mass of curls or puffs at the back won't do. There must be a definite design, ringlets marching in a row, puffs in clusters, or ringlets and puffs grouped. It's all intricate but must look simple. Tresses are suggested to carry a gloss. Wave lines are wide and fluid.

If lines have already formed, be a wide-eyed girl, don't squint under any circumstances; if you do, you'll never get your lids ironed out. Dip in a tissue cream every night. Place the fine finger on the eyelid, close to the nose, sweep outward over the temples, come back underneath the eye to the starting point. Afterwards apply pads of gauze—heavy ones—that have been dipped in witch hazel.

BUY NOW and MAKE WORK!

EVERY DOLLAR you spend---yes, even for luxuries---means work for someone.

And work means wages---and wages spent means more work!

BUY NOW and MAKE WORK---because it's in your own interest. Values for many years may never be as great as at present.

Buy the things you want NOW if you have the money---regardless of whether or not they are luxuries.

It makes work!

If you want a new home
---build it NOW!

It makes work!

Don't hold back because of the foolish idea that it is not seemly to buy what you want.

By holding back and deferring buying you are fostering that very condition which you so much deplore.

If you have money to buy the things you want---

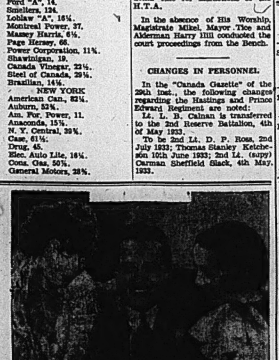
POLICE COURT

Florence Stapley, Dundas street, appeared in the police court, Magpay morning, charged with the theft of a gold watch from Louis Elliott. The young woman was not asked to plead but remanded, bail being provided, until Friday morning.

The Stapley girl was arrested today by Plainclothes Officer Sand, following the report of a watch being stolen from the Capitol Lunch, where Miss Stapley has been employed by Mr. Elliott, the proprietor. The young woman admitted, it is alleged by the police, taking the watch and selling the gold case to a local jeweller, keeping the inner works, which were found in her possession by Constable Hand following her arrest. The gold case was allegedly sold for the sum of $9.15 while the entire watch was reputed to be one of value. The jeweler was notified and efforts have been made to return the case of the watch to its original owner.

A resident of Sidney paid a ten dollar fine for infractions of the H.T.A.



In the absence of His Worship, Magistrate Mike Mayor, Tice and Alderman Jury Hill conducted the court proceedings from the Bench.

PUPPY LOVE

by Mona Sioux Scarberry

CHAPTER SIX

Mary closed her eyes tight and held tightly to the arms of the chair as she opened it. It was a relief to know he would propose her. She had often thought of his fine character. He loves me she was what was in it. Tommy always had her interests at heart. Even when they quarrelled. But of course they never had it long for the last one.

Excitedly she tore the letter open and looked at the signature first.

"Loving"—Your Own Tommy. Everything was all right then. Everything was all right. It was a brief note but it lightened Mary's heart.

"Dearest"—it began in Tommy's graphic scribble—"I'm saving my money for the way. I love you up here. But I don't see how I can wait much longer. I'm getting lonely. I'm getting so I go to a movie tonight. Or maybe out for a ride for a change. But I guess it's better to let bygones be bygones and not even talk about it. Loving You Own Tommy."

She kissed the letter again and again. Perhaps it was a relief to know they weren't going to hold a post-mortem on it. Darling Mary-way. It might be difficult to make Tommy understand. They had not got into the mire of misunderstanding all the time during the friendship of Curt Little, because they had been so engrossed that she had to realize that she had to live her life and that she couldn't settle down a chance to get a job and be a dancer.

She was thinking all this over when Freckle walked in. She saw Mary lying across the chair and began stirring starry eyed, she put her hands on her lips and shook her head incessantly.

"Just as I thought. Oh no, you're not in love with that sentimental, dumb gentleman," Virginia Lee Freckle was a little puppy love rash that broke out during your school days. Yeah. She, she.

Mary's face reddened.

"Oh, Gosh! My friends Bryan! Can't I be glad to see an old friend without being in love with him?"

"Sure, sure," Freckle nodded vigorously. "And now we'll think it over again. Maybe we'll go to New York to Asbie," with the kind permission of the copyright owners.

She lifted her skirt and did a burlesque of a dancing, singing and dancing with stiff legs.

"Hi, hi, yours truly is available in Asbie—Constance in Asbie—Hi, hi, yours truly is available—But I can't be true to you always."

Mary threw a pillow at her and she lifted her skirt and did a burlesque of a chorine singing in a high voice and dancing with stiff legs.

resulted for the telephone haughtily.

"If I had your brains I'd be bright. I'd feel as though I might be related to Little Lord Fauntleroy of his youthful share of gray matter."

Freckle stuck out her tongue at Mary and ran into the living room. But she eased over near the door to make sure she didn't miss a word of Mary's telephone.

"Hell, Tommy," Freckle could not suppress a grin at the tone of voice Mary used on Tommy in comparison to the night before. "Hope I didn't wake you up, honey."

There was a short pause and Mary said in an icy sweet sweet controlto::

"Comes over about 7.30 Tommy. I'll be awful awful glad to see you."

When Mary hung up Freckle said in a perfect imitation of her sweet tones:

"Oh, Mr. Little, I'm awful sorry I can't see you tonight—but I have to call on my invalid Aidenia. She's been took with an awful, awful case of anesthesia—I'll be glad to see you—not."

But Mary banged the bedroom door and started to get ready for bed. Freckle, a little irritated by Dear Mary might be really peeved, stayed up two hours to make sure she was asleep. Mary was sleeping the sleep of the innocent when Freckle turned in.

Freckle worked in the new picture the next day, but came home early. Mary was getting dinner in the kitchen and humming. Freckle rang. Freckle went, to answer it.

"I'll bet a dollar, Mary, that's Curt Little."

"Oh—no." Mary hoped he would not call and ask her to go out tonight. She had had a date with Tommy.

But in a second Freckle called from the bathroom.

"It's for you—" then in a sotto tone, "it is Mister Big."

"Oh, dear—" Mary took the phone with a worried little frown. "Hello, Mary Little,—I'm just cooking dinner, of course I can talk. Oh, that's wonderful. I love surprises....please tell me.... now.... Is it something about my job."

Mary hesitated and looked wildly at Freckle for help. She knew Curt Little wanted to see her if he did not see him that the rich of not getting the job. Freckle whispered to her desperately:

"Don't say no, you ego You must keep that job. Go ahead, I'll explain to Tommy."

Mary felt her future might hang in the balance—so she told him she'd be ready in half an hour. When she hung up Freckle said approvingly.

"Atta girl! For pity sake, what's a date with Tommy when Curt Little is going to tell you he has a job for you? I'm sure he is."

But Mary looked perplexed.

"I don't like to be so mean to Tommy. He—he doesn't know and I have to tell him—and—and I don't like to be so mean to him."

"Don't be a sil." Freckle said crisply. "Phone your dear Tommy and then get romantic under the California moon. Soon your dear Tommy, Virginia. But don't pass up a chance like Little. Tommy will stick around. You could always get him away with smallpox."

Tommy arrived not more than a half minute after Mary had ridden away in Curt Little's limousine. He was glad he had missed his rival. She was very much disappointed. She might have lost his head and swung into a few fall-outs.

There was such a look of glad anticipation on Tommy's handsome young face that Freckle's soft Irish heart ached when she faced the job of disillusioning him. It might be better to strike immediately, so Freckle's better self Tommy had a chance to say anything.

"Well, Tommy," she forced a grin and slapped him on the back, "you old land, I've got a terrible hole for you. Mary got a very important business call and had to go out. I don't know how long she will be gone—but until very late, I imagine."

Tommy opened his mouth to speak but Freckle rushed on with questions and the hang-dog look in his eyes.

"Mr. Little has found a job for Mary and she had to go see about Mary and she had to go see about it tonight—or so it said. You know how it is—a job can't wait. There are too many people looking for 'em. She was broom-hearted about it. She got just had to go."

When Freckle paused Tommy, rooted to the spot, nodded slowly, disappointment, bewilderment.

"I see—and me up here without a million dollars. Well, that's that," he shrugged—but his face was grey. "I'll be going."

Freckle twisted her hands behind her back. It was too much like seeing a little child beaten by a great big brute—and Tommy was little. Oh, stand there looking like that.—Oh, if there were only something she could do about it. Mary just had to go out with Curt Little.

She rose, not get up the chance for a job and security. Why must Tommy be so grand and wish him that he couldn't see it? Freckle decided to talk to him like Uncle Uncle She threw him into a chair.

"Listen Tommy, don't let a little thing like that get you down. Let's ask about a job but you up. Use your head. You've got your education to take care of herself. Why you're so much better with her you're going up all kinds of crazy things."

Tommy hung his head hopelessly.

"You don't understand. Miss Freckle. She's not like that really. And I'm sure an old man like that will so much prettier. You need out every night just because he wants to be a sweet sympathetic mourner. Come back tomorrow afternoon, tomorrow morning, and talk to Mary about it."

"Not much!" Tommy jammed his hat on into his head, setting bemuddled head and slumped down the stairs.

Freckle threw up her hands hopelessly. She thought that Mary had a thing about Tommy's threat to give her the air. She had felt quite certain he would be back.

"Such puppy love!"

CHAPTER SEVEN

Mary had a heartsick little feeling of treason when she drove away from the apartment with Curt Little, knowing how disappointed and angry Tommy would be when he found she had gone with Curt.

"We'll go out toward Coconanut Grove," Curt told the chauffeur. Then he turned to Mary. "I suppose you're not at all in a hurry to hear what the surprise is."

Mary sat on the edge of her seat and held her hands tightly together in her lap.

"I have to hold myself to keep from flying out on the window I'm so thrilled, Please," she coaxed with a pretty little pout, "don't tell me."

"I think I have found just the job for you," he told her then—and was non-plussed when she threw her arms around his neck.

"Oh Mr. Little. You angel! I'll never be able to repay you for bothering so much about me."

Curt's first impulse was to try to make love to Mary. Perhaps if he kissed her, she would think a response was expected of her and try to show her gratitude in that way. That might be the avenue through which he might work his revenge on her father.

But he stifled the impulse. He knew Mary's background and that she had been brought up by all the old Southern rules of chivalry where a woman's honor was more important than her life. If he planned that sort of revenge he could not go about it blindly.

From the innocent look of childish gratitude in Mary's big gray eyes he knew there had been no thought of coquetry when she had thrown her arms around him. He might just as well have been an old decrepit grandfather who had given her a stick of peppermint candy. He must not shock her or she would shrink from him and all his plans would go awry before they were half hatched.

So, when with an excited little gurgle of laughter Mary took her hands from around his neck and dropped them in her lap with a happy sigh, he tilted her chin in a fatherly gesture.

"You're a sweet child, little Mary. I'm glad I can help you. You've a very little girl if you're way out to California alone. I think you'll like what I've planned for you.

"Perhaps you've never heard of Madame Claire Dumas. She's one of the best known couturiers in Hollywood. By a streak of good fortune she happens to be a very good friend of mine. I've had her costume several of my picture start.

"Tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock," he handed Mary a card, "take this and go to her shop. She expects you. There is an opening for a small model and if you please her the job is yours. I've no doubt you will."

Mary was almost in tears of gratitude.

"A model! Oh, I think I'd die with happiness wearing all those beautiful clothes and really being a model. I've wanted to be a mannikin all my life. But I thought I was much too small. Aren't they almost always tall?"

"Madame Dumas always has one little girl model. She's assured her hastily. "It is rare for a tiny girl like you to model. But several of the models have ate polite and she needs one girl to show things off on small figures."

Curt Little smiled inwardly—and outwardly.

"If she isn't afraid of the competition. You're so clever at her own game she may be afraid you'll surpass her and set up shop for herself after she gives you a start.

"Won't I just?" Mary said confidently. "I'll work and work and study so hard I'll have my own place in Paris some day."

Curt laughed with relish.

"Now, don't be unpatriotic. Why can't you be content to be kingdom of the world to the United States, Madame Mary?"

The dear child! Again it seemed almost impossible to hate her. So often he had to review all the years of his misery to make himself remember that she was an enemy that was to be destroyed so that her father would suffer as he had suffered.

"Madame Sawyer." Mary looked up thoughtfully. "That won't do. That's old-fashioned and American. Everyone in the style business has to sound French. Help me think up a good noom de plume. Would it not be fun?"

"Well, I wouldn't hurry about it. I've told Madame Dumas your name was Sawyer, so you had better keep your own game for a while."

Mary wrinkled her little nose cutely:

LUMBER MILL IS DESTROYED

Thirty Five Thousand Dollar Loss at Baptiste Lake

Bancroft, July 31—Fire completely wiped out the Bailey-Martin lumber mill at Baptiste Lake a few days ago. The plant was in operation up until two weeks ago, when the company having finished cutting operations.

However, grading lumber for the wholesale trade necessitated the operation of the planer and it was from this source that the fire originated, cleaning out the entire plant and a quantity of lumber in the course of manufacture.

Every available man assisted in preventing the spread of the flames to the nearby lumber yard where hundreds of thousands of feet of lumber is piled awaiting a market.

The destruction of the mill and other property is not only a heavy loss to the company, but a distinct loss to the community, as many men found lucrative employment in the mill and woods, which kept the manufacture of lumber in its various stages with the Bailey-Martin Lumber Co.

The mill and equipment together with about 30,000 feet of lumber in the course of manufacture is a total loss, roughly estimated at $35,000.

The local girls' softball team is still climbing the ladder of fame. Wednesday night's thirty-five fans accompanied the team to Latta. Hilda Haggerty pitched one of her best games with only one walk. The game was quite interesting to the spectators from start to finish as it was a tie until the fifth inning. Mona Wright created a sensation among the onlookers when she knocked a three-base hit when all bases were filled. However after the Latta girls disagreed and then scored several runs among themselves, the teams continued to play the seven innings despite the protest of the fans. At the beginning of the sixth inning Mona Horton made a home run with one on. Then Latta ran with one on. Then Latta weakened owing to proper softball spirit and West Huntingdon took full advantage of their opponents played like troopers and brought home the game in the last inning. Some stars were also on the Latta team. Trading them were Miss Hall on third and also the centre fielder who got both tough some catchy fly balls. A home run was made by F. Sills. The score finally stood at 22 to 11 in favor of West Huntingdon.

EMBARK ON A NEW CAMPAIGN

Mahatma Gandhi Dissolves Sabarmati Ashram Independently

Ahmedabad, July 31.—(AP)—With the dissolution of his college of degrees at Sabarmati tomorrow, the Mahatma Gandhi will embark on a new civil disobedience movement in which individual acts will emphasize a mass campaign for Indian independence.

Thirty two members of the Seminary will begin a march to Ras village in Kaira district to invite villagers to participate in the movement.

Among the marchers will be Mme. Gandhi and 16 other women.

The Mahatma said dissolution of the Ashram, or college, was necessary because it was the most precious thing on earth to him and since hundreds of thousands had lost everything in their struggle for independence, it devolved on him and members of the Ashram to make a sacrifice before starting a new "sacred mission."

Statement Issued

A statement addressed alike to members of the Indian National Congress and the British people was issued by the Mahatma today.

"If the programme is zealously worked out, the Congress will become more powerful than ever" he said in the part addressed to the party."

In the section for the British he said:

"If you want peace in India, rule by co-operation is not the way. The Congress way is the only way.

"To-day this is a friend of the English people. Some of you may regard me as an enemy, but I apologize that the mists will one day roll away, and you admit my claim."

The Congress party, sponsor of the former civil disobedience movement, at a recent convention authorized Gandhi to treat with the Viceroy, Lord Willingdon for peace, but request for an interview was denied unless the Mahatma suspended unconditionally the passive campaign.

GERMANY'S REQUEST DENIED BY COURT

Had Asked Temporary Injunction Over Polish Land Reform

The Hague, July 29 (AP)— The Permanent Court of International Justice today denied the German Government's request for interim measures of protection in connection with the application of the Polish Government's agrarian measures to the German minority in Poland.

Germany had asked a temporary injunction to protect German landowners in Poland against allegedly discriminatory land reform measures. The Berlin Government went to the World Court after fruitless negotiations with Warsaw.

RAIL PICK-UP IS EXTENDED

Freight Handling Plan Now Covers New Sections

Montreal, Que., July 31—Further extension of the freight pick-up and delivery service, inaugurated in March last by the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways will become effective on August first, it was announced jointly by George Stephen, Vice-President in charge of traffic, Canadian Pacific Railway, and Alistair Fraser, K.C., acting Traffic Vice-President of the Canadian National System. The railways jointly introduced door-to-door pick-up and delivery of freight shipments as an experimental measure between Western Ontario towns and cities in March last. This experiment has since been extended to shipments between Montreal and Toronto and tariffs now published and effective August 1st provide for a further extension of this service to towns and cities north and west of Toronto in Ontario, as far as Parry Sound and Scotia Junction. The door to door consignment system, providing better service to shippers and consignees without any additional cost has proved popular since its inception and the present extension is a continuation of the experiment on which the Railways have conducted by using Carload facilities already in existence and without involving the organization of any new facilities.

Piles Go Quick

Itching, bleeding or protruding piles go quickly and don't come back, if you really remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the lower bowel and hemorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak, flabby, almost dead. Salves and suppositories fail because they do internal medicine that stimulates the circulation and drives out the impure blood can actually correct the cause of piles. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it in 1000 cases with success in over 900 cases, he named it HEMROID. J. S. McKeown and druggists in this district sell HEMROID Tablets with guarantee they will end your Pile misery or money back.

Brome grass, Western Rye grass, and crested wheat grass are the three perennial grasses most suited to the prairies. Meadow Fescue is a fairly good grass in the red River Valley but is not suitable anywhere in the province elsewhere.

ROYALTY OF YEARS AGO HAS NOTHING ON THE MODERN FAMILY

"The family with an average income today lives on a higher scale than Royalty did a century ago," according to J. V. Doyle of Doyle's Drug Store, dealer for Westinghouse electric refrigerators.

"One of the important appliances, which eliminates long hours of tedious work for the housewife and results in the higher scale of living for the entire family, is the electric refrigerator," continued Mr. Doyle. "The modern electric refrigerator gives efficient food preservation, more leisure time, more freedom from worry and fatigue for the housewife.

"The company I represent has been one of the leaders in the development of the present electric refrigerator," local Westinghouse representative explained. "The name Westinghouse has stood for research, pioneering and quality, and when they decided to manufacture refrigerators, they decided that the refrigerator they would make should not only preserve food efficiently and dependably, but should also give the housewife real convenience features which would help to do her kitchen work more easily and economically.

"Right from its tiny city the results of this pioneering have been made manifest. Scientific research in this community already enjoys the convenience and economy of Westinghouse refrigeration. As a result they enjoy more efficient food preservation, more leisure time, and more freedom from worry and fatigue than they ever thought possible for they use one of the most important of all conveniences which science and electricity have made possible," the local merchant concluded.
